ITALY FLAUNTS MAILED FIST IN GERMANY'S FACE

"Flag May Go North of Tyrol."

BULLETIN.

LONDON, Feb. 6.—(U. P.)—The Exchange Telegraph's Vienna correspondent tonight reported the Italians had expelled 34 German officials, teachers, and merchants from South Tyrol and further ejections were expected. The last German paper in South Tyrol, the Meraner Zeitung, has stopped publication and has been succeeded by a Fascist paper.

ROME, Feb. 6.—"A few days ago a Fascist paper carried a streamer, 'Fascist Italy will never lower the flag on Brenner.' I returned the paper to the editor with the following correction: 'Italy can, if necessary, carry its tricolor beyond the frontier, but never will lower it.'"

With these words Premier Mussolini today closed his speech in parliament, in which he announced that it could be considered a diplomatic and politic declaration of policy regarding the Tyrol. It was also looked upon as a stern warning to Germany.

Premier Mussolini's words were called forth by an interpellation by Sig. Farinacci concerning the German-Italian relations with reference to the speech made by Premier Held of Bavaria yesterday.

"Will Never Change Policy."

"Italy will never change its policy in the Tyrol. One the contrary, we will carry it out obstinately, methodically, and precisely," Sig. Mussolini said.

Speaking with that wealth of expression and oratorical power, which swept him into the premiership more than three years ago, the premier held the chamber and visitors in the galleries spellbound while he emphasized statements that fifteen years ago would have been tantamount to a declaration of war. Tumultuous applause greeted him from the galleries, as well as the floor, when he left the tribune. Then, as one man, the vast crowd burst into the first bars of the Fascist hymn.

"Want to Remain Frieds."

It was a remarkable demonstration of rejuvenated Italy, conscious of the power of its army, the Fascist militia, and struggling against the hand holding it in check—Italy eager for proof of its new born strength. An offer of friendship surrounded the spearheads of threats.

"We want to remain friends with Germany," declared Premier Mussolini.

Then, "If the Germans attempt a boycott, we will answer with boycotts squared. If Germany takes reprisals, we will answer with reprisals cubed."

Acted Kindly Toward Germany.

Premier Mussolini began his speech with a declaration that Italy had followed a policy of rapproachment toward Germany since the war, never had acted severely toward the defeated people, and always opposed violent measures toward Germany. Italy was the first to conclude a commercial treaty with Germany after the customs clauses of the Versailles treaty had lost their effect.

"Immediately after the signature of the Locarno treaties, as by command there sprang up a laughable, useless anti-Italian propaganda," he continued, "useless because it was headed by a complex known as admitted lies, and laughable because the Germans had the illusion that they would make an impression on young, proud Fascist Italy, which permits itself to be impressed by no one."

Sig. Mussolini denied the removal of the Walther statue and called the stories of bad treatment of tourists and the ban on Christmas trees in the Tyrol dumb, laughable lies.

Treated as Italian Citizens.

After quoting from the Bavarian premier's speech, he continued:

"I declare this speech simply unheard of. Unheard of from a diplomatic standpoint because there never was a South Tyrol problem. The upper Trentino problem was settled through the treaty of St. Germain with Austria. It is unheard of to speak of the brutal violence of the Fascist gov-

DUCHESS SLAIN BY HUSBAND, KIN OF FORMER QUEEN

[Copyright: 1926: By the New York Times.]

MADRID, Feb. 6.—Court circles in Spain were shocked today by the murder of the Duchess Maria Luisa of Sevilla by her husband, Lieut. Col. Francisco José Bourbon, who is believed to have acted while under a temporary aberration as the outcome of a domestic quarrel. Her 18 year old daughter and 14 year old son witnessed the shooting, which occurred yesterday evening in the Madrid home of the couple.

It is said that Col. Bourbon returned home last night and found his wife and family at dinner and became angry because they had not waited for him. After a short quarrel, the colonel drew a revolver and fired six shots into his wife's body, causing instant death. The couple were first cousins and made a love match in 1907.

Lieut. Col. Bourbon is a grandson of the Infante Enrique, brother of Francisco de Asis, who was the husband of Queen Isabella II. Through his mother he is related to the Cuban family of De La Torre. His father, Lieut. Gen. Francisco de Bourbon, was one of the leading members of the royal Bourbon-Anjou house. The colonel's brothers are the Duke of Sevilla, the Marquesses de Villamantilla de Perales, De Baldoa and De Squillace.

'Coolidge' to Be Name of Big New Hotel

Chicago's rapidly growing list of giant hotels will be increased by a huge 2,000 room structure which is to be called the Coolidge—in honor of the President. Milton Plotke of the firm of Plotke & Grosby, builders, has purchased the southeast corner of Wabash avenue and 7th street, on which site the Coolidge will be erected.

The new hotel is to be twenty-five stories in height and will cost about $5,000,000. It will be just behind the 3,000 room Hotel Stevens, now in course of construction on Michigan avenue between 7th and 8th streets, and diagonally across the street from the Blackstone.

Pays $1,000,000 for Site.

Mr. Plotke is reported as having paid in the neighborhood of $1,000,000 for the site, which measures 186½ feet on Wabash avenue and 172 feet on 7th street. The property was purchased from the estate of Byron L. Smith, late president of the Northern Trust company. It has been in the possession of the Smith family for forty-eight years.

It is planned to make the hotel a popular priced one. It will be leased to an outside corporation which operates a chain of hotels in other large American cities. The name of the lessee will be announced later. It is interesting to note that this will be the first time that outsiders have entered Chicago in the operation of any of the city's larger hotels. Up to this time all the large hotels here have been managed by Chicago men.

Entrance on Seventh Street.

The main entrance of the Coolidge will be on Seventh street. It will have a large convention hall on the second floor and the usual number of banquet halls, etc. But Mr. Plotke explains that it is designed primarily as a money maker, and so may lack some of the more elaborate features of its neighbors.

Notice has been served on the present occupants of the corner, the owners of the signboard concession and of a gasoline filling and parking station, so work is expected to start within sixty days. Completion is set for May, 1927.

Activity on Wabash Avenue.

The final details of the sale were consummated on Friday. Ward T. Huston was the broker for the Smith estate and Harry J. Powers Jr. was broker for the buyer. Col. Noble B. Judah handled the legal details for the sellers, while Irwin Grossman represented Mr. Plotke.

The new project calls attention once more to the great activity in the development of the southern section of Wabash avenue, which for years has been in a more or less quiescent state.

HEART BROKEN, RADIO ENGINEER SHOOTS HIMSELF

Leaving a farewell note to his mother, Benjamin Harrison Thayer, 36 years old, a radio engineer, shot himself last night in the head at his room in the Allerton club, 701 North Michigan avenue.

No one heard the shot and his body was not found until his brother-in-law, William Resnick, 721 East 88th place, came to the club to pay a belated visit. Thayer's body was in the middle of the floor, partially clad. A revolver lay within a few inches of his outstretched hand.

"Because of a broken heart I am tired of living and don't care to go any further," the note to his mother read. Resnick explained that he had been despondent since the death of his wife a year ago. Thayer had been employed by the Liberty Transformer company, 122 North Sangamon street, as a superintendent.

LIFE SAVED FROM SHOT BY BUCKLE IN BANDIT BATTLE

A belt buckle probably saved the life of Thomas Koroboff, 2808 Sheffield avenue, a restaurant keeper, who was shot at last night by a bandit after being held up in the hallway of his home.

Koroboff was entering when a voice in the darkness commanded him to throw up his hands. Instead he ducked and lunged at the robber dimly discernible in the vestibule. In the desperate struggle the bandit finally managed to snap the trigger of his revolver and a bullet cut off a button of Koroboff's coat as it glanced from the belt buckle.

Meanwhile neighbors called the Sheffield avenue police and Patrolmen Emil Boettcher and Edward Tierney arrived just in time to prevent the flight of Joseph Lentz, 30 years old, 23 South Morgan street, who had been badly battered by Koroboff.

50 RESCUED IN FIRE STARTED BY BOMB BLAST

Fifty colored residents of the upper floors of a three story tenement at 468-70 West Division street were carried to safety by firemen last night after a rapidly advancing blaze, which followed the explosion of a bomb, cut off the exits.

On the street level in the building are a delicatessen store and a meat market. The explosion blew out the windows of both places and scattered glass and bits of wood over the sidewalks. Angelo Falzone, 1108 Sedgwick street, owner of a butcher shop, asserted that he had no enemies and had received no threats. The proprietor of the other store was sought for questioning.

Fire Marshal Arthur Seyferlich took personal charge of the fight after a 4-11 alarm had been sounded. He estimated the damage at $25,000.

STILLMANS FIND HAPPINESS IN NEWHONEYMOON

Remain Secluded on Ocean Liner.

BY EDWARD J. BING.
[United Press Staff Correspondent.]
[Copyright 1926: By United Press.]

Aboard S. S. Olympic, Feb. 6.—James A. Stillman, former president of the National City bank of New York, and his wife, Anne Urquhart Stillman, are living anew a romance interrupted by years of dark litigation.

Seems a New Man.

The banker, whose voice was once mighty in the financial world, but who lost his high post as the result of scandal in his family affairs, seemed a new man today.

He was evidently pleased with the solution that his shattered romance had found and he appeared in the best of spirits as he talked with the United Press representative. The man seemed over night to have turned almost youthful. His eye was bright and his carriage vigorous.

He readily admitted his identity and declared he and Mrs. Stillman were going to Paris to visit their daughter, Mrs. Henry P. Davidson, but declined to say in so many words either that they were reconciled or were not.

Couple Is in Accord.

But actions spoke louder than words, and it was apparent that they were quite in accord as to what should be said and not said to the press.

After I had informed him that his presence aboard the liner was known, Stillman dropped his incognito with which he had hoped to shield himself from the inquisitive. His fellow travelers were ignorant of his presence, and even after he had abandoned his incognito, the liner personnel kept up the fiction that "Mr. Ben Swift" was the occupant of the ornate Louis XVI. suite, beyond which only a few doors down the passageway was "Miss Fuller"—in reality, Mrs. James A. Stillman.

Consulted with Wife.

The banker was dressing when I sought him out in his new quarters this afternoon for the second time in quest of more information as to the second honeymoon and what had led up to it.

He agreed to consult his wife immediately. Leaving me seated in his stateroom, Stillman, apparently in the most cheerful mood, hastened down the passageway to the quarters of "Miss Fuller" and a family counsel ensued.

He found that his wife shared his views that nothing in detail should be said at this time.

Withhold All Details.

He declared that he and Mrs. Stillman were in full agreement that they would refrain from giving details of their reconciliation. Mrs. Stillman herself would make no statements whatever, he said; while he declined to say anything of reports that their new honeymoon had as one of its foundations a full recognition by him of the paternity of Baby Guy Stillman.

Stillman declared that the passport upon which he sailed was genuine. He was anxious to avoid photographers, and felt relieved that thus far his fellow passengers with cameras were not aware of his presence aboard ship.

ENDS LONG LEGAL STRIFE

New York, Feb. 6.—[Special.]—James A. Stillman, the banker, and Anne U. Stillman, his wife, are on the liner Olympic, bound for France, reconciled and apparently happy together, after an unparalleled domestic warfare, which has dragged through the courts for six years and made "the Stillman case" notorious all over the world.

The banker took the initiative in making the peace. He succeeded finally in inducing his wife to resume their married life. They boarded the Olympic on Friday night with visitors' passes, but equipped with a husband and wife passport and with passage which had been taken for them by a friend.

Used Name of Fuller.

Stillman sailed in the stateroom of Benjamin E. Smith, a broker, who made arrangements for the secret departure. Mrs. Stillman occupied a

Slayer Ends Tragic Life of Russ Princess

MOSCOW, Feb. 6.—(AP)—Princess Obolensky, 23 years old, member of one of the oldest families in Russia, was found murdered today in the snow outside a bathhouse in one of Moscow's principal streets. Police say the murderer is the janitor of an adjacent house, and that he already has confessed his guilt.

Behind the crime is a story of one of the most pathetic tragedies of Russia's great social upheaval, going back to the revolution of 1917, before which the girl's family was one of the proudest of the czarist régime.

Deserted by Nurse.

When the bolsheviks seized power, it is said that the young princess' governess, in whose care she had been placed, deserted her and escaped abroad. Helpless, destitute and alone, the Princess Obolensky, several of whose relatives have found refuge in America, took shelter in one of Moscow's numerous night asylums for beggars.

Later she drifted into a life of the streets, seeking support from anyone who would give her food and lodging.

A TRAGIC HISTORY.

The misfortunes which befell the old nobility of Russia after the bolshevist revolution have weighed with a special severity on the princely house of Obolensky. A member of this house was governor general of Finland and another governor general of Petrograd [now Leningrad] during the last years of the czarist régime.

In May, 1924, a princess of this family, described as 24 years old and one of the most beautiful girls in Russia, was placed on trial charged with brigandage. She was said to have been the daughter of the late governor of Petrograd. The soviet authorities said then she had a long criminal record which included espionage and robbery and at least two years in jail.

Princess Fined as Thief.

Last July another Princess Obolensky, widow of the former prefect of police of Petrograd, was convicted of stealing jewelry from her maid and fined 100 francs. She pleaded that the jewelry was taken in a moment of dire necessity. She told of having been driven from her country, stripped of all her property, and how in two years she had lost her husband and son, who committed suicide through despair. Her husband, Prince Vladimir, committed suicide in Paris in February, 1924.

Among the Obolenskys who have come to America since the revolution are Prince Alexis, a singer, who has made two visits in recent years, and Prince Dimitry, who was in New York hunting for a job in 1923.

Married Astor Heiress.

Prince Serge Obolensky, brother of Prince Alexis, was married July 24, 1924, to Alice Astor, daughter of the late John Jacob Astor and his first wife, now Lady Ribblesdale, widow of the late baron. The wedding took place in London.

The house of Obolensky traced its ancestry to Rurik, one of three brothers to whom legend attributes the foundation of the Russian dynasty about 826 A. D.

NEAR RIOT AS HOUSE DECLINES WET CHALLENGE

Mellon to Request Volstead Changes.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Washington, D. C., Feb. 6.—[Special.]—The prohibition problem, fanned by the recent Church Temperance society questionnaire, flared up with unexpected vigor today in both chambers of congress, in the corridors of the capitol, and in the treasury department.

Unusual scenes of turbulence—which threatened to reach the personal encounter stage at least twice—marked discussion in the house. Debate was acrimonious in the extreme and at times the chamber appeared to be completely out of control.

Mellon to Ask Changes.

In addition to the legislative attention paid to the problem, it evoked a number of formal statements from legislators. It also was disclosed that Secretary Mellon is drafting a recommendation to congress urging the amendment of the Volstead act. Although the exact changes to be sought were not made known, it was stated on good authority that they include a new scale of penalties, graduated to make a penal distinction between the bootlegger and moonshiner and the ultimate consumer and hip flask toter.

While it is a foregone conclusion that the suggestions by Mr. Mellon will not include any for light wines and beer, wet leaders see in the program a chance to offer a number of amendments along that line which would bring the whole question to a showdown.

Developments of the Day.

Other important developments in the fight during the day included:

1. The house civil service committee decided to recommend passage of the so-called Cramton bill, placing the entire prohibition unit in the classified civil service. District administrators are not exempted in the measure; even Prohibition Commissioner James Jones, as an executive officer appointed under the prohibition act, may be included, it was said. The bill would give agents and others affected by its provisions six months to qualify in competitive tests for the posts they now hold.

2. Senator Smoot [Rep., Utah], introduced a bill proposing the reorganization of the prohibition unit into a bureau of prohibition, as suggested by Secretary of the Treasury Mellon and Assistant Secretary Andrews, in charge of liquor law enforcement. The bill would remove all liquor law enforcement duties from the commissioner of internal revenue and vest them in the secretary of the treasury, who in turn, would delegate them to the proposed commissioner of prohibition.

Representative Boylan [Dem., N. Y.], demanded immediate hearings on his four per cent beer and ten per cent wine bill, pending before the house judiciary committee.

Challenge Drys to Vote.

The move which created so much confusion and turmoil in the house followed a challenge to the drys to provide adequate funds for liquor law enforcement, a challenge which they refused by a vote of 110 to 8.

This decisive vote defeated the proposal of Representative John Philip Hill [Rep., Md.] to appropriate $14,994,000 for the purchase of 1,666 new coast guard cruisers as the backbone of a rum row blockade, which, he said, would provide one boat for every ten miles of the country's 16,660 mile coast line.

Provide for 35 Boats.

As finally passed, the deficiency appropriation allowed the coast guard $3,900,000 for the construction of thirty-five 125 foot patrol boats, to augment the present rum chasing fleet and which, it is hoped, may be placed in service before Sept. 1.

The vote came as a climax to nearly two hours of almost riotous debate, marked by shouts, jeers, and general pandemonium.

Colleagues interfered between Representatives Upshaw [Dem., Ga.] and Schaefer [Rep., Wis.], when it seemed they were about to settle the argument in a fist fight.

An error in calculation, Representative Hill said after the house had adjourned, led him to move for the appropriation of $14,994,000 for the purchase of the proposed 1,666 new cruisers, when in fact, at an estimated cost of $90,000 each, a total of $149,940,000 would be required to finance such a program.

He refused to correct the record, however, asserting that he would let it stand as evidence of the insincerity of dry demands for strict liquor law enforcement.

Furnish Two Surprises.

Representative Upshaw and Sabath [Dem., Ill.] furnished surprises early in the clash. The former leaped into the arena to second the Hill amendment while the latter opposed the proposal as one which "increases by five times the money now being spent to enforce an unenforcable law."

Dropping his crutches in his seat, Upshaw, a cripple, hobbled to the table before the speaker's dais to shout that "the day of miracles has not passed."

"When you find Philip Hill and myself voting on the same side," he almost screamed to be heard above the confusion, "the prohibition millenium is near at hand.

"I have believed for a long time that we have only been playing at this thing of stopping rum runners. I said two years ago that I believed in calling out the navy if necessary to put a halt to it.

"I want the fist of the United States to warn these foreigners that these cannot land their stuff in prohibition America."

"Does the gentleman believe hanging is too good for such men?" queried Representative Knutson [Rep., Minn.].

"I have always advocated sending them to the bottom of the sea in the shortest possible order," answered Mr. Upshaw. "I'd like to give them time to pray, however, because God knows they're not fit to die."

Sabath Draws Sharp Retort.

Mr. Sabath's denunciation of the Volstead act as the influence which is making drinkers of children and hip flask toters of young men and women drew a sharp retort from Representative Murphy [Rep., O.], who challenged any statement "that our young girlhood is not as clean and as wholesome as it was in the days of our mothers."

"Of all the contemptible arguments that have been put forth to try to justify the changing of this law," Mr. Murphy said, "that is the lowest and no part of hell is deep enough to contain it."

"As to that," retorted Mr. Sabath, "I will say that my reputation is just as good as that of the gentleman to whom I yielded.

Sentiment in Illinois.

"In my own state the voters favored modification by a vote of four to one several years ago and I think if a vote were to be taken today, not only in Illinois, but all over the country, it would be 10 to one."

"If Illinois feels so strongly as you "say it does," asked Representative Crisp [Dem., Ga.], "why not let the state petition the congress to amend the constitution by eliminating the 18th amendment? Wouldn't that be the best way to accomplish what you want?"

Representative Murphy denounced the report a few days ago of the Episcopal Church Temperance society, advocating modification, as the outburst of a single man, Dr. James Empringham, whose views did not meet with the approval, for instance, of a single Episcopalian member in congress.

In the midst of the confusion, Representative Schaefer [Rep., Wis.], became so emphatic in his argument with Mr. Upshaw, who was responding with equal vigor, over the attitude of labor toward modification that colleagues stepped between the two to avert a fist fight. So loud was the commotion on the floor that neither could be heard, and the incident was laughed off by the house.

Denies Surrender to Fanatics.

"Clear sighted and honest men, including the chief of the prohibition unit, Assistant Secretary Andrews," said Representative Boylan in his demand for consideration of his beer and wine bill, "admit prohibition has not been enforced. They even hint that enforcement will be impossible without an appropriation of appalling figures.

"Is congress, which invoked its great authority to enact this un-American law, so lacking in courage that it will surrender not only its prerogatives, but also the rights of 110,000,000 free people to the narrow dictates of a few well organized fanatics marshaled and captained by High Chief Fanatic Wayne B. Wheeler? I do not think so."

RAIL EMPLOYES ASK $38,405,080; UP TO U. S. BOARD

Wage increases to railway employés which will total $38,405,080 annually are being considered by the United States railway labor board, it was announced yesterday.

More than $28,000,000 of the increase is demanded by members of the Brotherhood of Maintenance of Way Employés on about 20 roads. Another $7,000,000 is asked by the Brotherhood of Railway and Steamship Clerks, freight handlers, and express station employés. Telegraphers demand an additional $1,000,000. Other crafts requested only small amounts.

Informed yesterday that the transportation brotherhoods were taking a vote to determine whether a strike should be called on the Texas and Pacific railroad, the board issued a formal notice calling on rail officials and employés to maintain the status quo.

READY TO "STOP AND GO" IN LOOP

DEVER TO SNAP ON STOP-GO LIGHTS TODAY

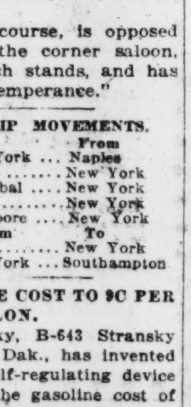
Mayor Dever at 8 o'clock this morning will throw a switch that will put into effect the new coördinated system of traffic control lights regulating all traffic in the loop. John T. Miller, commissioner of gas and electricity, completed final tests of the system yesterday and announced that it was in working order.

The system which will control traffic at forty-nine street intersections in the loop is the largest in the world. The system will be controlled from a board in the city hall, and traffic density will be reported every hour, so that the operator may regulate the flashes to meet the varying circumstances. The stop and go intervals will vary at different intersections.

Chief Collins has appealed to pedestrians in the loop to cross the streets with the traffic and not move when the flash is against them.

CARDINAL HAYES FAVORS MOVE TO MODIFY DRY ACT

New York, Feb. 6.—[Special.]—Returning from a visit to Rome, Cardinal Hayes today intimated his approval of the movement for some modification of absolute prohibition in the United States.



CARDINAL HAYES.

"You have got to avoid extremes," he told reporters. "The Catholic church always has stood for temperance. That is a fundamental, and you cannot get away from it.

"When the master himself, used wine at the last supper in instituting the Holy Sacrifice of the mass, it was testimony of his eternal love for mankind, and it is very difficult to avoid the evident conclusion from that.

"He might have used anything else, but he took wine. Are our children and young people to consider as something vile, as something outlawed, that which we must use, day after day in our worship at the Holy Sacrifice of the mass?

"Everybody, of course, is opposed to the abuses of the corner saloon. The Catholic church stands, and has always stood, for temperance."

Only Five Episcopal Bishops Favor Volstead Modification

New York, Feb. 6. — [Special.] — Twenty-four bishops and suffragan bishops of the Protestant Episcopal church have answered an inquiry from the New York Times as to whether they approve the change of policy of the Church Temperance society in favor of modifying the Volstead act. Five favored modification and nineteen announced their opposition to a change in the present law.

The questionnaire conducted by the Times asked whether "you approve or disapprove of the stand of the Church Temperance society favoring modification of the Volstead act?"

How They Line Up.

The bishops lined up as follows:

FOR MODIFICATION.

Bishop Frederick B. Howden, Albuquerque, N. M.
Bishop Cameron Mann, Orlando, Fla.
Bishop George Herbert Kinsolving, Austin, Tex.
Bishop A. C. A. Hall, Burlington, Vt.
Bishop John C. White, Springfield, Ill.

AGAINST MODIFICATION.

Bishop William T. Capers, Dallas, Tex.
Bishop J. P. Tylor, Fargo, N. D.
Suffragan Bishop W. Blair Roberts, Sioux Falls, S. D.
Suffragan Bishop S. M. Griswold, Chicago.
Bishop John C. Ward, Erie, Pa.
Bishop James R. Winchester, Little Rock, Ark.
Bishop Benjamin Brewster, Portland, Me.
Bishop E. Cecil Seaman, Amarillo, Tex.
Bishop Walter Taylor Sumner, Portland, Ore.
Bishop R. H. Mize, Salina, Kan.
Bishop Lewis W. Burton, Lexington, Ky.
Bishop Edwin S. Lines, Newark, N. J.
Bishop George A. Beecher, Hastings, Neb.
Bishop J. M. Francis, Indianapolis, Ind.
Bishop James E. Freeman, Washington, D. C.
Bishop J. H. Darlington, Harrisburg, Pa.
Bishop James Wise, Topeka, Kan.
Bishop P. Remington, Pendleton, Ore.

What the Bishops Think.

Some of the replies follow:

Bishop Lewis W. Burton—Terrible things have been attributed to prohibition which have had other causes and which would have been worse without the constitutional amendment. This is true of the behavior of young people. It is the extreme of the new freedom, and parents are reaping the harvest of the laxity, materialism, and irreligion they themselves have sown.

Bishop John C. White — I am heartily in favor of the report of the Church Temperance society, and their stand for a modification of the Volstead act. I do not believe that the present law can be really enforced without a standing army. It has become largely a great joke and a source of corruption of our young people and is a gold mine to bootleggers in every grade of our society.

Bishop J. M. Francis—I consider the action of the Church Temperance society ill advised and harmful in its effect. While I believe much more in temperance than in prohibition, I feel strongly that so long as the Volstead act is in effect the law should be obeyed. The Church Temperance society, which is a voluntary organization, does not and cannot speak for the church.

Rights of Individuals.

Bishop Cameron Mann—I have not seen the proposition of the Church Temperance society, but I am fully convinced that there should be very large modifications of the Volstead act. The rights of individuals and the welfare of the community require this.

Bishop George A. Beecher—I do not believe this action of the Church Temperance society represents the feeling of the majority of the members of the Episcopal church of the country. I did not vote for the Volstead law, but I would not vote to have it repealed. I disapprove of the principle of the modification of the act because I do not believe there is a middle ground.

Bishop A. C. A. Hall—While in favor of enforcement of existing laws I should be glad of a modification of the Volstead act. The Church Temperance society should consult its members.

Bishop R. H. Mize—I am wholly out of sympathy with statements of the Church Temperance society, which does not speak for the Episcopal church, and probably has no members in the west. The Episcopal church in these parts is whole hearted on the eighteenth amendment and the Volstead act. To modify the law would but open the way to further lawlessness. Most of us are glad to obey the law, and rejoice in the good influence upon our economic and social life.

Boy, 8, Killed by Motor Truck; Woman Slain; Toll Goes to 82

Four deaths yesterday increased the Cook county motor death toll for the year to 82.

LESTER GREISLER.

Lester Greisler, 8 years old, 1726 North Parkside avenue, was fatally injured when struck by a motor truck in an alley at the rear of 1714 North Central avenue. The boy, according to police, ran out of a vacant lot and into the path of the truck, driven by Jacob Ratt, 1626 Holt street.

Woman Killed; Driver Caught.

An unidentified woman, about 55 years old and poorly dressed, was killed when struck by an automobile driven by Oscar Gross, 1832 North Wood street. The accident occurred at West North and North Ashland avenues. According to witnesses, Gross attempted to escape, but was caught by a group of pedestrians. He was taken into custody by the West Chicago avenue police.

Vladislay Sulski, 35 years old, 4247 South Kedzie avenue, injured Friday night when an automobile in which he and a friend were riding, crashed into a trolley pole at 38th street and South Kedzie avenue, died in St. Anthony's hospital. Joseph Sowinski, 3848 South Kedzie avenue, driver of the car, said he ran into the pole when he was forced to make a sharp turn to avoid a collision with another auto.

Miss Gertrude Seeber, 26 years old, of Joliet, died at St. Joseph's hospital of injuries sustained Friday when the automobile in which she and three other persons were riding collided with a taxicab at Southport and Clybourn avenues. Joseph Borchardt, 4246 Wilcox avenue, driver of the car, was killed in the accident. Samuel Ucciardi, who drove the taxicab, was held by the police.

Stolen Car Hits Pedestrian.

A driver speeding in a stolen automobile struck and probably fatally injured Michael Malenos, 32 years old, 505 North Dearborn street, at Clark and Illinois streets. The driver abandoned the car a block away from the accident and escaped. Police found that the car had been stolen recently.

Explaining that he had been married only half an hour when arrested for speeding, Emanuel Levy, 3722 Pine Grove avenue, a druggist, was discharged by Judge Asa G. Adams. The judge agreed with Levy that a newly wed man was not responsible for his conduct the first hour of his marriage.

DOG SNAPS; CYCLIST THROWN.

"For MY VALENTINE"

Sunday, February 14th

Somewhere in this great city, or, perhaps, in one far distant, is a girl you love. You can see her now, as you read this.

The picture that frames itself in your mind may be of a girl to whom you have yet to confide your hopes and plans for the future.

Or it may be a picture of her who has cast her lot with yours, and shares alike your trials and your conquests—or of the girl who thrills you with a father's pride.

It may even be a picture of her who was young in the days gone by, whose twilight years are made happy by your companionship.

Whoever and wherever this girl may be, she will be in your thoughts on Valentine's Day.

And love will seek a messenger to convey an expression of its thoughtfulness.

For years and years Cupid has been able to suggest no finer token than a box of these delicious, old-fashioned, home-made candies.

And only Cupid knows the joy with which they are received, for he, alone, sits by her side when love's Valentine arrives.

As each pure, richly coated chocolate is lifted from the box he knows how far it will exceed her greatest expectations.

He knows how fascinated she will be as she discovers how almost endless is the variety—a piece for her every mood and taste.

Seek as you will you'll find no happier expression of your thoughtfulness, nor one that will live longer in her memory.

And should you desire to convey your gift in true Valentine style, beautiful red heart boxes—the prettiest we have ever seen—are available at very nominal cost.

But whatever your choice of a container, be sure that it carries to her the gift she will most gratefully receive.

For no girl was ever more deeply pleased than the girl whose hopes are fully realized with a generous box of Martha Washington Candies.

OLD DOC WHITNEY FLEES WRATH OF DUPED PATIENTS

Closes Up Shop for Day After Hearing Threat.

Threats on the life of Old Doc H. S. Whitney, 456 South State street, were made yesterday by two colored men who said they were former patients of the notorious quack. They called THE TRIBUNE on the telephone and shouted wildly that they were "going to cut up 'Ole Doc Whitney,'" and they invited reporters to be on hand for the sanguinary affray.

"He done the same to us that he did to that Polish man who stabbed him before," one of the Negroes shouted over the telephone. "We're goin' up and get him. Be sure and have your reporters around!"

The Polish man they referred to is John Bencal, 548 West Cullerton avenue, who sued Old Doc Whitney for $100,000 damages, charging through Attorney John A. Russell that the quack treated him for three years for a disease he never had, meantime robbing him of $1,600.

Old Doc Shuts Office.

Reporters were dispatched to watch. And incidentally Old Doc Whitney was warned.

"I—I—I'm much obliged to you," said Old Doc Whitney, and he hung up quickly. A few minutes later, it was learned, he closed up his office for the day and hurried away from the neighborhood of South State street.

THE TRIBUNE reporter who made the investigation of Old Doc Whitney and the slick methods by which he relieves his patients principally of their money, was the six foot one, 220 pounder, who had been pronounced an unusually healthy and virile specimen of young manhood.

OLD DOC WHITNEY

The report of his visit to the office of Old Doc Whitney follows:

I went to the office of Dr. H. S. Whitney, 456 South State street, at a quarter to six one evening. There were a number of patients there as I entered and I had to wait about thirty-five minutes in the reception room. Meantime patients kept coming and going. At one time there were thirteen besides myself in the waiting room. Among these were two colored women and four colored men.

Old Doc Whitney's waiting room is well appointed and prosperous looking. The walls were covered with pictures. All the furniture was mahogany, the chairs that lined the walls on three sides and a table in the center. On the table was a large, hand painted vase. A grandfather's clock ticked on one side of the room.

"Doctor" in Sweater on Guard.

All the patients eyed the walls stonily and looked uncomfortable. They seemed embarrassed. In the center of one side of the office was a door which opened into a long corridor at the end of which was Old Doc Whitney's private office, and along the side of which were doors leading to little treatment rooms. A fellow wearing a sweater coat kept going in and out of the private office door.

This fellow looked like a detective from the bureau, but Old Doc Whitney later addressed his as "doctor." It was he who called the patients into Whitney's office. Every now and then he would open the door and yell, "Next!" and some patient would jump up and go inside.

"I work in the Leiter stores across the street," I told Old Doc Whitney when I finally beat one of the other patients to that door on the call of "Next!" He had asked me how I happened to come to his office.

"I don't know that there's anything wrong with me, doctor," I continued; "but I ain't been feeling just right and I thought I'd find out."

The doctor came at once down to business.

Demands $3 for Examination.

"Well," he said, "I can give you an examination. That'll be $3."

There was a certain finality about what he said. I pulled the $3 out of my pocket and laid it down. He picked it up and put it in his pocket.

Old Doc Whitney is a large man and he is fat. He must weigh easily 250 pounds. He is quite baldheaded. He has a sharp, ferret-like face, and on his beak-like nose are tortoise shell nose glasses. He asked me a number of questions and wrote the answers down on a large blank form.

"Do you sleep and eat well?" he asked.

"Pretty fair," I replied.

"Have headaches or backaches?"

"Not often."

"Constipated?"

"A little—sometimes."

"Your work, young man; is it inside or outside?"

I pointed across the street at the Leiter stores: "Inside," I said; "in there all day."

"Ah-h-hhhh," said Old Doc Whitney. "No wonder you're not feeling just right. That's your trouble that inside work."

A Flashing Diamond.

As the Old Doc fills out the form he holds the little finger of his right hand poised peculiarly and on it is a large, flashing diamond. The stone must be three carats. It sparkles tremendously when Old Doc Whitney writes.

"Now," said Doc Whitney, "take your coat and vest off and strip to the waist and sit down there on that table."

I did so. He put the stethescope in his ears and started to move it slowly over my chest and heart, listening intently and looking grave. Finally with the stethescope still dangling from his ears, he started to tap-tap-tap me on the stomach, moving from spot to spot.

Suddenly Doc Whitney stuck out his hand to me.

"Squeeze my hand," he said; he wanted to try out my strength of grip. I squeezed slightly.

He told me to try it again. I'd put on just slightly more pressure, pretending I was doing my best. He gave it up. He shook his head. "Not very hard," he said. "You see? Your strength is waning."

"Just what is it, doc?" I asked.

"Well, I'll tell you, young man," Old Doc Whitney replied. "Yours is a case of autotoxemia. No-o-o-ooo, on the other hand, it's neurarchy with a basis of autotoxin. Due to that inside work your body is full of waste and rubbish and that's what we have to take out of you.

"You'll have to have quite a little treatment," he continued; and he picked up a pencil and wrote as he said it: "R 12 plus injections; static electricity and medicine.

"The price of this will be $46. We'll deduct the $3 you have already paid. How much more can you pay down?"

"I'd rather pay as I go along, doc," I said. "That would make it easier for me. Couldn't I do that, doc?"

"Well, yes, I guess so," he replied. "Let's see, you'll need about a month's treatment. Twice a week. Eight visits into $43—that will be about $5.50 a visit. Can you make that?"

I told him I thought I could all right, and he said:

"That's good, come back tomorrow for the first treatment. He rose as he said it, and the detective looking man with the sweater coat was on the job.

"Next!" he shouted; and I was ushered out.

Taking the Electric Treatment.

As I passed along the corridor on my way out I saw some of Old Doc Whitney's static electricity at work. The door of one of the little self-treatment rooms was open and in it sat a young colored girl and man. They sat on chairs slightly elevated on a platform. Over their heads hung a round steel band like a crown or halo. This almost but not quite touched their heads and the electric waves came from it and passed into them.

The two said no word, just sat there with the electricity running through them, and looking wearily ahead.

UNION MEN LAUNCH $550,000 BUILDING AND LOAN COMPANY

Chicago building trades officials yesterday announced the launching of the Illinois Federation corporation, a building and loan company capitalized at $550,000 and formed to encourage wage earners to own their own homes by helping them finance the building of them.

Ultimately the plan is to expand the organization until it is capitalized at approximately $10,000,000, ready to aid home seekers and to furnish capital for larger construction, the only stipulation of the union officials who control the company being that the construction be done on a 100 per cent union basis.

Charles M. Paulsen, president of Local No. 134 of the International Brotherhood of Electrical workers, has been selected president of the corporation and the executive committee is comprised of Patrick F. Sullivan, president of the Building Trades council; James J. Conroy, secretary-treasurer of the council; George Jones, general president of the Composition Roofers' international, and Edward J. Evans, vice president of the International Brotherhood of Electrical workers. Seventeen more union executives are to be selected for positions on the committee.

Professional Blood Seller's Death Is Found Natural

Following the death of Frank W. Schroeder, 50 years old, who had made a profession selling quantities of his blood for blood transfusions, his stepdaughter, Mrs. Clara Yount, 807 Bradley place, yesterday asked for a post-mortem examination. She said she believed that Schroeder's death was due to the fact that he was permitted to sell too much blood. Coroner's Physician Goodman performed a post mortem examination and found the cause of death to be bronchial pneumonia. There was nothing unusual about Schroeder's death, he said, and there will be no inquest.

L. A. PATTERSON, VETERAN OF CIVIL WAR, DIES AT 82

Lycurgus A. Patterson, 82 years old, a veteran of the civil war, died yesterday following a long illness at the National Soldiers' home in Milwaukee. Funeral services will be held at the home Tuesday afternoon at 1:30 p. m.

An interesting incident in Patterson's life occurred in 1910 when he met a cousin in Chicago whom he had never seen before. The cousin was the late Associate Justice Horace H. Lurton of the United States Supreme court. Conversation developed the fact that unknown to each other, they had fought on opposite sides during the war. Justice Lurton was a member of Morgan's confederate raiders. Patterson served throughout the war in the 101st Illinois Infantry.

Mr. Patterson is survived by a daughter, Emma B. Patterson, of 846 North Oak Park avenue, Oak Park.

CAROL READY TO REGAIN THRONE RIGHTS, REPORT

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

BUCHAREST, Roumania, Feb. 6.—Great excitement has been caused here by a report that former Crown Prince Carol has withdrawn his renunciation of the throne. The report spread soon after the appearance of two officials who have been with Prince Carol in Milan. According to reports the officials brought written declarations in which Carol declares his willingness to resume the crown prince's job and promises to quit working with the opposition parties for the destruction of the Bratiano party. Until today Carol had never agreed to support Premier Bratiano and his brother, on account of whose policies he gave up the throne.

Puts N. Y. Mop Budget at 15 Millions Yearly

New York, Feb. 6.—(AP)—Rigid enforcement of the prohibition law in New York state alone would cost the federal government $15,000,000 a year, United States Attorney Emory R. Buckner told the Lawyers' club today. One of his listeners was Wayne B. Wheeler, legal head of the National Anti-Saloon league.

WOMAN REPORTS BEING ATTACKED IN N. SIDE HOME

The residence section in the vicinity of Howard street and Sheridan road was thrown into excitement yesterday with the report that Mrs. William P. Culkin, 7021 Sheridan road, wife of a railway official, had been beaten and attacked by a Negro while alone in her home.

Capt. Patrick Gallery of Rogers Park police hurried to the Culkin apartment with detectives after receiving a telephone call from Mrs. Culkin. There he found a back window broken, the apartment somewhat disheveled and Mrs. Culkin in a state of hysteria. No trace of the attacker could be found.

"I was still in bed when I heard a crash in the kitchen," was Mrs. Culkin's story to Capt. Gallery. "I ran out to confront a large Negro. He grabbed me. I fought, but to no avail. He fled the way he had entered, through the kitchen window."

One unexplainable circumstance, according to police, was the fact that the window, apparently, had been broken from the inside, and that a doily upon a refrigerator nearby was undisturbed. Mrs. Culkin later secluded herself at the home of her mother, Mrs. Stephen H. Serris, 1245 Chase avenue, and declined to be interviewed.

NO PEDESTRIANS, NOT EVEN WALKS, FOR THIS SUBURB

Los Angeles, Cal., Feb. 6.—[Special.]—The theory that no pedestrians, only autoists, are expected in the fashionable new suburb called Brentwood Park received official sanction in the city hall today.

Councilman I. F. Hughes, representing the Brentwood Park territory, reported to the aldermen that the citizens of the new suburb want their streets paved without any sidewalks, curbs being set in flat against front lawns and every house to have its own auto driveway.

Hughes reported back to the 1,500 citizens of this section that the council will observe their "no pedestrian" platform and have the district paved accordingly. Brentwood Park is a section inside the city limits near Sawtelle and Santa Monica.

RAID GAMBLERS IN FASHIONABLE ST. GILES CLUB

The St. Giles club, said by the police to be Chicago's most fashionable gambling resort, in Suite 109 of the St. Giles apartment hotel, 3318 Sheridan road, was raided by four policemen from the Town Hall station early this morning. Eight men, including the keeper, Edward Slattery, were seized.

The prisoners, several of them in evening dress, were taken to the police station in the patrol wagon like the average prisoner, and were then locked up to be formally booked some time this morning.

Intangible But Potent

There are men of viewpoint so crassly materialistic, as to be moved not by sentiment, by ideals, nor by pride in achievement for its own sake. But Almer Coe & Company, in common with the mass of humanity, have believed that a professional pride in work (which in their case is scientific), the desire to excel, and the hope of merited praise, are factors, intangible but potent, upon which permanent successes are founded.

COOLIDGE GIVES U. S. NAVY CROSS TO CAPT. FRIED

Samaritans of Sea Also Get British Medals.

Washington, D. C., Feb. 6.—(AP)—President Coolidge today awarded the navy cross to Capt. George Fried, whose ship, the President Roosevelt, made the thrilling rescue of the crew of the British steamship Antinoe. The award comes with the following citation:

"For heroism and devotion to duty in the line of his profession while commanding the steamship President Roosevelt when that vessel was engaged in the rescue of the crew of the British steamship Antinoe during a hurricane.

"The seamanship, courage, and professional ability displayed during a long struggle with a violent gale, snow and ice, is of the highest order and in accordance with the best traditions of those men who go to sea."

Capt. Fried is a member of the naval reserve. He entered the navy in 1900 and in his first enlistment period reached the grade of chief quartermaster, a feat considered unusual by navy men. He retired to the naval reserve in 1916, but was called to active duty during the war, and his record for efficiency and seamanship is one of the best on file at the navy department.

GIVEN KING'S MEDALS

BY JOHN STEELE.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

[Copyright: 1926: By The Chicago Tribune.]

LONDON, Feb. 6.—Gold medals for saving life at sea, awarded by King George to the officers and men of the steamer President Roosevelt, were officially presented by Sir Philip Cunliffe-Lister in the dining room of the vessel at Southampton today. The presentation was a drama of color and contrast, sadness and hilarious joys.

When the President Roosevelt steamed up the harbor for the ceremony, on its way from Bremen to New York, whistles blew, horns tooted, sirens screamed, and men and women yelled and wept, and the flags of America and Britain waved. A huge banner covering the front of the pier said in one word what the English people think of these American sailormen—"Bravo."

A few hours later when the medals of Master at Arms Uno Witanen and Boatswain's Mate Ernest Heitman were given to Capt. Fried to preserve for their nearest kin, there was absolute silence. Referring to them, Capt. Fried said:

"Surely, God takes care of men who die as they did."

Shipmates to Honor Dead.

The shipmates, while at Bremen, had made a floral wreath and when they reach the spot were the two men were last seen struggling to save the lives of others they will throw the blossoms into the ocean.

Sir Philip in his address said he had a command from the king to give honor where honor was due. Capt. Fried replied that he and his men had done for the Antinoe's crew only what he knew they would in turn do for others.

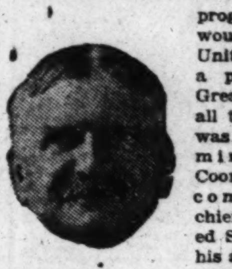
When the king's representatives informally greeted the heroic, embarrassed youths, who were lined up in front of him, shaking hands with each, there was one man missing. He was Fourth Officer Upton, who once saved the lives of forty men in Quiberon bay, off the coast of France, by diving repeatedly into the blazing ocean under the S. S. Florence, which was laden with 5,000 cases of explosives. For this he was awarded the highest life saving medal given by the United States government. He also received his medal today, but was too timid to appear and take it until his shipmates located his hiding place and brought him in.

When the President Roosevelt steamed away after the ceremony a solitary figure stood on the bridge, waving his cap to the crowd on the pier.

ADMIRAL COONTZ WANTS U. S. NAVY BRITAIN'S EQUAL

Would Have America Dominate Air.

Washington, D. C., Feb. 6.—[Special.]—Adoption of a naval building program which would put the United States on a parity with Great Britain in all types of ships was urged by Admiral R. E. Coontz, recently commander-in-chief of the United States fleet, in his annual report, which has been submited to the house naval affairs committee. Outstanding reports of his program call for:



ADMIRAL R. E. COONTZ.

Construction now of 8 light cruisers, twelve fleet submarines, two oilers, two destroyer tenders, and the completion of all the tonnage of aircraft carriers, allowed by the Washington treaty. Complete modernization of the six coal burning ships to make them modern in every respect, and the modernization of each of the other twelve ships as fast as they reach the age of ten years.

Wants U. S. to Dominate Air.

Retention of aviation as an integral part of the fleet and the building up of the navy's aviation strength to the point where the United States dominates the air.

Increase of the enlisted personnel by adding 10,000 men to the present authorized strength.

Admiral Coontz, in summing up the strength and weaknesses of the United States navy, asesrted that it is not second to none, as provided by the international agreement when the 5-5-3 ratio was adopted. He asserted that the navy is twenty-two 10,000-ton light cruisers short of British tonnage now built or building. In fleet submarines the United States lacks twenty-three in comparison with Japan, he said.

Fleet Weak in Auxiliaries.

The fleet's greatest single element of weakness, in the opinion of Admiral Coontz, lies in the slowness of its auxiliaries, which, he asserted, has a very bad effect by slowing down the operations of the fighting forces when used as a single unit.

Admiral Coontz pointed out a grave deficiency both in numbers of airplanes and in aviators. He declared that the "basis of operations" for aviation has changed from shore to fleet during the last year, and recommended that all the fleet auxiliaries, with the exception of minesweepers, hospital ships and ocean tugs, be fitted with catapults for launching airplanes, and the maximum number of airplanes.

RIBALD SONGS IN JURY ROOM TOLD BY WOMAN JUROR

Pittsburgh, Pa., Feb. 6.—[Special.]—That she was insulted by jeers and ribald songs and threatened with physical violence by fellow jurors during the greater part of the 18 hours she was in a juryroom of the Criminal court of Allegheny county, was charged by Mrs. Lulu Mosby, a clubwoman and active in politics, who was on the jury trying four Clairton policemen for felonious assault. Seven men and five women composed the jury.

While the argument was at its warmest, Mrs. Mosby said, one woman member of the jury sat on the lap of a male juror and placidly inhaled a cigaret while talking of matters far from pertaining to the case.

Epithets which would have been out of place in a bootleg saloon flew about the jury room as her antagonists sought to swerve her convictions, Mrs. Mosby said in registering her complaint against the present jury system.

1,000 Nash Employes Share in Profits of Stock's Boom

More than one thousand employés of the Nash Motor company in Kenosha have participated in the profits of the recent sensational rise in Nash stocks, it was learned yesterday.

The new gold coast of Kenosha, as Durkee avenue, where the Nash executives and employés have built rows of fine homes, is known, is celebrating and looking forward to new melons.

"I don't understand it myself," said Charles W. Nash, president of the company, when seen in Chicago last night.

"If any one should ask me whether the stock was worth this new price [latest quotations 640] I would say no. I have never speculated in the stock myself, although I knew it would go up when the 900 per cent dividend was declared. I did not want the stock to soar. I tried to stem the tide, even going in and selling 1,000 shares at a loss at one time to stop it. But I could not stop it.

Glad for Employés' Sake.

"I am glad the employés are in it, as I know what is back of the balance sheet. I know motor cars, not stocks.

"When I left General Motors to start this business I had a picture of a general stock ownership among employés. I wanted as many of them in as possible. But the bankers, Lee Higginson & Co., sold it out too quickly, so that many of the employés and many of my friends were left out. They have been coming in since then at every opportunity. The stock control is with my family and Lee Higginson. No manipulation of stock was possible. The public wanted it, that was all. I have built this business along conservative lines, getting ready for the inevitable automobile war."

Urged Friends to Buy at 80.

Years ago, when the stock was about 80 he urged his employés and friends to buy it. An investment of $1,000 at that time means a fortune of about $40,000 now.

While the prosperity has been scattered far down the line in the company force, about 55 or 60 of the officials and foremen, are said to have been chief beneficiaries. One officer has built an $185,000 house along the gold coast. There are more than a dozen fine mansions there. Many of the workmen have made enough to buy more modest homes.

In 1920 4,600 shares were owned by the employés. In 1922 a stock dividend was declared, giving three shares of preferred and four shares of common for each old share of common. The price that year fluctuated between 70 and 630.

900 Per Cent Stock Dividend.

The common stock has been paying $20 a year. Last month a 900 per cent dividend was declared, in which nine shares were given for every old share.

This increased the holdings to 2,730,000 shares. On Feb. 1 the preferred stock was retired. For the year ending Nov. 30 last the company earned $57.50 a share on the then capital stock. Last year the low price for the stock was 193⅛. The net profits of the company last year were over $16,000,000, with total assets of more than $51,000,000.

The company was organized in 1916 with 200,000 shares of preferred stock and 50,000 of common. In 1917 it produced 12,200 cars and trucks. Last year the company sold 93,000 cars and trucks.

'Adams' and 'Eves' in New Eden Omit Fig Leaf; Fined

GENEVA, Feb. 6.—[U. P.]—Twenty members of the "Garden of Eden lodge," a branch of the sun cult, were fined today for celebrating Pentecost services minus clothing. In imposing the fines—$8 each for women and $16 each for men—the court suggested that the original inhabitants of the Garden of Eden donned fig leaves, while the new "Adams" and "Eves" neglected even this.

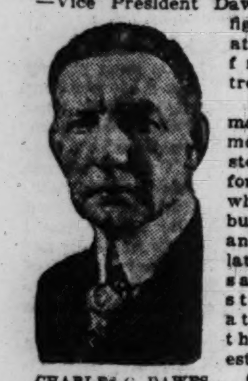
DAWES OFFERS COMPROMISE ON RULES REFORM

Willing to Take Limited Cloture by Majority.

BY JAMES O'DONNELL BENNETT.
[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Philadelphia, Pa., Feb. 6.—[Special.]—Vice President Dawes carried his fight against senate rules to the front line trenches tonight.



CHARLES G. DAWES.

He now demands "some immediate forward step" in the reform of the rules which enable filibusterers to delay and imperil legislation, and he says that this step is "desperately needed in the public interest."

Gen. Dawes' hearers were another group of business men—his favorite kind of audience—and it was the most significant group he has addressed since his sensational talk before "the solid men of Boston" last April, a talk he wound up by dragging Senator Butler of Massachusetts to his feet as a convert to senate reform.

Proposes a Compromise.

The Manufacturers' club of Philadelphia was the Vice President's host this evening, and to that body he proposed a compromise in order to get a measure of immediate reform. His proposal is that when tax and appropriation bills are before the senate the lid shall be clamped on filibustering, not by a two-thirds vote, but by merely a majority vote. Cheers greeted the proposal.

"Tax and appropriation bills," said the Vice President, "are purely business measures and the country must realize by this time that without a cloture by a majority vote a minority of one-third has the power to block a tax bill. It must realize that if minority obstructionists are determined enough and numerous enough they can indefinitely delay a measure like tax reduction."

The fact that during Thursday's six hour session the senate gave only 32 minutes to actual work on the pending tax bill so angered Gen. Dawes that his remarks this evening were uttered with violent emphasis.

Question of Rights.

"Which," he shouted, "is the greater right—the right of a senator to prolong debate for purposes of obstruction, or the right of the American people to have their business settled as the constitution provides?

"But let the people make no mistake about this—the majority of the senate, unless it be a two-thirds majority, is practically powerless as long as a filibustering minority can physically hold out. Just as long as that minority can unduly and frivolously prolong talk, just so long the interests of the American people will be subordinated."

Such antics, he said, had, during the last eight sessions of congress, compelled the President of the United States seven times to call an extra session of congress, "in order," as the Vice President put it, "to keep the machinery of the government in functioning activity. And he was compelled so to do by individuals or minorities."

The Thought Enrages Dawes.

The thought so enraged the general that he released another of his rhetorical queries, asking:

"Which is the more important right—the right of unlimited talk by a minority or the right of the American people to have a majority of the senate perform its constitutional duty?"

He answered his question by submitting his idea of the kind of government he supposed he was living under.

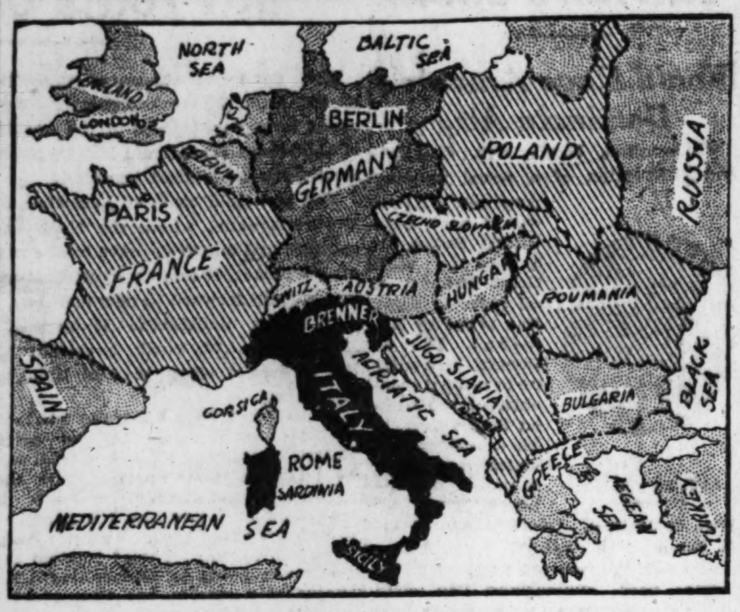
"We are supposed," he said, "to live in a government of majority rights, with constitutional limitations, not under a government of senate rules, limiting constitutional majority rights."

Public Partly to Blame.

Gen. Dawes blamed the public for part of its troubles with the senate, saying that "public ignorance" of the archaic senate situation is "the curtain behind which the minority works its will."

He appealed to the south—the new south—not to fear majority rule in the senate lets something be put over on it in the way of a force bill, for, he added, the new south is a business south and vitally concerned with a reform that will insure decent business methods in the United States senate for urgent business matters.

EUROPE'S SORE FOOT



Europe is once more busily engaged in making alliances and suspecting various members of its family.

Premier Mussolini, Italy's dictator, warned Germany yesterday in language that fifteen years ago would have been tantamount to a declaration of war that it must stop agitation about the Italianization of Tyrol. This district was awarded to Italy after the world war. A Fascist newspaper openly stated that France may have to fight Italy, and anyway it would be better for France to give some or all her colonies to the Italians.

France, seeing a breakup of its allies, the little entente—Jugo-Slavia, Czecho-Slovakia, and Roumania, with Poland as a working partner—is seeking a new alignment. France now seeks to bring Jugo-Slavia and Greece under her leadership in order to strengthen her interests in the Mediterranean. France also is worried by the talk of an Anglo-Italian alliance.

Benton, Ill., Feb. 6.—[Special.]—Bandits blew the safe in the postoffice at Buckner today. George Doctorman heard the blast and went to the scene. He was attacked by four men, who struck him on the head with a gun and ordered him away while they escaped in a car. Stamps to the amount of $300 were taken

PARENTS LOSE SCHOOL 'STRIKE' ON JUNIOR HIGH

A "strike" called by parents of eighty midyear graduates of the Le Moyne school, 851 Waveland avenue, to protest their assignment to Stockton junior high instead of Lakeview high school, is expected to end tomorrow.

This was indicated yesterday after a committee failed in a final appeal to school officials to change the order. Supt. William McAndrew told them they would either have to conform to it or be subject to arrest under the compulsory education law.

"We think we have been treated unfairly," said Mrs. J. C. Kryger, 751 Bittersweet place, leader of the strikers. "But there is nothing more to do."

The parents, with the aid of Alds. C. F. Nelson [46th], J. J. Hoellen [47th], and Francis L. Boutell [48th], have taken their case unsuccessfully to practically every member of the board of education, who say facilities at Stockton are satisfactory while Lakeview is overcrowded.

Boy Shot to Death as Pair Plays with Gun

James Scotti, 13 years old, 7256 South California avenue, was fatally wounded yesterday afternoon when a shotgun in the hands of his 15 year old playmate, Joseph Petone of 945 Polk street, was accidentally discharged. After borrowing the gun from an uncle of James, the two lads went into a nearby prarie to shoot. The younger boy was placing a target against a haystack when Joseph, who was holding the gun, tripped and touched the trigger.

MAILED FIST OF ITALY SHAKEN IN GERMANY'S FACE

Flag May Go North to Tyrol—Mussolini.

ernment in upper Trentino. We follow an Italianistic policy there. We treat the residents as Italian citizens and apply our laws. If we did not we would have a state within a state within our frontiers.

"That which Roman and Latin Italy does is nothing in comparison with other states. Today in Czecho-Slovakia a law became effective by which the Czech government can seize offices of German papers which have protested against the tyranny of the Czech republic."

The campaign within Germany, Premier Mussolini asserted, is due to the ignorance of the size of Italy and strength of its moral spirit. The Germans have not recognized the strength of the traditions behind the Fascist movement.

"Will Not Change Policy."

"But, however this may be, I must precisely declare that the Italian policy in the Tyrol will not change by a centimeter," he continued. "We will apply the laws already voted, or to be voted in the future, in a most accurate, methodical and obstinate manner. We will make this territory Italian because it is Italian geographically and historically. I can say of the Brenner frontier that it is a frontier drawn by the unerring hand of God.

"The Germans in this territory form no national minority, but only an ethnic residue. They number only 180,000, while in Czecho-Slovakia there are 3,500,000 Germans to 5,000,000 Czechs. I assert that of the 180,000 in Tyrol, most are Germanized Italians whom we will attempt to absorb and let them find old Italian names, so they can be proud to be citizens of the great Italian fatherland. The others are a residue of the barbarian invasions when Italy was the battlefield for the other powers. For these we will apply the Roman policy of strict justice.

"A Diplomatic Declaration."

"We say to the German people that the Fascist people will be a just friend with you, but a friend that looks you in the eye, a friend with lifted hands.

"My speech must be considered a political and diplomatic declaration of policy. I hope it will be heard by those who will hear it in a manner that the Italian government will not be forced to make concrete answers, as it will if tomorrow the German government does not accept direct responsibility for everything that has occurred and could occur in Germany."

Sees France as Possible Foe.

ROME, Feb. 6.—(AP)—The extreme Fascist newspaper L'Impero publishes a remarkable editorial declaring that France must reduce the extent of her colonial possessions.

"There are two war time possibilities," the paper says. "Either France will war against Italy or France will be allied with Italy in a war against a common enemy.

"In the first case, France would be unable to use her colonial reserves because Italy would cut them off by naval action and France would be forced to abandon them partially or totally.

"In the second case, France would have to give in friendly fashion, and in advance, to Italy a good part of her African and Asiatic possessions which are already hastening toward rebellion."

France Seeks New Allies.
[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

ATHENS, Feb. 6.—France, foreseeing a dissolution of the little entente after the Locarno treaties are put into effect, is trying to bring under its leadership and influence a group of nations among which are Jugo-Slavia and Greece. Also foreseeing the growing friendship of Italy and Greece and that the Serb-Greek tension continues, it is offering propositions to solve in a friendly way the Serb-Greek differences.

With the failure of the French suggestion that the Guevgueli-Saloniki line be administered by the French, it now proposes to control this line by a special commission appointed by the league of nations, with a French president and two advisers, one Greek and one Serbian.

Comte de Chambrun, French minister to Athens, who at present is in Paris, insists upon the need of a swift arrangement of the Greco-Serb differences. On his way back he will stop in Belgrade to confer with the Serbians on the matter. English circles here are watching the French activity anxiously.

ROB GRAVE OF VILLA "TO SEND SKULL TO U. S."

Chihuahua City, Mexico, Feb. 6.—(AP)—The body of Francisco Villa, the late bandit chief, was exhumed and decapitated last night by a band of five men, reports from Parral say. The headless skeleton was found near the grave this morning. Nearby was a note saying the head would be sent to Columbus, N. M., which was raided by Villa's bandit band about ten years ago. Villa was slain by some of his erstwhile followers in 1923 and was buried in Parral.

DETENTION HOME FOR WOMEN IS HELD IMPERATIVE

Erection of or provisions for a detention home for women, before construction of five new police stations is undertaken, is asked by Miss Jessie F. Binford, director of the Juvenile Protective association, and Adena Miller Rich, vice president of the Illinois League of Women Voters, in a letter received by Mayor Dever and Corporation Counsel Francis X. Busch yesterday.

They recommend that the city take the old quarters of the juvenile detention home, 771 Gilpin place, which have been offered by the county board and which can be remodeled to accommodate all of the women prisoners arrested in Chicago, for $75,000. The cost of the five new police stations will be approximately $378,000.

"Chicago has not improved her facilities for caring for the thousands of women and girls arrested each year," the statement says. "They are still held in scattering stations under conditions which result in demoralization."

ARCHBISHOP NOT REBEL, MEXICAN CATHOLICS SAY

[Copyright: 1926: By the New York Times.]

Mexico City, Feb. 6.—Catholics of Mexico are awaiting the action of the Mexican courts against Archbishop José Mora del Rio. The Catholics say the statement of the archbishop was not a crime, as freedom of speech is guaranteed by the constitution.

"They cannot justify legal action, and we Catholics are not willing to consent to such action," they say.

The leader of the Catholic societies says the statement was a right of the archbishop, and not a crime; that it was opposition, not rebellion.

STILLMANS FIND HAPPINESS ON NEW HONEYMOON

stateroom which had been engaged in the name of Miss Henrietta Fuller.

The world's most notorious marital battle was apparently ended forever. After six years of relentless fighting, during which each hired famous lawyers to attack each other's character with unlimited invective, the husband and wife found themselves just where they were at the beginning, except for the hundreds of thousands of dollars poured into the pockets of lawyers, the irreparable damage done to each other's reputations, the loss of social position inflicted on each other, and the scars of mind resulting from the humiliation and torture they had undergone.

This phase was touched in a hurried written statement left by the Stillmans before they sailed. In this Stillman conceded he had made a mistake in withdrawing from contact with the people during his divorce trials.

"I have almost a passion for dignity," he said, "and so, when news of my divorce action got out and I suddenly discovered myself the center of a horrible scandal, I withdrew into my shell."

Will Visit Psychologist.

Their plans for reconcilation include visit of Stillman to Dr. R. F. Bayne, young London psycho-analyst.

Mrs. Stillman is said to have been given strength to go through much of what she has endured through her consultation with the European psychologist, and for that reason wanted her husband to see him.

She believes that such a consultation will help the former banker rebuild his life and in a recent meeting with Stillman advised him to see the psychologist. Stillman is said to have agreed.

Dr. Bayne is now in Africa and until he returns to London the Stillmans will visit their daughter, Mrs. H. P. Davison, in Paris.

John E. Mack, counsel for Mrs. Stillman, said today that Mr. Stillman had taken several steps towards reconciliation in the last year. He formerly paid Mrs. Stillman her alimony and other allowances through the bank. Several months ago, however, he began to attend to this personally. This led to the writing of letters, cautious in tone, because of the possible use of such documents in further litigation which still threatened. Finally, the banker got to sending his wife messages through intermediaries.

"You are the only woman in the world, and nothing can fill the gap caused by your loss," was one of these indirect messages.

The legitimacy of Guy, which was attacked in Stillman's original action, was upheld in the courts, and now is fully recognized by the act of Mr. Stillman in resuming relations with Mrs. Stillman. Regardless of all other aspects of the case, this is a full confirmation of all that has taken place in the past and Stillman cannot reopen the question of the boy's paternity.

Guy Doesn't Grasp It.

Guy is 7 years old. He is at Mrs. Stillman's Canadian home at Grand Anse in charge of Miss Oliver, secretary to Mrs. Stillman. Speaking over the telephone from Grand Anse, near Grande Mere, Quebec, to the New York Times tonight, Miss Oliver said that Guy did not know what it was all about.

"I am very happy for anything that will be for the good of Mrs. Stillman," she said. "But Guy does not grasp the first thing about it. What does a boy of 7 years know of such things?

"I have known for two weeks or more that they were reconciled. Mrs. Stillman was up here, after the reconciliation, and told us that she was going abroad with her husband. She was very glad that it was all over. Guy is a very happy and healthy little boy, but these proceedings mean nothing to him."

Benjamin E. Smith, a broker, arranged the trip for his friend Mr. Stillman. Mr. Smith ordered two passages on the Olympic—one in his own name and one in the name of Henrietta Fuller.

These two tickets for separate staterooms were given by Mr. Smith to Stillman. In the meantime the banker was busy obtaining passports.

It was a curious coincidence that it was on the Olympic that Mrs. Stillman first learned nearly six years ago that her husband was starting an action for divorce. She was in her stateroom just before the Olympic sailed, late in July, 1920, when a process server arrived and handed her the papers in the suit which Stillman had started secretly in Westchester county, naming Fred Beauvais, the Indian guide of Mrs. Stillman's jaunts through Canada, and alleging that her infant son, Guy, was illegitimate and that Beauvais was the father.

Dreaded Further Suits.

Dread of further prolongation of the legal horrors which they had experienced was one reason for the reconciliation. Following her complete victory over her husband on every point raised by her suit, and after confirmation by the highest state courts of her victories, Mrs. Stillman started suit for divorce on her own account in September.

Moves towards a reconciliation were speeded by the suit of Mrs. Stillman, which threatened to add further sensational chapters to the scandal.

During the trial of the action in which Mrs. Stillman was defendant, she had not only forced admission from his counsel of Stillman's relations with Florence Leeds, but had threatened to name nine other co-respondents.

When Mrs. Stillman brought suit last fall he avoided answering the charges and began sending "feelers" through friends to see if there was any possibility that they could make it up.

Mrs. Stillman was willing to meet him half way, but she was advised that there was danger of jeopardizing her rights, if she took any action which might be interpreted as a legal condonation of his alleged offenses. Long and complicated negotiations went on through friends and neutrals, as the preliminaries to peace.

Peace seemed assured, when other advisers got the ear of Stillman. They counseled war. They insisted that he could still win. Like the seconds of a beaten fighter, they sent him back into the fray. He fought until the Court of Appeals delivered the final knockout blow by sustaining the lower courts in their findings against Stillman.

The suit started by Mrs. Stillman has never been withdrawn. Legally it is still pending, but her return to her husband condones and wipes out the past, and makes it impossible for her ever to prosecute the suit, even if the present reconciliation should prove short-lived.

It is eight years since the Stillmans lived together, though only six years since Stillman started suit for divorce.

At that time James A. Stillman had been married to the daughter of Mrs. James Brown Potter for 20 years. He had been elected to the presidency of one of the country's biggest banks.

Won on All Counts.

During the six years the litigation ran Mrs. Stillman was always successful. The referee refused Mr. Stillman a divorce, and sustained the legitimacy of Baby Guy. The appellate division and the court of appeals upheld the findings of the referee. The Appellate court, however, refused to pass on the legitimacy of the child.

Mrs. Stillman has been receiving $90,000 a year for maintenance.

The Stillman children are James, Alexander, and Anne and Guy. By recognizing Guy, James Stillman automatically concedes him his share of more than $1,250,000 in the trust fund left by Guy's grandfather, the late banker.

If the reconciliation is carried through it will dispose finally of a rumor that Mrs. Stillman planned to marry Fowler McCormick, 24, son of Harold F. McCormick of Chicago.

Mrs. Stillman and young McCormick had been seen together often while she was living here at the Hotel Plaza last autumn. He had been her guest at the Stillman hunting lodge at Grande Anse, Quebec, several times in the last two or three years and Mrs. Stillman had visited his family in Chicago on at least one occasion.

Fred Beauvais Laments.

Montreal, Que., Feb. 6.—[Special.]—While the Stillmans, reconciled, are on their way to Europe, Fred Beauvais, a puzzling figure in the spectacular case, is left lamenting. Fred feels he has been badly treated by every one concerned; by James Stillman and his lawyers on account of the accusation of paternity of Baby Guy, which he has always denied; by the newspapers, for calling him an Indian, whereas he claims descent from a French seignorial family, and by Mr. Stillman and her lawyers, for leaving his expense bill unpaid and repeating the accusation that he sold to James Stillman four fake love letters purporting to be written to him by her.

Not Interested, Flo Leeds Says.

West Palm Beach, Fla., Feb. 6.—[U. P.]—"There isn't much to say and, furthermore, I haven't any interest in the matter," was the comment of Flo Leeds tonight on the apparent reconciliation of James and Anne U. Stillman.

Miss Leeds was the former chorus girl who came into the Stillman case as a result of Stillman's alleged relations with her.

"He needs her worse than she needs him," Miss Leeds explained. "She is as capable of taking care of herself and her son as I am of taking care of myself and my son."

Miss Leeds is living quietly at Palm Beach, having come here from New York a short time ago. It is reported that Stillman made a settlement with Flo when he was in Palm Beach two months ago that will provide a luxurious livelihood for her during her lifetime.

REPORT STILLMANS SAIL TO GET EASY DIVORCE IN PARIS

New York, Feb. 6.—[Special.]—The New York Daily News gives this version of the Stillman affair:

"The gesture at reconciliation by Mrs. Anne U. Stillman and James A. Stillman was made for the purpose of fooling the public. That was the unqualified declaration today of persons in position to know. The actual purpose of the trip, it was emphatically stated, was to obtain an easy divorce in Paris.

"Ten days before Flo Leeds left for Florida, last December she was informed by Stillman of the proposed trip to obtain a divorce in Paris. The grounds upon which Mrs. Stillman will obtain her decree will be incompatibility of temper, Flo was told.

"Had Mrs. Stillman pursued her original intention of last October to seek a divorce in New York, she would have been compelled to charge Stillman with adultery and name Mrs. Leeds as co-respondent.

"At the first consultation between the Stillmans, it was learned today, Stillman agreed to let the case go undefended if trial of the suit was held in jurisdiction where the charge of adultery was not compulsory. It was then that Paris was decided upon."

NEW HONEYMOON NOT A SURPRISE, FOWLER SAYS

New York, Feb. 6.—(AP)—Reached by telephone at Mrs. Stillman's camp at Grande Anse, Quebec, Fowler McCormick of Chicago, an intimate friend of Mrs. Stillman, told the New York world tonight that the "second honeymoon" was no surprise to him.

Mr. McCormick, 28, the son of Harold F. McCormick, recently denied reports that he would marry Mrs. Stillman in the event of a divorce from her husband.

The Walnut Hepplewhite bedroom group pictured here has real beauty. It's not ornate. Its beauty lies in its simplicity of line and decoration. The burl overlays and insets of Paramaribo are just enough to set it off to the best advantage.

A bedroom furnished with these pieces would be very restful; not alone from the physical standpoint; they would lend an air of comfort and refinement that would prove restful to the mind as well.

COOK CO. SOLONS BEST AND WORST, IS L. V. L. REPORT

But Downstate Is Ahead in "Good" Legislators.

BY PARKE BROWN.

Cook county produces a higher percentage of the best class of legislators than downstate, but it also sends to Springfield a much higher ratio of the worst kind of lawmakers than do the rest of the counties.

This conclusion was manifest yesterday when most of the detailed survery of the records of members of the legislature whose terms expire this year was made public by the Legislative Voters' league. This included the records of all the downstaters and the senators and house members from ten of the nineteen districts in Cook. Reports on the other Cook districts are to be made public tomorrow.

Because there is no mathematical rating of performance by the league and since nine districts are missing from the published reports precise figures are not possible. But the facts available indicates that the observers would rate something less than 15 per cent of the assemblymen as "excellent."

Both Best and Worst.

It is in this class that Chicago and its immediate suburbs run ahead of the rest of the state. But, taking the opposite end of the scale, scrutiny of the report shows that about two-fifths of the men from Cook are graded as "poor," while down state only one-tenth fall so low.

Apparently the league holds that Cook and downstate run about neck and neck in the production of "fair" lawmakers. And where the downstaters leap into the lead for meritorious showing is in sending "good" men to Springfield. Almost half of the downstaters would fall into this class, the report indicates, if this system of grading were used precisely, and Cook could show only about one-fifth in this group.

Estimates in the report this year are not based so strongly as in past years upon a few outstanding roll calls on which the moral or economic issues constituted real tests. There was a lack of tests last session, due partly to the fact that Gov. Small controlled the house completely, thereby holding hostile forces in check, but was himself held in restraint by the middle-of-the-road organization in control of the senate.

Therefore the opinions of the league are based on general performance more than usual.

Findings of the Legislative Voters' league in reference to outgoing legislators in ten of the nineteen Cook county districts (the other nine will be published Tuesday) were as follows:

FIRST DISTRICT.

Sen. Adolph Marks, Rep.—One of the regular henchmen of the Small administration; habitually lined up with the worst element in the senate during the last three sessions; has shown little legislative capacity; poor record.

Rep. Sheadrick B. Turner, Rep.—Has served five terms with a bad record.

Rep. Charles A. Griffin, Rep.—Faithful in attendance and committee work; fairly creditable record.

Rep. John Griffin, Dem.—While lacking some necessary qualifications for legislative work, has shown independence at times and has improved his voting record of late years.

SECOND DISTRICT.

Rep. Peter S. Krump, Rep.—Ending his third term with a poor record.

Rep. Frank Ryan, Dem.—Has shown some ability and industry at times; record decidedly mixed.

Rep. Harry C. Van Norman, Dem.—Has shown some indications of independence but has made a colorless record.

THIRD DISTRICT.

Senator Adelbert H. Roberts, Rep.—Has shown some ability but is too temperamental to be an effective legislator; one of the regular henchmen of the Small administration.

Representative Warren B. Douglas, Rep.—Has some legislative capacity; creditable record at the last session.

Representative William E. King, Rep.—Is industrious and has shown indications of possessing ability during his first term; creditable record.

Representative George Garry Noonan, Dem.—Has served four terms with a poor record.

FOURTH DISTRICT.

Representative Arthur J. Rutshaw, Rep.—Lacks necessary qualifications; introduced salary grab bill; ending third term with poor record.

Representative Thomas J. O'Grady, Dem.—Showed his usual activity and attentiveness to legislative business; mixed record.

Representative James P. Boyle, Dem.—Possesses fair ability and industry, but is lacking in independence; fairly creditable record.

FIFTH DISTRICT.

Senator James E. MacMurray [Rep.]—Has shown unusual courage, independence, and industry; has continually opposed excessive appropriations; a staunch and high grade legislator; unusually fine record.

Representative Katherine Hancock Goode [Rep.]—Has shown unusual fitness for legislative work; is exceptionally well informed and was extremely faithful in attending to her duties; excellent record.

Representative Sidney Lyon [Rep.]—Showed discrimination in voting, but was a failure as chairman of committee on municipalities, which reported out seriously faulty bills without due consideration; mixed record.

Representative Thomas F. Reilly [Dem.]—An active and independent member; in spite of some mistakes has made a good record.

SIXTH DISTRICT.

Representative Ralph E. Church [Rep.]—Finishing fifth term, during which he gave the public faithful service, as usual.

Representative John W. Gibson [Rep.]—Has shown unusual courage and fighting ability in opposing bad measures; has been a healthy force in Springfield because he does his own thinking.

Representative Charles H. Weber, Democrat.—Has shown slight legislative ability and is lacking in industry; rather a poor record.

SEVENTH DISTRICT.

Senator Frederick B. Roose, Republican.—A capable and hard working legislator; showed increasing independence; very creditable record.

Representative Howard P. Castle, Republican.—Continued to give the public excellent service; showed his usual courage and independence; record always has been thoroughly high grade.

Representative Lewis B. Springer, Republican.—Voted rather regularly with the house organization, but was actively attentive to legislative business; record of decided usefulness.

Representative Martin H. Finneran, Democrat.—Has shown industry, independence, and some ability; fair record.

NINTH DISTRICT.

Senator Patrick J. Carroll, Democrat.—Supported most of Gov. Small's bad measures during last three sessions; has little legislative ability; poor record.

Representative David E. Shanahan, Republican—Kept away during most of session by ill health, but when present gave the public admirable service.

Representative Joseph Placek, Democrat.—Poor record.

Representative William J. Gormley, Democrat.—Showed some ability and gave attention to work; mixed voting record.

ELEVENTH DISTRICT.

Rep. David I. Swanson, Rep.—Remarkably fine record; unusual legislative capacity; did exceptionally faithful work as chairman of judiciary committee; an able and dependable legislator.

Rep. Walter L. Miller, Rep.—Industrious; showed some capacity and discrimination in voting; fairly creditable record.

Rep. John M. Lee, Dem.—Showed industry and some capacity, but seemed to lack independence; tolerably fair record.

THIRTEENTH DISTRICT.

Sen. Albert C. Clark, Rep.—Absent on account of ill health.

Rep. Elmer J. Schnackenberg, Rep.—Excellent record; initiated battle for reapportionment and fought hard for redistricting; is one of the recognized leaders of the house.

Rep. Theodore D. Smith, Rep.—A hard working, independent, and capable member; unusually good record during first term.

Rep. William W. Powers, Dem.—An inactive member; colorless record.

The next report of the L. V. L. will cover all candidates for the general assembly and will be issued after the last day of filing and before the primary.

BUSY DAY

SERGT. FRANK WALSH.
[TRIBUNE Photo.]

Sergt. Frank Walsh of the West North avenue police station spent a busy Friday night, according to reports submitted yesterday to his superiors. His activities included the capture of an alleged burgler and, an hour later, the rounding up of two youths accused of accosting an 18 year old girl.

The burglar gave his name as Joseph Fallon, 3800 Ferdinand street. He was arrested, it is charged, while he was in the act of rifling the office of Ald. Edward J. Kaindl, at 2600 West Chicago avenue.

After Walsh had locked up Fallon he was returning to his post when he heard screams. Two young men, according to Walsh, were struggling with Miss Anna Lee Miller, who was returning to her home after attending a neighborhood party. Walsh ran up, and after leveling his revolver at the pair, took them into custody. They gave their names as Edward Kostuck, 1540 Cornell street, and John Wicecha, 1022 Newton street.

Horse Meat May Be Sold if Labeled, Carlstrom Says

Springfield, Ill., Feb. 6.—[United Press.]—There is no provision in the Illinois law prohibiting the sale of horse meat if it is designated as such, Attorney General Oscar Carlstrom has advised State Veterinarian F. A. Laird. However, the law provides a fine and prison sentence for the sale of equine flesh as beef or other meat.

SOVIET ENVOY TO OPEN PARIS DEBT TALK TOMORROW

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

PARIS, Feb. 6.—Soviet Ambassador Rakovsky has returned to Paris after a two months' visit to Moscow and is ready to resume negotiations for the settlement of the czar government's debt to France.

The first pourparlers will be held Monday. M. Rakvosky this evening expressed his hopefulness for reaching an accord satisfactory to France.

While not admitting the responsibility in principle and insisting on the right of the soviets to disavow the Romanoff debts, the soviets intend to propose a principle whereby they will assume the repayment of certain categories of pre-war bonds floated here, in return for credits from the French for industry, for the organization and reconstruction of railways, and the augmenting of agricultural machinery. Russia expects to ship a great quantity of wheat to France, thus relieving the French government of the necessity for a heavy subsidy on wheat to keep bread prices down.

KILLS A ROBBER WHILE OFF DUTY AND WINS $100

Policeman Garrity Praised for Courage in Duel.

For his bravery and coolness in tackling an armed bandit, whom he killed after a running duel, Patrolman Edward F. Garrity of the North Robey street station is awarded THE TRIBUNE's bravery prize of $100 for the month of January.

Under conditions which called for the utmost courage and calmness, Garrity attacked the gunman who was using two victims to shield his body while he fired on the patrolman. Garrity, who was off duty at the time, was obliged to withhold his fire for fear of wounding two innocent men.

Praise from His Captain.

Garrity's conduct is best described by Capt. Max Danner, his commanding officer:

"Little argument is needed in bringing to notice the very meritorious and distinguished services of Patrolman Garrity. He has, I believe, distinguished himself in a manner which reflects great credit on our department and makes the city of Chicago his debtor. For this kind of service he no doubt would be given the distinguished service cross if he was in the army service."

On the night of Jan. 16, John Pierandrea and Talina Seconda were ordered to "stick 'em up" by a bandit, later identified as Joseph Sheridan, at Franklin and Orleans streets. Noticing that he was being observed, Sheridan forced his victims to walk to Sedgwick street and ordered them into an alley.

Garrity, who was returning to his home, noticed the two men with their arms half raised. He gripped his revolver in his overcoat pocket and walked past the group. As he went by he noticed that Sheridan had a gun against the body of one of the men.

Garrity Wheels Into Action.

Garrity suddenly wheeled about, drew his revolver and ordered Sheridan to drop his gun. Sheridan's reply was a shot from his automatic as he pushed Pierandrea in front of him. Using the man as a shield, Sheridan fired several shots point blank at Garrity. The policeman was obliged to hold his fire.

Having emptied his gun, Sheridan pushed his shield aside and disappeared into the darkness. Garrity gave chase, firing as he ran. Both men reloaded their revolvers as they ran and Sheridan returned the fire. As the bandit turned into Chicago avenue he fell to the pavement mortally wounded. He died a few minutes later on the way to a hospital.

"This superlative piece of police work might be set forth as approaching the highest possible achievement in police work from the standpoint of intelligence, calmness, and bravery," Capt. Danner said in his report. "Garrity acted as only a policeman can who combines the quality of excellent judgment, valor, and courage."

Kills Robber, Wounds Another.

Patrolman Louis Angus of the Cottage Grove station, who, single handed and in a dark store, attacked two men armed with a meat cleaver and a butcher knife, is given special mention. In the battle that followed Angus killed one of the bandits and wounded the other.

Early on the morning of Jan. 14 Patrolman Angus with a detail surrounded a butcher shop at 345 East 29th street. Angus entered the shop alone while his companions guarded the front and back doors. The store was in darkness and Angus proceeded to the rear with his flashlight.

As he reached the ice box a colored man leaped out and attacked him with a cleaver. Angus backed away and ducked as the robber hurled the weapon at him. The policeman fired two shots, killing his assailant, who later was identified as William Brown.

As Brown fell to the floor another robber jumped out and attacked Angus with a butcher knife. Angus wounded him. The second assailant was identified as William Cook.

WIFE CHARGES DESERTION; SUES F. E. MUELLER

Inability to Join in Sports Lost Mate.

Admitting that her inability to join with her husband in outdoor sports and amusements has caused him to seek the companionship of another woman, Mrs. Mary E. Mueller, 18 East Elm street, an invalid, yesterday filed suit for separate maintenance against Frank E. Mueller, president of a Florida fruit corporation, and secretary of the Roberts & Schaeffer Engineering company, 400 North Michigan avenue.

Mrs. Mueller told a story of helping her husband to attain riches from the time twenty years ago when he was a young engineer getting a small weekly salary. At the present time, Mueller has an income of at east $20,000 a year and owns much property, according to the bill.

Was a Model Husband.

Until two years ago, Mueller was a model husband, Mrs. Mueller declared. When she became ill, he nursed her with much care. They occupied apartments in the Edgewater Beach hotel and Mueller lavished much affection upon his wife and their one son, Frank Jr., now a student at the Northwestern Military academy, according to the bill.

"But I was confined to the sick room," Mrs. Mueller said. "I was unable to join in my husband's recreations as I would have liked. So he gradually lost his love for me and in April, 1924, he confessed to me that he had fallen in love with another woman.

Asks Larger Alimony.

"He spent much money upon this other woman and she finally came to take my place completely."

Last October, Mueller left her, the wife said. He continued to send her $350 a month for expenses, but this sum is inadequate to support her, she said. She wants the court to grant her much larger alimony.

Stephenson Escape Rumor Branded False by Warden

Michigan City, Ind., Feb. 6.—(AP)—Reports that D. C. Stephenson, former grand dragon of the Ku Klux Klan in Indiana, had escaped the Indiana state prison, where he is serving a life term for murder, were denied today by Warden Walter Daly.

132D INFANTRY, 50 YEARS OLD; TO CELEBRATE

Was Crack Regiment in Spanish War.

Few military organizations have as much to be proud of as has the 132d Infantry, formerly the 2d Illinois, and the members intend to show why when they celebrate the regiment's 50th birthday anniversary on March 13. "Big doings" are promised in their program.

A joint committee on arrangements, consisting of members of the regiment, the veteran corps, the women's auxiliary, Forges post of the American Legion, the West Side chamber of commerce and west side business men and club members, plans an occasion long to be remembered on the west side.

Invitations Go to All Veterans.

Capt. Frank T. Caspers, adjutant of the Veterans' corps, is sending invitations to every veteran still living. He expects all the old timers to be there and relate their experiences.

As the 132d, in the 33d division, this regiment covered itself with glory during the world war. As many congressional medals were given to the doughboys of the 132d as to most other entire divisions.

That, say the old timers, was to be expected, since they had the traditions of the regiment to live up to. As to the 2d Illinois, the west siders were considered the crack regiment of volunteers in the Spanish-American war.

Has Had Notable Commanders.

Since its organization on March 13, 1876, the regiment has had many notable commanders, Col. Joseph T. Torrence, Col. James Quirk, Col. William Hale Thompson (father of the former mayor), Col. Florenz Ziegfeld (father of the Flo Ziegfeld of "Follies" fame), Col. Louis S. Judd, Gen. George M. Moulton, who commanded the regiment during the war of '98, Gen. James E. Stuart, Gen. John J. Garrity, Gen. Abel Davis, who led the regiment through all its engagements in France; Col. William E. Swanson, and its present commander, Col. Frederick C. Rand.

BANDITS ROB TWO DRIVERS.

Two armed colored men held up Samuel Rosenfeld, 1808 North Rockwell street, a driver for the White Way Wet Wash laundry, 3412 Cottage Grove avenue, and robbed him of $70 in front of 5355 Federal street last night. A short time later two bandits in an automobile robbed Samuel Bracus, a wagon peddler, 725 Blue Island avenue, of $50 on Dorchester avenue near East 56th street.

MOST of the great pianists, the students and the people of modest means who choose the Steinway, buy it for its exquisite singing tone, its beauty of form and finish, its quick, accurate response to the hand and spirit. You begin to receive the value of the time—five years and eleven months—that is spent in the construction and preparation of each Steinway. You begin to realize, year by year, the skill, integrity and knowledge that is built into each instrument. You see it become an integral part of your family life. You see it enter decade after decade with its pure, singing tone unimpaired, its response ever quick and sure. You see it withstand the hardest usage that children's musical training can give. The Foremost Living Pianists Prefer the Steinway

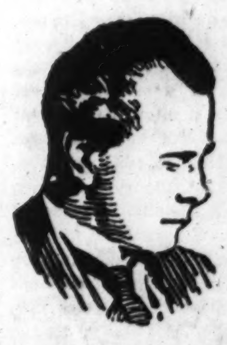
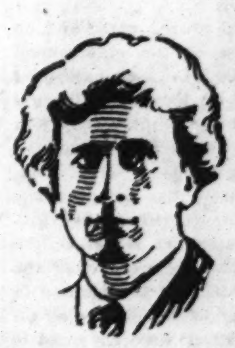
Sergei Rachmaninoff

"I am very happy to have the opportunity of using the Steinway pianos for my concerts because I consider them to be perfect in every way."



Josef Hofmann

"I consider the Steinway piano absolutely unique in that it combines the production of sound, from the softest pianissimo to the greatest forte, with an extraordinary perfection of action. It allows the daintiest runs in a Chopin nocturne to be immediately followed by a thunderous forte in a Tannhauser overture transcription."



Percy Grainger

"There are certainly no pianos in the world that can begin to compare with the Steinway, which is at once the most tender, delicate, responsive, facile, and mechanically perfect of all pianos. I know of no piano tone to compare with it—nothing so glorious, so heroic, so aristocratic in pianistic color."

SOME MORE DRED SCOTT DECISIONS.

The United States Supreme court has held that prohibition enforcement agents have the protection of trial in the federal courts when they are charged with murder or other crimes of violence. They must show that the killing was in the line of duty. Then the federal court will protect them from trial for it in the state courts. The Supreme court found that it was the undoubted intention of congress to give the prohibition enforcement agents the same protection given revenue agents.

It was held that congress had considered the probability that in sections of the country the agents would encounter either general indifference to enforcement or hostility to it and that this sentiment would be reflected in the courts and an agent who killed in trying to do his duty could not get justice in the local courts with a judge and jury from the community.

The case in point was one which came out of Maryland, where four prohibition agents had killed a citizen. They said he was a moonshiner and was killed in resisting arrest. They were indicted and were to have been tried in the state courts, but were taken under the protection of the Baltimore federal court. The state endeavored to retain its jurisdiction over them. The Supreme court upheld the validity of the federal protection in principle, but in this particular case sent the agents back to the state courts for two reasons: one that they had not clearly established their contention that the killing was in the line of duty and the other was to answer indictment for perjury and obstruction of justice, which acts could not have been in the line of duty, and their innocence or guilt was to be determined by the state courts.

There is another Maryland case in which an agent shot a man who was trying to escape from custody after the agent had trapped him into a sale of liquor. The man saw an opportunity to run and was killed.

The country could understand the federal protection given revenue agents who were risking their lives in the attempt to stop illicit distilling. That generally meant a fight with armed mountaineers who were prepared to shoot if they were raided. The sentiment of the community might be with the moonshiners. If a revenue officer killed a man in such a battle it might be fatal for him to be tried in a local court and the government extended the protection of its own courts to him. There was general belief that the revenue men were honest, courageous, and scrupulous officers of law.

There was a discussion the other day in congress of the character of prohibition enforcement agents. They are exempt from civil service law, an exemption to which the Anti-Saloon league agreed either to control the appointments itself or to give patronage to the congressmen whose votes passed the Volstead act. Of the 3,551 enforcement agents appointed in the last six years, 916 have been dropped for crimes—robbery, extortion, embezzlement, misuse of firearms, perjury, etc., and 126 have been convicted in the courts of murder, assault, offenses against women, extortion, and other crimes.

These are discovered and proved cases and do not exhaust the activities of the enforcement agents in these directions. The very nature of the employment has been an inducement to unscrupulous men to seek it for profit. They join the force to extort money from prohibition violators. These are the new agents of social dictation to whom the government has extended the protection of the federal courts when they kill.

The law they enforce does not represent the conscience or the judgment of a majority of the people in many of the states. It is regarded in these states by a majority of the people as an unjust denial of liberties which were supposed to be inherent in American citizenship. It is not respected because it lacks the elements which promote respect for law.

It is generally the case that when a government imposes such law on people enforcement must proceed by methods which still further deny constitutional guarantees. That is the course of autocracy and congenial and necessary to it.

Thus we have in the enforcement of prohibition measures which deny trial by jury, take away the use of property without due process, provide double jeopardy for the same offense, destroy the protections against search and seizure without warrant, and protect the agents of enforcement against trial for murder in the courts which should have jurisdiction.

These processes are almost inevitable when law does not represent the conscience and judgment of the people upon whom it is imposed. The force of repression must be increased as the spirit of nonconformity grows. Most law contains the experience and expresses the purpose of a people. Then nothing outside of law need be done for enforcement. Enforcement follows naturally from the intent of the people. It may not be perfect, but it is the community desire that there should be enforcement.

The Volstead act is regarded as an autocratic injustice in many states. Where it is so regarded it is opposed and great masses of citizens make themselves liable to the operation of enforcement agents.

In the Dred Scott decision the majority opinion of the Supreme court, written by Chief Justice Taney, held that Negroes were "so far inferior that they had no rights which white men were bound to respect," and that they were rightfully made slaves for the white man's benefit. They were held to be only chattel property, and even when emancipated to remain civil nullities.

It is the present prohibition view that this applies to people of the United States who drink liquor. We believe it would be found to be prevalent prohibition opinion that a person who could be detected using beer, wine, or spirits should lose suffrage, citizenship, civil rights, and constitutional protections, and that the prohibition agent who assaulted him had no more liability than the master of Dred Scott, who whipped him after he had been on free soil and was therefore sued for assault and battery.

That is the spirit of prohibition and it is getting reflection in court decisions just as the slavery opinion of the Negro had expression in the fugitive slave law and the Dred Scott decision. The protections of law are denied the citizen who does not conform to the sumptuary law of the land regulating his beverages.

We cannot believe that this doctrine of law can continue to govern. It did not in slavery, and we do not think that it can in the regulation of personal habit. If a man is to go to the penitentiary for a violation of the Volstead act he should have the same rights to a trial which are granted the robber and murderer. If he is to have his property taken away from him it should be by due process. Trial without jury and the padlock on the door give the federal judge, to whom a killing enforcement agent may flee for protection, a position not in, but above, the law.

This country will work back to its constitutional provisions for the protection of the individual or it will develop a despotism against which the individual will have no protection whatever, and then it will be a relief to get some modern equivalent of George III.

THE COURTS AND PROBATION.

The Chicago Bar association has called a meeting of the judges of the Criminal court to consider the charges recently made by President Edward E. Gore of the crime commission. Mr. Gore said 613 convicted prisoners had been turned back on the street in 1925 on probation. He implied that that fact alone went a long way toward explaining the prevalence of crime in Chicago.

The probation law is intended to soften the rigor of the law against first offenders. If the judge believes the prisoner is going to go straight, he may suspend his sentence. The law was passed as a humanitarian measure. Merely because it was intended to do good, however, is no reason for believing that it has done good. Like many other laws regarding crime, it must be judged solely by its results. What it was supposed to accomplish is unimportant in the light of what it has accomplished.

Placing a man on probation after he has been convicted of a crime is equivalent to acquitting him in the eyes of his neighbors and friends. It is an invitation to others to commit crime because it convinces them they can get away with it. We do not say that probation is never justified; we think it must be self-evident, however, that 613 probations in one year in a crime-ridden community like this is too many.

Probation has opened another breach in the prison wall through which the politician can advance to rescue the criminal from the punishment he has merited. The Bar association is properly aroused by the amazing statistics prepared by Mr. Gore. It is clear that probation has been too freely granted. The judges are on the defensive. The bar is doing its duty to the community in holding them to an accounting.

RUNNING THE QUACK OUT OF TOWN.

No exploiter of human fear and credulity is quite so despicable as the quack doctor. To heal the sick is one of the noblest of man's services to mankind. The quack sullies the title he assumes. The shyster lawyer, the confidence man, the cultist swindle their victims out of money. The quack doctor not only takes his victims' money under false pretenses, but often robs them of their physical and mental health, as well.

Equally as contemptible is the public official who, through laxness or for other reasons, permits the medical charlatan to flourish. Investigators from The Tribune's staff found the quack, despite many exposures of his practices, back in business, more flagrant, more prosperous than ever. And testimony—one witness a registered nurse—gives every indication that official eyes have winked at this wholesale traffic in health.

Complaint with good evidence was made to the state department of education and registration against the House of Health, one of the exposed quack organizations, but there was no interference with its operations.

Ignorance and fear are the allies of the quack physician and law is the public's only protection so long as people, in their ignorance of the facts of medicine, continue to seek out the quack instead of the reputable practitioner.

Constructive popular education is, of course, the only permanent way to get rid of the quack.

The movement toward an enlightened public is on its way and growing, but it still has far to go.

For example, it has been only in the last few years that reputable doctors and the press have been able to get together in order to give legitimate publicity to medical topics. The press was partly responsible for this. It sensationalized when there was no need for making an already interesting story sensational. And, medicine being an intricate science wrapped up in a maze of technical terms, newspapers did not always succeed in accuracy.

A partial responsibility must also be assumed by the doctors. It took a long time for them to see that they might stretch their code of ethics to include the right sort of publicity, without lessening the force of the ethical code in its function of maintaining the reputation of the medical profession.

Medicine has long hedged itself about with a barrier of sanctity, surrounded its rites with mystery, conducted its services in a lingo incomprehensible to the layman without four years of college Latin. The shell has been broken during the last score of years. A few Brahmins of the profession hold to the old narrow ways, but the forward looking members see the advantage to the people they serve in getting into popular language the lessons modern medicine has to teach.

The majority of reputable doctors have set their shoulders to the educational wheel and are aiding in the establishment of more and more clinics and dispensaries, health centers and visiting services, lectures and courses in hygiene, some run by public funds, others by private contribution. Through the Chicago health department and its bulletins, published under the direction of Health Commissioner Bundesen, literally hundreds of thousands are learning the truth about their physical and mental welfare. The prevalence of venereal disease—favorite field for the quack's exploitation because of the desire of the victim for secrecy—has been met by a campaign of frankness and plain speaking, thanks largely to Dr. Bundesen. It is the only way this curse of white civilization ever will be stamped out.

So with all diseases and all the medical fakers who prey upon a public ignorant of medical facts. Education is the only means to drive out the charlatan. Government agencies, the schools, the daily and periodical press, and the medical profession must unite their efforts if the quacks are to be forced to leave town for good.

Above all, must the doctors themselves give their aid. Education calls for teachers. It is the doctors who must head the forces of public instruction.

"THE FIRST STEP."

Sir Austen Chamberlain, British foreign minister, was with Premier Briand in Paris when he was asked what he thought of the United States' offering to join the world court. Briand said it was a beau geste, "the first step, I hope."

"Don't say that," Chamberlain cautioned him and Briand did not carry his hope further. Senator Bruce of Maryland in the senate debate said that the court was the league and he gladly took it as such. President Hibben of Princeton said that joining the court was the very least the United States could do. Now Col. House says that "to the masses of the people it means that we have entered something like the league of nations. It is a step in that way and it allows the leaders to release their efforts toward a more active entrance."

Francis H. Sisson, vice president of the Guaranty Trust company of New York, in a Chicago speech, said he rejoiced in the American participation even if he were to be accused of rejoicing as a Wall street banker. The vote in The Tribune radio referendum was 11 to 1 against joining.

If there were any chance that a half dozen of the other nations would object to the distrustful reservations the senate attached to the resolution we might get away yet. We suspect, however, that any of the little sisters who tried that would be chased out of the court by their elders and betters. We'd like to see Haiti, Siam, and Liberia try it. There's a chance for Liberia to repay anything it thinks it may owe the United States. The senate has stipulated that all the nations must indicate as a matter of record that they accept the conditions of the American joining. If Liberia is not game, out of gratitude, Haiti might be, for revenge. The American marines interfered with government by assassination in Haiti. Probably the Haitians figure that the next time that is tried they'll have the United States in court. The Turkish attempt to keep the British out of Mosul by appealing to the league and court did not work, but that will not be a precedent when the Haitians appeal against the United States.

We're on our way and all the pro-courters now are leaguists, determined to get to the ultimate good, membership in the league of nations.

Editorial of the Day

A FIGHT FOR HOME RULE.

[Fort Wayne [Ind.] Journal-Gazette.]

The city of Chicago is launching herself upon a fight for home rule.

Chicago is hampered in her development by a singular want of power to determine her own local concerns in the manner most desirable to her people and best suited to her development. That vast community is governed to a degree not to be patiently borne, according as the general laws of the state and the humors of the legislature prescribe—a legislature in which Chicago has a minor strength and sings low.

Upon Chicago's corporate area of 200 square miles is concentrated one-half the population of that state. Chicago has more than three millions of inhabitants and is probably the fourth and certainly the fifth city of the world as ranked by population. Yet, Chicago must, for the solution of the intense problems of an intense congestion, go to the legislature of the state for specific authority to deal with minute detail. Outside Cook county and three or four other counties in which are seated the larger of the minor cities, Illinois is essentially a rural state. The legislators of that state are not likely to apprehend Chicago's needs. Added to this is the sustained refusal of the Illinois assembly to reapportion the state for legislative representation.

Some time ago there was raised in Chicago the cry of secession. That, we may reasonably suppose, is not likely to come about—assuredly not soon, if ever. Talk of secession is interesting, however, because it shows the state of feeling in Chicago. That is a natural feeling. The people there are sensible of their rights to home rule and they can appreciate what the want of home rule is costing them in internal progress and development of all sorts—politically, socially, and commercially. Chicago's problems are peculiar to cities of prodigious size. Rural communities cannot appreciate them and should not be permitted to deal with them.

MORE WHITEWASH.

[Kansas City Journal-Post.]

The statement given out by the Kansas Anti-Saloon league following a meeting of the board of trustees to consider the charges of Dr. John G. Schaibly, former superintendent, is inadequate and evasive.

It means that the days of the usefulness of the league in Kansas are ended, for it is a delusion to believe that the state will continue to support an organization which can dismiss so lightly some of the charges of Dr. Schaibly and by silence tacitly approve other irregularities alleged by him.

The action of the board, however, was to be expected. It is the same board, for the most part, that has been responsible for the affairs of the league for years, and for it to have brought in any other kind of a report would have been a little bit like finding itself guilty.

The truth of the whole thing is that in the past the board of trustees left the running of the league to a little group of persons who have used it for selfish, political, and, in some instances, unlawful purposes. The trustees have been mere figureheads and their names have been used solely to induce citizens of Kansas to pour their money into the pockets of a few manipulators, the contributors believing the names of the trustees assured proper handling of the funds.

Instead of frankly confessing this and denouncing those who had thus imposed upon the confidence of the trustees, the board has whitewashed its own neglect of duty and in the process let those responsible for the state of affairs disclosed by Dr. Schaibly go unwhipped of justice.

EFFECTS OF DRUGS.

Is it possible for a person of experience to say what drug an addict uses by a study of his personality, his mentality, his speech, and his writing?

I assume that we can all agree that the prolonged use of drugs causes mental deterioration. This is true, even though the output of the drug-affected mind may have a literary merit, or a merit of another sort that it did not have before the use of drugs was begun. Minds must be measured as a whole, rather than as to one quality alone.

I assume that we can also agree that the prolonged use of drugs causes a profound change in personality, and that this can properly be called a debasement of character.

This is not in contradiction to the fact that some people appear to some most charming or more attractive when under the influence of drugs than they did between the use of drugs, or before they began their use. When we go beyond these points and come into the field of detail it may not be possible to get the same unanimity of agreement. It would surprise no one were people to disagree with many of the statements which follow in this article and in the one on the same subject which is to follow:

HASHISH, OR CANNABIS INDICA.

One of the most attractive chapters in the earlier editions of H. C. Woods' "Therapeutics" described the mental processes of that investigator, when he was under the influence of an overdose of hashish. There is a literature on the effects on the mind of the chronic user of hashish. Victor Robinson has a book on the subject. I know nothing on the subject except what is found in the literature.

OPIUM AND ITS DERIVATIVES.

The effects on the mind and personality of the prolonged use of opium is a matter of common information. There are details that are not so well known. An outstanding peculiarity of the opium mind is secretiveness. Occasionally, a morphine addict is boastful, but that is the exception. De Quincey is generally regarded as the outstanding exception in this particular, but Jeanette Marks claims that De Quincey was an alcohol product with an opium contribution. The secretiveness applies to many experiences of life besides the use of drugs. The narcotized addict is secretive, scheming, plotting, and mysterious about everything. Another mental quality of the opium mind, as given by Jeanette Marks is preoccupation with disease. The use of opium causes auditory hallucinations. Jeanette Marks speaks of a tortured sensitiveness to light, to odors, and to sounds. By analysis of the writings of various authors, she shows just how the chronic use of opium affects the mind.

CHILD'S TEETH DECAY.

Mrs. J. J. H. writes: Why have the teeth of my two year old baby begun to decay so early? His upper front teeth are decaying at the gums. What can I get to remove the dark on them? Would lime water be good for him?

REPLY.

The trouble started before the child was born. Those teeth were forming during your pregnancy. They were poorly built. If you are to have another child, drink more milk, eat more cereal, and stay in the air more during your pregnancy.

But you want especially to know what can be done for this child.

Consult your dentist as to the advisability of having some of these teeth pulled. Others can be filled with amalgam fillings. Keep the teeth very clean. Use a soft, cotton cloth to clean with. Clean each tooth separately.

There is no objection to giving lime water internally and also using it as a mouth wash, but don't expect much from it. Give a diet containing plenty of eggs, cereal and vegetables. Perhaps your physician might get some results from parathyroid and lime used jointly.

But it is too late to do much for these teeth.

THE TENANT'S EXPENSE.

Chicago, Feb. 2.—[To the Legal Friend of the People.]—I am the landlord of the building next door and have never refused to do any repair work for our tenants. Recently they called an electrician without saying anything about it to me. They now want to deduct the electrician's bill from their rent. Must I stand for this? M. B.

Clearly you are not liable if, as appears probable, the defect was in part of the premises under the tenant's control.

TRIBUNE LAW DEPARTMENT.

MERCHANDISE AT WHOLESALE.

Tomahawk, Wis., Jan. 31. — [To the Legal Friend of the People.]—We have a couple of retail grocery stores and, of course, wish to buy our stock at the lowest possible prices. To get merchandise at wholesale, could we adopt a name such as the Blank Wholesale Grocery company, and order under that trade name?

G. R. T.

We do not see how any legal liability against you would arise out of the course that you suggest. We assume that you will not use the name to defraud the jobbers in matters of substance.

TRIBUNE LAW DEPARTMENT.

OKLAHOMA LAWS.

Fort Smith, Ark., Feb. 2. — [To the Legal Friend of the People.]—I have been told that a man can sell real estate in the state of Oklahoma without his wife joining in the deed even though it was purchased with the joint earnings of both. Is this right? Mrs. M.

You have been correctly informed.

TRIBUNE LAW DEPARTMENT.

FROM THE TRIBUNE'S COLUMNS

65 YEARS AGO TODAY

FEBRUARY 7, 1861.

RICHMOND.—The election of delegates to the state convention resulted in a majority of Union men, but very few of them are submissionists. They intend to exhaust every honorable means to prevent trouble, but the state will go for secession unless the southern rights are fully guaranteed. If the Washington peace conference fails to effect a settlement the convention doubtless will submit the question to the people.

WASHINGTON.—The peace conference devoted most of its time to discussion and speeches. The reason for not proceeding to business is the desire to wait for the Illinois, New York, Missouri, and Tennessee delegations.

NEW YORK.—A salute of thirty-four guns was fired in honor of Virginia's electing Union delegates to the state convention.

GALVESTON.—The ordinance of secession, passed on Feb. 1 by a vote of 156 to 7, is to be submitted to the people on Feb. 23 and if carried will go into effect on March 2.

SPRINGFIELD. — President Elect Lincoln's special train to Washington for the inauguration will consist of a single car and a baggage car. It leaves over the Great Western Railroad of Illinois at 8:30 a. m., Feb. 11. The party will number fifteen—none of them ladies—Mrs. Lincoln choosing to avoid the fatigue of such a journey.

WASHINGTON. — Col. Hayne, the South Carolina commissioner, received a reply from President Buchanan on his demand that Fort Sumter be turned over to the South Carolina authorities. The President told him he could not dispose of the property of the federal government, that being a power solely of congress. Hayne will report the decision to Gov. Pickens and if hostilities are to commence they may be expected shortly. Lieut. Hall was sent to Maj. Anderson at Fort Sumter with special instructions to maintain his position but to make no aggressive movement unless attacked.

25 YEARS AGO TODAY

FEBRUARY 7, 1901.

WASHINGTON.—Senator Jones of Arkansas and other Democrats at a night session of the senate made a bitter attack on the ship subsidy bill and denounced Republicans for forcing night sessions in order that the measure might be got through so that President McKinley would not have to call an extra session of congress.

CHICAGO.—To establish municipal courts of record, to abolish the fee system in justice of the peace courts, and to limit their scope will be the purpose of a bill to be prepared by a special city court commission of judges, attorneys and aldermen appointed by the city council's judiciary committee. The commission is composed of Aldermen Edward J. Novak, Charles Alling, and Walter Butler, Justice Charles Everett, Judges E. F. Dunne and Orrin N. Carter, and Robert McMurdy.

COLUMBUS, O.—At the request of Gov. Nash the state emergency board authorized him to incur any expenses, not exceeding $50,000, for the use of state militia, if necessary, to prevent the proposed Jeffries-Ruhlin prize fight scheduled for Cincinnati on Feb. 15.

LONDON. — The war office announced that in view of the recent activity of the Boers the government has decided, in addition to the large forces recently equipped locally in South Africa, to reinforce Gen. Kitchener with 30,000 mounted troops.

CHICAGO.—Miss Bertha L. Peacock, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Charles D. Peacock, and Brode Bedford Davis were married at the residence of the bride's parents, 1713 Indiana avenue.

PEKING.—At a meeting of foreign ministers they voted to demand the death of the princes and other high officials named in the indictment as leaders in the Boxer troubles with the exception of Prince Tuan, Duke Lan and Gen. Tung Fu Siang.

10 YEARS AGO TODAY

FEBRUARY 7, 1916.

CHICAGO. — Two masked men robbed the house of the Rev. James McNamee, priest of St. David's Roman Catholic church, of $225, and beat Mrs. Stella Willowitch, the housekeeper, before they fled. The robbers by a hoax telephone call had induced the Rev. Father James Burke, assistant pastor, to leave the house so they would meet no resistance.

NEW YORK.—The new archbishop of Chicago, the Most Rev. George W. Mundelein, accompanied by Bishop McDonnell of Brooklyn and a large number of Brooklyn and Chicago priests, will leave on a special train for Chicago this afternoon.

WASHINGTON.—President Wilson faces overwhelming defeat in congress of his program of land defense, the most distinctive feature of which is the continental army of volunteer citizen soldiers, trained two months annually for three years. A poll of the house by The Tribune indicates that the President's scheme will be snowed under if it ever comes to a vote there. Only twenty-four representatives expressed themselves as in favor of it.

NEW YORK.—The Herald says: "Existence of a German plot to invade Canada and destroy the Welland canal in order to prevent the shipment of wheat to the allies has been uncovered by detectives of the Canadian secret service."

CHICAGO.—The engagement of Miss Gertrude F. Schwarz, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. T. E. Schwarz, Brookline, Mass., to Ogden T. McClurg of Chicago has been announced.

CHICAGO.—Ignace Jan Paderewski, the pianist, gave an address and recital at the Auditorium theater, into which 4,000 persons were crowded, for the benefit of the Polish victims' relief fund. The sale of tickets and the subscriptions totaled $40,000, almost twice the amount raised in New York.

CHICAGO.—Roger Sullivan returned home from Palm Beach and was given a rousing reception at the First Regiment armory by between 5,000 and 6,000 members of the "regular" Democracy of Cook county. The police were compelled to stop at least 2,000 more who tried to force their way into the packed hall.

WAR NEWS—Petrograd reports that the Russians are continuing their advance throughout the entire Caucasus line with heavy losses to the Turks. On the western front the allies are waiting for a general attack by the Germans and it is believed it will come within a short time.

INCIDENT IN A TEA ROOM.

Chicago, Feb. 2.—I am an office worker in the loop and have just one hour for lunch. This noon I stopped in a little tea room to get a sandwich, intending to do a little shopping before my hour was up. There were three women sitting at a table and a hat bag resting on a fourth chair. As this was the only available chair in the shop, I stood there for a few minutes, and seeing that no one made an effort to remove the bag I asked if they would kindly do so.

One woman immediately got huffy and said there was room for only three at the table; the other asked where I would eat, as there was very little space on the table by that chair. I replied that as there were four chairs, they were evidently intended for four people, and that by moving their plates just a little there would be room for more.

The lady in charge of the tea room then came up and explained that the table was supposed to seat four people and they moved over, grumbling about being crowded, etc.

Now several times I have noticed these things but each time felt a dislike to create a scene, but today I was in a particular hurry and I am sure I was in the right. If these women who have all day to shop would consider that we office workers have only one hour to lunch and shop, perhaps they would be more considerate. If they do not wish to go to a larger restaurant why not lunch earlier or later in the day, or at least not take up room by distributing packages around the table? G. D. G.

$22.50 A MONTH.

Chicago, Feb. 1.—A. L. R. complains of injustice to her husband who is suffering from his war service. I wonder if she has applied to the American Legion, an organization pledged to care for and help the disabled men of the war? This organization is supposed to handle, free, the complicated cases which arise under the red tape that enshrouds any federal department.

If the case is just the American Legion is supposed to fight it through to a successful end. If the service officer of the Illinois department of the Legion does not want to help her she should apply directly to the chairman of the national rehabilitation committee at Washington, D. C. Surely some Legionnaire in Chicago has time to help A. L. R. sufficiently at least to show her how to get what is coming to her. Alan Croley.

MARKETING HOGS.

Champaign, Ill., Feb. 2.—Farmers of the corn belt have a monopoly in the production of pork products, and when they learn that by shipping to only one commission firm in each market center they can command a fair price every day in the year they will do it. This will put the power to name the price in their hands. By shipping only on Monday, Wednesday and Friday with nothing after Monday until the yards are cleared it would be no trouble for them to control shipment, as this firm by radio could reach every shipper at 6 o'clock p. m. each day.

The government should inform the farmer of the number of pigs on hand on July 1 each year and the weight at which they should be sold to produce the needed pork products. They could be sold at any weight from 150 to 300 pounds. We have been raising 70 million a year; now by selling at 150 pounds we would be able to use 100 million, or at 300 pounds 50 million would furnish the amount needed. This would make it possible to control production at all times.

The farmers are not fools. When it was made plain to them that they could get a fair price by selling their hogs at a certain weight they would do it. Maintaining a fair price for hogs year after year as could be done by this plan would go a long way toward solving the corn belt farmers' troubles.

NOT SO ROTTEN.

Chicago, Feb. 2.—As a foil (if one be necessary) to the communication from a correspondent at Webster City, Ia., who thinks your editorials anent our country's entrance into the world court as "rotten, most damned rotten," permit me to state, over my own signature, as he did, my personal opinion that your editorials on that subject and on the present interpretation and attempted enforcement of the Volstead law have been logical, forceful, and undoubtedly represent the sentiment of a large majority of the citizens of our country.

Arthur C. Phillips.

AMERICAN SEAMANSHIP.

Chicago, Feb. 2.—A few days ago we read with unreserved pride dispatches in your paper giving such a splendid account of the rescue in mid-Atlantic of the drowning crew of the British freighter Antinoe by the officers and men of the President Roosevelt, under the able and gallant leadership of Capt. George Fried.

Every true and loyal American read the thrilling news with immense pride, for it was a determined fight that Fried and Miller put up, giving up two young heroes in the battle against the elements. But once more the old American tradition of "Don't give up the ship" was sustained.

Well, the writer is doubly proud, for some two years ago he had the honor of serving on the President Roosevelt, under the command of Capt. Fried, as a petty officer. In those days George Fried, fresh from the navy, had the name of being a strict disciplinarian, a man with an iron will. Perhaps that iron determination helped him to snatch away from an imminent death those 25 brave British seamen.

Anyway, if it hasn't done anything else, it has made admirers of those who for some reason or other, might have had a grouch against him. The rescue may serve as a sort of reminder to tourists who year after year cross the Atlantic preferring to intrust their safety to foreign shipping. I think this is a fitting occasion to renew the post-war slogan, "Ship and sail under the American flag." Albert Maynard.

HOOVER FOR PRESIDENT.

Burlington, Ia., Jan. 31.—After reading "Hoover Visions Added Wealth in Waterways" in today's issue of your paper, and other recent articles regarding the doings and sayings of Mr. Hoover, it strikes me that Herbert Hoover stands out alone as a giant among our big men, and could do more real good for this country as President of the United States than any other man.

Our Budget Plan of Selling is a pleasing form of credit

ONE of the big things in its favor is that it enables you to buy on credit at low, cash prices—something entirely unusual in the Furniture and Rug business.

THERE are some forms of credit that people don't like—they are burdensome and expensive—sometimes they are more of a hindrance than a help, but we believe Our Budget Plan, together with the fact that our prices are based on cost to our 51-year-old wholesale business, will appeal to any person with a logical business mind.

OUR Budget Plan of Selling is one similar to that used by banks and high class bond houses in selling securities; a plan that will appeal to your business sense and your pocketbook, whatever your income is, for it permits you to extend your payments over a reasonable period of months.

WE thought out and originated this Budget Plan of Selling 4 years ago in order to make your buying here a genuine pleasure and a comfortable, desirable and satisfactory transaction.

WM. H. WESBEY, LUNDIN AID, ON DENEEN SLATE

Ticketed for County Board After Issuing Defi.

William H. Wesbey, Lundin lieutenant in the Forty-seventh ward, and former superintendent of Lincoln park, was put on the Deneen county slate yesterday for membership on the county board.

This was a decided personal victory for Wesbey. While the Deneen leaders were wavering about the extent of their alliance with the Lundin-Small forces, he put out his petitions for drainage trustee and proclaimed he would beat the Deneen ticket to a frazzle in his ward if he were'nt included in the slate. The offer and acceptance of a county commissionership as a compromise is considered the result.

With this and two more additions during the day, the Deneen slate is considered about as near a complete ticket as it will ever be. There are blanks at important spots.

Lundin Man Out for Sheriff.

There is no candidate for sheriff. Charles J. Peters, Lundinite, is a candidate for that job. There is no Deneen choice for clerk of the Appellate court. Frank P. Brady, Lundinite, is the Crowe-Barrett candidate for that place, and apparently Deneen will not oppose him.

The further additions are the names of Chester S. Patrick, a real estate man living in the Fifteenth ward, as a candidate for clerk of the Criminal court, and William C. Thorsen, 3430 Medill avenue, a sales manager, for the tenth and last place on the schedule for county commissioners from the city.

The only spot left open which the Deneen folks probably will still fill is that of county superintendent of schools. It is understood they are talking to a woman about that place and will announce her name tomorrow or the next day.

ORDERS HANGING OF RALPH RENO APRIL 23 HERE

Ralph Reno, who some months ago, it is charged, murdered Edward Palombizio, 1345 Taylor street, and his wife, Mary, was sentenced yesterday by Judge Harry B. Miller in the Criminal court to be hanged on April 23. This is the second time Reno's life has been forfeited for the murder, the first time he escaped by being granted a new trial.

"I am innocent," Reno replied when the judge asked him if he had anything to say. "If you can find my wife she will prove it."

The condemned man then handed the judge a letter from his wife, whose whereabouts are unknown, reading: "If you need me I will come to you, for I know you are innocent."

The murders for which Reno is to be hanged occurred March 8, 1925, following a quarrel over the return of some presents he had given to a child of the Palombizios.

Henry "Midget" Fernekes, one of three sentenced to be hanged for the murder of Michael Swiontkowski, treasurer of a building and loan association, was denied a rehearing by Judge William N. Gemmill.

Funeral Tomorrow for Florence Farwell Strong

James Austin Richards, pastor of the Winnetka Congregational church, will officiate. Mrs. Strong was fatally injured Feb. 3 when struck by a motor truck in Miami, Fla. Burial will be at Memorial Park cemetery, Evanston.

DEMOCRATS OPEN COUNTY FIGHT AT RALLY TODAY

Regulars to Adopt Platform, Present Ticket.

Cook county Democrats embark today on what the leaders say will be a militant campaign. The start will be made at West Side Carmen's hall, Ashland avenue and Van Buren street, where the regular Democratic organization, in convention, will adopt its platform and present its ticket for the April primaries.

It is not the primaries, however, with which National Committeeman George E. Brennan and his aids are chiefly concerned. They anticipate little difficulty with the April nominations. Everything that will be done today will be with an eye directly on the November election.

Expect 15,000 to Attend.

More than 15,000 rampant Democrats, including 2,622 delegates and an equal number of alternate delegates, are being planned for by the convention's arrangements committee. Systematic plans have been worked out not only for seating ward and country towns delegations but for parking automobiles in the neighbornood of the hall.

Various planks for the Democratic county platform have been revealed from time to time since convention plans started. Chief of these are planks for modification of the Volstead law, impeachment of Gov. Small, and home rule for Chicago. Every candidate for county office and for the legislature will be pledged to the entire platform, making the fight with Gov. Small for control of the legislature one of the high lights of the coming campaign.

The platform, it is understood, will review with pride the accomplishments of Democrats now in office, holdovers as well as candidates for old jobs and new.

Places Still in Doubt.

Leading places on the regular Democratic slate have been decided on for some time, but many conferences have been necessary to decide the claims of various ward leaders who wanted this or that place on the ticket for a ward colleague or himself.

The managing committee held an eleventh hour session last night, with several places on the ticket still in doubt. Renomination of County Clerk Sweitzer, County Judge Jarecki, Probate Judge Horner, President Cermak, and his six Democratic associates on the caunty board and the slating of County Treasurer P. J. Carr for sheriff and City Comptroller Martin J. O'Brien for treasurer formed the foundation for the regular Democratic ticket.

Funeral Tomorrow for George Stollery, Florist

Funeral services for George Stollery, pioneer north side florist, will be held tomorrow afternoon at 2:30 o'clock in Rosehill cemetery chapel. Mr. Stollery, who was 58 years old, died early yesterday at his home, 1116 Leland avenue. For thirty-five years he, with his brother Frederick, had maintained greenhouses in Chicago. He is survived by his widow and four children.

PRISON BOARD TO DECIDE ON SCOTT CASE THIS WEEK

Los Angeles, Cal., Feb. 6.—(AP)—The state prison board announced today that the case of John Redding, believed to be Robert Scott, brother of Russell T. Scott, who was convicted in Chicago of murder, would come up for consideration early next week. Scott is also under indictment for the slaying.

Redding, who was serving a term in San Quentin prison, was granted a parole, to be effective Dec. 20. When the date arrived he had no employment to go to, and was kept in prison. Meanwhile he was identified as a brother of Russell Scott, and Chicago authorities asked that he be turned over to them. This request now is being considered by the board. A Chicago officer is in California awaiting the decision of the board.

For Funeral Elegance and Price, Ask Hursen First

There is no good reason why you should be compelled to pay a great deal more for the cost of a funeral, and fail to secure that "Hursen" funeral-elegance which has made "Hursen's" famous, simply because there may be a funeral director in your neighborhood.

Hursen belongs to every part of Chicago. He goes everywhere; he is known everywhere in Chicago and its far suburbs. To Hursen, distance means nothing. No matter whether the funeral be very small and modest in cost, or very pretentious, you have a right to have the greatest elegance possible, and at the lowest possible cost. Hursen, and Hursen only, can give it to you.

It is common sense that only a great institution like Hursen's, covering every part of Chicago, can give you the most advanced funeral "service," the most unmatchable elegance ever known to Chicago, the most superb automobile equipment in America, the use of the most palatial funeral-homes in existence—all invariably at a fraction of the cost usually charged elsewhere. So, of course, ask Hursen first!

SMOOT GETS OUT LAMPS AS SENATE LAGS ON TAX BILL

Rush Cuts for March 15 Installments.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Washington, D. C., Feb. 6.—[Special.]—Although but little headway was made by the senate today in its consideration of the tax bill, confidence was expressed by Senator Smoot [Rep., Utah] that it would be passed after a few more days of discussion—at least by next Saturday. This would assure tax reduction by March 15, when first income tax installments are due.

Discussion today was centered chiefly on provisions relating to farmers mutual fire insurance companies and tobacco.

By a vote of 50 to 14 the senate approved more complete exemption to farmers' mutual fire insurance companies than provided in the finance committee bill. By a vote of 48 to 9 the finance committee was sustained in its elemination of a house bill provision reducing the tax on unmanufactured leaf tobacco from 18 to 8 cents per pound when sold direct to the consumer.

Further discussion of the question of publicity of tax returns was put off until Monday in order to give Senator Couzens [Rep., Mich.], a chance to reply to a minority report presented today from the internal revenue bureau investigating committee, of which he is chairman.

Action on an amendment relating to oil depletion also was deferred, with a view to enabling the finance committee to work out a provision satisfactory to Senator Couzens.

The senate adjourned tonight before six o'clock for the first time in several days, but Senator Smoot served notice that beginning Monday the senate will be kept in session twelve hours a day until the bill is passed.

NEW RADIO INVENTION WILL TRANSMIT MAPS AND CARTOONS, CLAIM

Washington, D. C., Feb. 6.—(AP)—A radio system which its inventor claims will draw and transmit cartoons, maps, or other works of the pen simultaneously has been brought out here by C. Francis Jenkins, who has long been engaged in radio experimentation.

A "radio pen" mounted on a small cabinet does the drawing on a flat plate, the impulses moving it coming from a distant machine of like construction.

Army officers have studied the apparatus and some of them have declared it would be of great value in transmitting maps in war time.

Praise Revenue Bureau in the Couzens Quiz Minority Report

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Washington, D. C., Feb. 6.—[Special.]—Declaring that criticisms of the Internal Revenue bureau by the Couzens senatorial committee have given "a gravely erroneous impression to the public," Senators Watson [Rep., Ind.], and Ernst [Rep., Ky.], in a minority report to the senate today highly praised the work of the bureau. They stated that no hint of irregularity or fraud had been discovered.

The majority report, recently submitted, was signed by Senators Couzens [Rep., Mich.], King [Dem., Utah], and Jones [Dem., N. M.]

Is Reply to Couzens.

The minority report was read to the senate during consideration of the tax bill by Senator Ernest as a reply to the speech of Senator Couzens of yesterday, in which alleged irregularities discovered by the Couzens' committee were presented as a reason for complete publicity of tax returns.

Senators Watson and Ernst took exception to the majority report with respect to allowances by the internal revenue bureau for depletion in oil and mineral property cases and for allowances for amortization of war time investments.

"In the investigation, the accomplishments of the bureau as a whole were not examined for the purpose of determining whether, considering the size of the task, it had performed well," the minority report said. "On the contrary, individual cases which had been settled by the bueau were reexamined for the seeming purpose of finding something to criticise in connection with the settlement.

Attacks Committee Methods.

"The entire record discloses the desire to examine and present cases which might form the basis for criticism of the bureau. The record of the hearings, as well as the report itself, shows that it was the unusual and unique cases, called to the attention of the committee with the suggestion of irregularity in the settlement, which were investigated.

"It is impossible for such an investigation to show a complete cross section of the work of the bureau; it necessarily and purposely shows only the rough spots. But the bureau has ended up with a clean record, even after that type of an investigation.

"The accomplishments of the bureau in collecting more than $30,000,000,000 in revenue and in auditing and closing 58,000,000 cases have been subjected for the last year and three months to this type of critical investigating by the investigating committee and its staff, composed of some 50 lawyers, engineers, accountants, and clerks. The investigation has disclosed no hint of any irregularity or fraud."

GANG RIVALRY IS SEEN AS MOTIVE IN PEPPE MURDER

Police Sift History of the Vincis and Gennaros.

The killing yesterday morning of Charles Peppe, 2905 Princeton avenue, presented the police with a bewildering mixup of intermarriages, several previous murders, clashes between the Vincis and the Gennaros,-and numerous other befuddling angles.

Peppe's body was found at 4 o'clock yesterday morning at 28th street and Stewart avenue. Ten bullets had been fired into it. His relationship to the Vincis was the first thought of the detectives.

They recalled that James Vinci, one of the slayers of Mossy Enright, had been killed in a duel with "Machine Gun" Joe Grannata, a kinsman of the Gennaros, who was also killed. Then came the death of Mike Vinci, by an unknown assasssin. Mike, before he died, muttered to policemen, "Get Peppi [or it may have been Peppe]."

Gennaro Established Alibi.

They thought he was referring to Giuseppi Gennaro, who is known as Peppi. This Gennaro established an alibi.

Then at the inquest over Mike Vinci's body, Sam Vinci, his brother, shot and killed John Minatti, another of the Gennaro relatives. Sam Vinci's trial for that killing starts tomorrow.

Attorney Frank McDonnell, who is to defend Sam Vinci, appeared at noon yesterday before Judge William N. Gemmil, who is to preside at the trial. McDonnell asked the protection of the court for himself and the remaining Vincis, including Sam, who is in the county jail. He said he had intended to expose the south side Sicilian bootleg ring in Sam's defense.

Peppe Was to Be Witness.

McDonnell said he also intended to use the dead Peppe as a witness because of the dying remark of Mike Vinci relating to "Peppe" or "Peppi," the shortening of Giuseppi. Without fully revealing the significance he said he would show that Sam Vinci had not intended to kill "Peppi" Genarro. Warnings to all the Vincis, even to Sam in the county jail, were to the effect that nothing must come out in the trial, McDonnell said.

Charles Peppe, the most recently killed of the one clan, was married to a sister of Mike Vinci's wife. That, according to one police belief, would have rendered him an enemy of the Genarros. Instead they learned he was a friend of "Peppi" Genarro, who said he had loaned Peppe money a few hours before Peppe's death.

Asked for Separate Trial.

Then, it was recalled, Peppe was also a defendant in the Criminal court, having been caught with Ralph Raggio, Thomas Bingella and August Fascone with a truck load of stolen cigarets. Peppe had asked for a separate trial, declaring he would be unable to obtain a fair trial if tried with his codefendants.

That the Vincis, the Gennarros, Peppe, and all others involved are in the alcohol business is regarded as certain by the police, but how that relates to Peppe's murder, if it does, was one of the puzzles. Another was in the first words of Mrs. Arthuro Peppe, mother of the slain man, upon learning he was killed.

"Why wasn't Pilano there?" she sobbed in broken English. No more could the police learn of who Pilano is or why he should or should not have been with Peppe at the time of the murder.

FATHER CHARGED WITH BURNING HIS WIFE TO DEATH

Sioux City, Ia., Feb. 6.—[Special.]—Chief of Detectives Danielson today charged George Solomon, 73, Assyrian, with the murder of his wife, 47, last Wednesday. He alleges the aged man beat the woman into insensibility, after which he thrust her head into the furnace in the basement of the house and held her there until death resulted.

Children of the pair found the charred body of their mother in the vegetable cellar six hours after she is alleged to have been murdered.

Neighbors report the aged man frequently beat his wife. He is held without bail.

EDITOR LORENZ FREED ON BONDS BY JUDGE ELLER

Arthur F. Lorenz, former editor of the Illinois Staats-Zeitung, under sentence of 6 months in the Bridewell for criminal libel against the American Legion, was released on $5,000 bond yesterday by Judge Emanuel Eller in the Criminal court pending hearing of a writ of habeas corpus Wednesday.

Lorenz, whose sentence has been affirmed by the Supreme court, contends that the sentence is illegal because he was both fined and imprisoned. He has paid the fine.

"He is no better than any one else and must give a good substantial bond," said Judge Eller sharply to Lorenz's attorneys, who asked that he be liberated without bond pending the hearing of the writ.

TOMORROW WILL BE MURDERERS' DAY IN COURTS

Judges to Start Cleanup of Killing Cases.

CRIMINAL COURT.

John Race, burglary, sentenced to 1 year in the bridewell; Carl Lund, attempted rape, 1 year in the bridewell, by Judge Thomas J. Lynch.

Ralph Reno, murder, sentenced to death by Judge Harry B. Miller.

Walter Mikus, robbery, sentenced to 3 to 20 years in the penitentiary by Judge John P. McGoorty.

Leo Bolke, larceny, sentenced to 1 year in the bridewell by Judge Marcus Kavanagh.

Giovanni Dascola, murder, sentenced to 20 years in the penitentiary by Judge Walter Steffen.

Tomorrow will be murderers' day in the Criminal Court building. Four judges have announced that they will start into the trial of murder cases on that day and attempt to reduce the large number of killing charges now pending.

Judge William V. Brothers will proceed with probably the most important case, that of John Scalisi and Albert Anselmi, Genna gangsters, who shot and killed two policemen last summer.

McSwiggin Named Prosecutor.

At the first trial the pair were given 14 year sentences. Assistant State's Attorney William H. McSwiggin, who has gained many hanging verdicts in the last few months, has been assigned by State's Attorney Crowe to prosecute the case.

Judge Emanuel Eller has on call the cases of Grandma Eliza Nusbaum and John Walton Winn. They are charged with the murder of the former's husband, Albert Nusbaum, because he interfered with their love affair. The death penalty will be asked in this case.

Demand Rope for Sam Vinci.

The gallows also will be demanded in Judge William N. Gemmill's court for Sam Vinci, who shot and killed John Minatti during a coroner's inquest on the slaying of Sam's brother, Mike Vinci.

Judge John P. McGoorty has three murder cases on his call, among them that of Robert Stamm, notorious police character, who is charged with the murder of Harold Berkovitz, 1158 South Paulina street.

TWO FOUND SLAIN IN ROOM; SEE MURDER, SUICIDE

Thomas Merrick, 55 years old, and Joseph E. Murtin, 60 years old, both railroad employés, supposedly switchmen, were found dead, their bodies badly battered, yesterday in Murtin's room on the fourth floor at 238 East 16th street. Police believed the two men staged a fight, Murtin finally drawing a gun, shooting Merrick below the right eye and then turning the gun on himself.

The murder and suicide theory was the only one the police could conceive, they said, from the position of the bodies and the indications around the room. Both men were believed to have been intoxicated when the fight begun.

Murtin's body was found in his room, face downward, and the head partly under the bed. When the police turned him over they found a .38 caliber pistol under him. Merrick lay dead in the hallway a few feet from the door of Murtin's room.

Capt. Charles Larkin of the South Clark street station, said he believed from the evidence obtainable that Merrick, whose room was on the third floor of the 16th street building, went to Murtin's room to quarrel with the latter.

"The indications," said Capt. Larkin, "are that the two men fought and that Murtin finally, in a fit of rage, shot Merrick, then seeing what he had done, turned the revolver on himself."

No extra fuel tax on steel windows now

Today any factory owner can make sure of long-time dividends from steel windows. He can make sure of the abundant light his workmen need .... the added ventilation .... the better working conditions steel windows alone provide. And he can do it without paying the extra fuel tax heretofore exacted by steel windows, as has been proved on the U. S. Sample Building at Chicago. Just read this letter from A. B. Ripley, vice-president, the U. S. Sample Company:

"After the installation of the Lane VATAFEND System on our building, the effect was immediately felt. A moderate temperature is now maintained during the night after the furnaces (oil burning) are shut down. This condition did not prevail before. In fact, we formerly had to start up the burners at least once, and many times twice, to prevent too excessive a drop in floor temperature."

The Lane VATAFEND System is the only effective retardant for heat losses thru steel windows ever devised. Applied to any standard make of steel window, it reduces air inleakage half or more. It ends the need for taxing your heating plant beyond its capacity. It keeps your money-made heat inside—where you can use and enjoy it.

On new factory buildings, a smaller heating plant and smaller radiator surface are required where the Lane VATAFEND System is specified for all steel windows. Usually the saving thus effected is more than sufficient to pay the full cost of the VATAFEND installation. The yearly fuel saving assured by this system is an extra dividend on your initial investment.

The average cost of the Lane VATAFEND System is but $3.50 per sash!

Surely this subject is vital enough for you to know more about! Dictate a note now, sign it and drop it in the mail. Or fill in and mail the Information Request below. It will bring you facts worth many tons of coal every year.

THIRD OF CITY'S COMMUTERS ARE CARRIED BY I. C.

Over 67,000,000 Use Steam Lines Yearly.

BY OSCAR HEWITT.

Of all the steam railroads entering Chicago, the Illinois Central accommodates the largest number of persons with local transportation. This I. C. service, usually called suburban, is in reality largely urban, because the overwhelming majority of its commuters live within the corporate limits of Chicago. In that respect it is different from the other suburban steam lines, except the Rock Island.

It does not follow that the largest suburban carrier is the speediest, the most comfortable and receives the largest income. That may be an attendant characteristic; and it may not. The fact is that the Illinois Central does not have the largest suburban income. But it carries the largest number of people. Ineed, on certain inbound trains of the South Chicago branch, the I. C. carries too many people to be comfortable—unless one is more comfortable standing while spending half a cent a minute. Aside from this demerit, presumably temporary, the service is generally good.

One Third Ride on I. C.

More than a third of the 67,160,511 riders each year on the six principal steam suburban lines travel on the Illinois Central. In the latest yearly statistics available, this road carried 972,865 more riders than did the Northwestern, the next largest suburban carrier.

The division of the yearly traffic between these six suburban systems is shown by the following tabulation of the persons carried annually:

Road—	Passengers.
Illinois Central	23,390,360
Northwestern	22,426,495
Burlington	8,818,115
Rock Island	8,656,767
St. Paul	2,752,812
Western Indiana	1,106,962
Total	67,160,511

Generally speaking, these figures relate to rides within the suburban territory. They represent more than commutation fares collected on suburban trains. Commutation tickets are accepted on through trains of the Burlington within the suburban zone, as is the rule on other roads. Also some persons ride suburban trains at through railroad rates. They buy a one-way, or round trip ticket, or pay cash fare. All those riders are included in the above tabulation.

Heavy Non-Commuter Fares.

In the course of a year, the one way, round trip tickets, and cash fares total a large amount. These passengers on suburban trains paid the Northwestern $290,515, the Illinois Central $257,983, the Burlington $212,189, the Rock Island $188,123, the St. Paul $93,380, and the Western Indiana $675. But the great bulk of the suburban train travelers ride for less than 2 cents a mile, while the occasional rider pays the through train rate of 3.6 cents per mile.

The proportion of strictly commuters to the payers of regular fare is shown in the following tabulation for each road:

Road—	Commuters.	Regular fare.
Northwestern	21,790,831	635,664
Burlington	8,022,472	795,643
Rock Island	8,322,496	334,271
St. Paul	2,667,660	145,152
Western Indiana	1,164,286	2,676
Totals	64,140,421	3,020,090

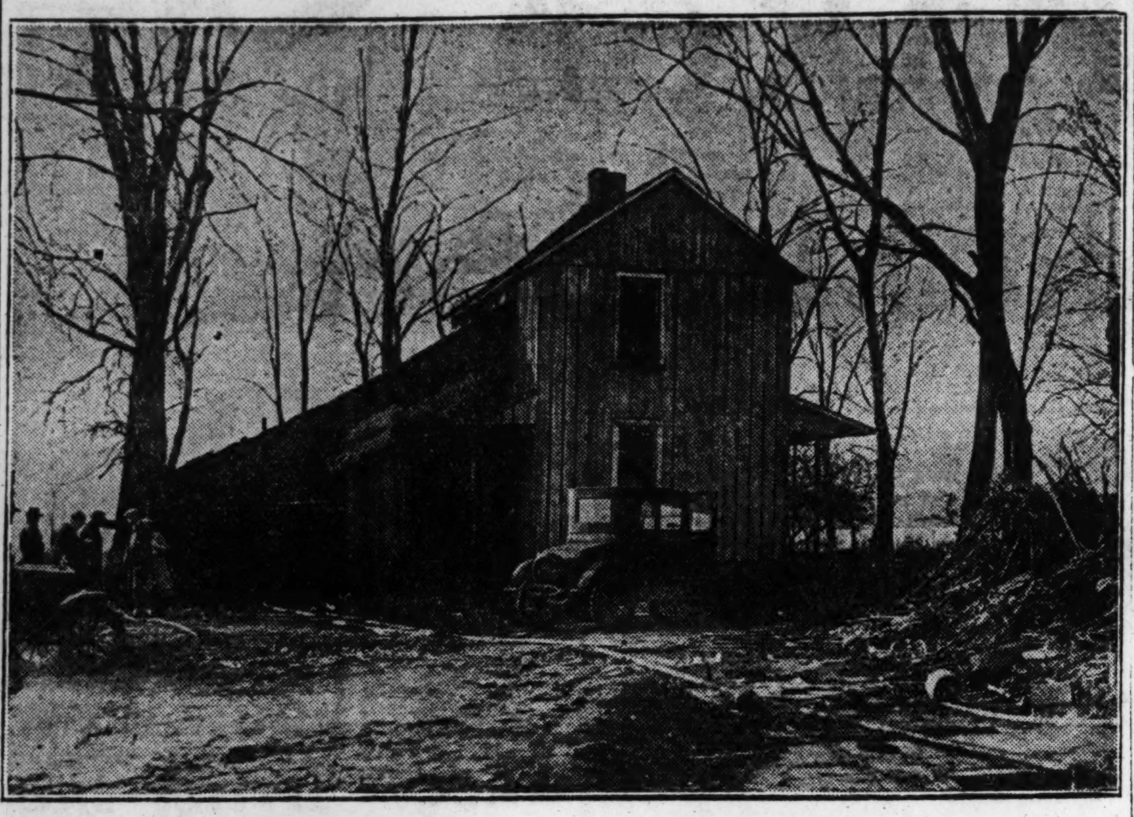
It will be noticed that on the basis of commutation tickets alone the Illinois Central leads the Northwestern by only 500,000 passengers a year; and that the Rock Island is a larger carrier by 300,000 than the Burlington.

Distance Explains Anomaly.

It will also be noted that the regular fare passengers on the Burlington number 160,000 more a year than on the Northwestern. Yet the aggregate income from the Northwestern's 635,664 payers on regular fare is about $78,000 more per year than from the Burlington's 795,643 full fare payers. On the other hand, the Burlington collects in the aggregate within approximately $45,000 of as much from 795,643 full fare passengers as does the Illinois Central from 311,000 more full fare payers.

Those figures roughly indicate the difference in the distance traveled on each road at the full fare, because the price per mile is the same. But that is another story. Today's concern is only with the largest number of suburban passengers carried; and that honor is held by the Illinois Central.

WHERE CAPTURED DRY RAIDERS WERE SLAIN



Bullet riddled farmhouse near Granite City, Ill., where Constable Louis Hockett and John Balke surprised a band of moonshiners and where they met their death. Their bodies were found in a shallow grave near by.

[Pacific and Atlantic Photo.]

GRAFT LOOMS AS MOTIVE IN DRY RAIDERS' SLAYING

Never Made Reports, Sheriff Says.

Edwardsville, Ill., Feb. 6.—(AP)—Testimony indicating graft as a possible motive in the slaying of Constable Ohmer Hockett and John Blake, his chum, by moonshiners, was given at the inquest today. The bodies were found in a shallow grave at a deserted moonshine plant on a farm near Granite City yesterday.

Mrs. Dora Hockett, the constable's widow, testified her husband had made a visit to the plant two days prior to his last trip there, Jan. 29, when he disappeared with Blake. She said he had returned to see "the boss" who was not there the first trip.

Sheriff Deimling said Constable Hockett had never been known to raid a still or report one to other county authorities since taking office last spring. Mrs. Hockett told reporters, however, that her husband had visited many stills, explaining it was a "hobby" to see them in operation.

The sheriff said he interpreted the widow's testimony to indicate the constable and his companion, who was a former reformatory inmate, had not gone to the plant to raid it, but to confer with the man who ran it.

James Mike, proprietor of a restaurant next door to the police station at Granite City, testified he had given Constable Hockett $15 last summer, but insisted it was a loan. He admitted that Hockett had questioned him about some stolen lead and that he would not have lent the money if he had not known Hockett was a con-

Mike also admitted he previously was interested in a still and had paid other constables for protection.

ROB COLLECTOR OF $60.

Charles Duffy, 3448 South Union avenue, a telephone collector, was robbed of $60 yesterday morning by two men, who held him up as he left a building at 540 East 40th street.

U. S. WITNESS IN RUM PLOT FOUND SHOT TO DEATH

New York, Feb. 6.—(AP)—Hans Fuhrmann, one time rum runner, whose revelations to the government resulted in indictments in an alleged $25,000,000 rum syndicate, was found dead with a gunshot wound in his temple in the Hotel Arristo on Jan. 28, it was learned today. His death was described by Medical Examiner Norris as suicidal, but Fuhrmann's widow thinks otherwise.

"There were two prices on his head, he told me," Mrs. Fuhrmann said. "One was for $10,000, and the other for $25,000."

Two days before Fuhrmann's death, William V. Dwyer, turf follower and clubman, together with sixty others, had been indicted for conspiracy to violate the prohibition law.

Alfred Clover Is Held to Grand Jury; Forger Charge

Alfred Clover, 57, of 1743 Humboldt boulevard, was held to the grand jury yesterday by Judge George in the Chicago avenue court under $5,000 bonds on an $11,000 forgery charge. Clover has been in difficulty with the authorities several times as a result of his connections with the Public Life Insurance company. He was exonerated in 1924 of responsibility of a $500,000 shortage in the affairs of the company, but was recently arrested on a forgery charge on a complaint by Louis Narowitz, an official of the company.

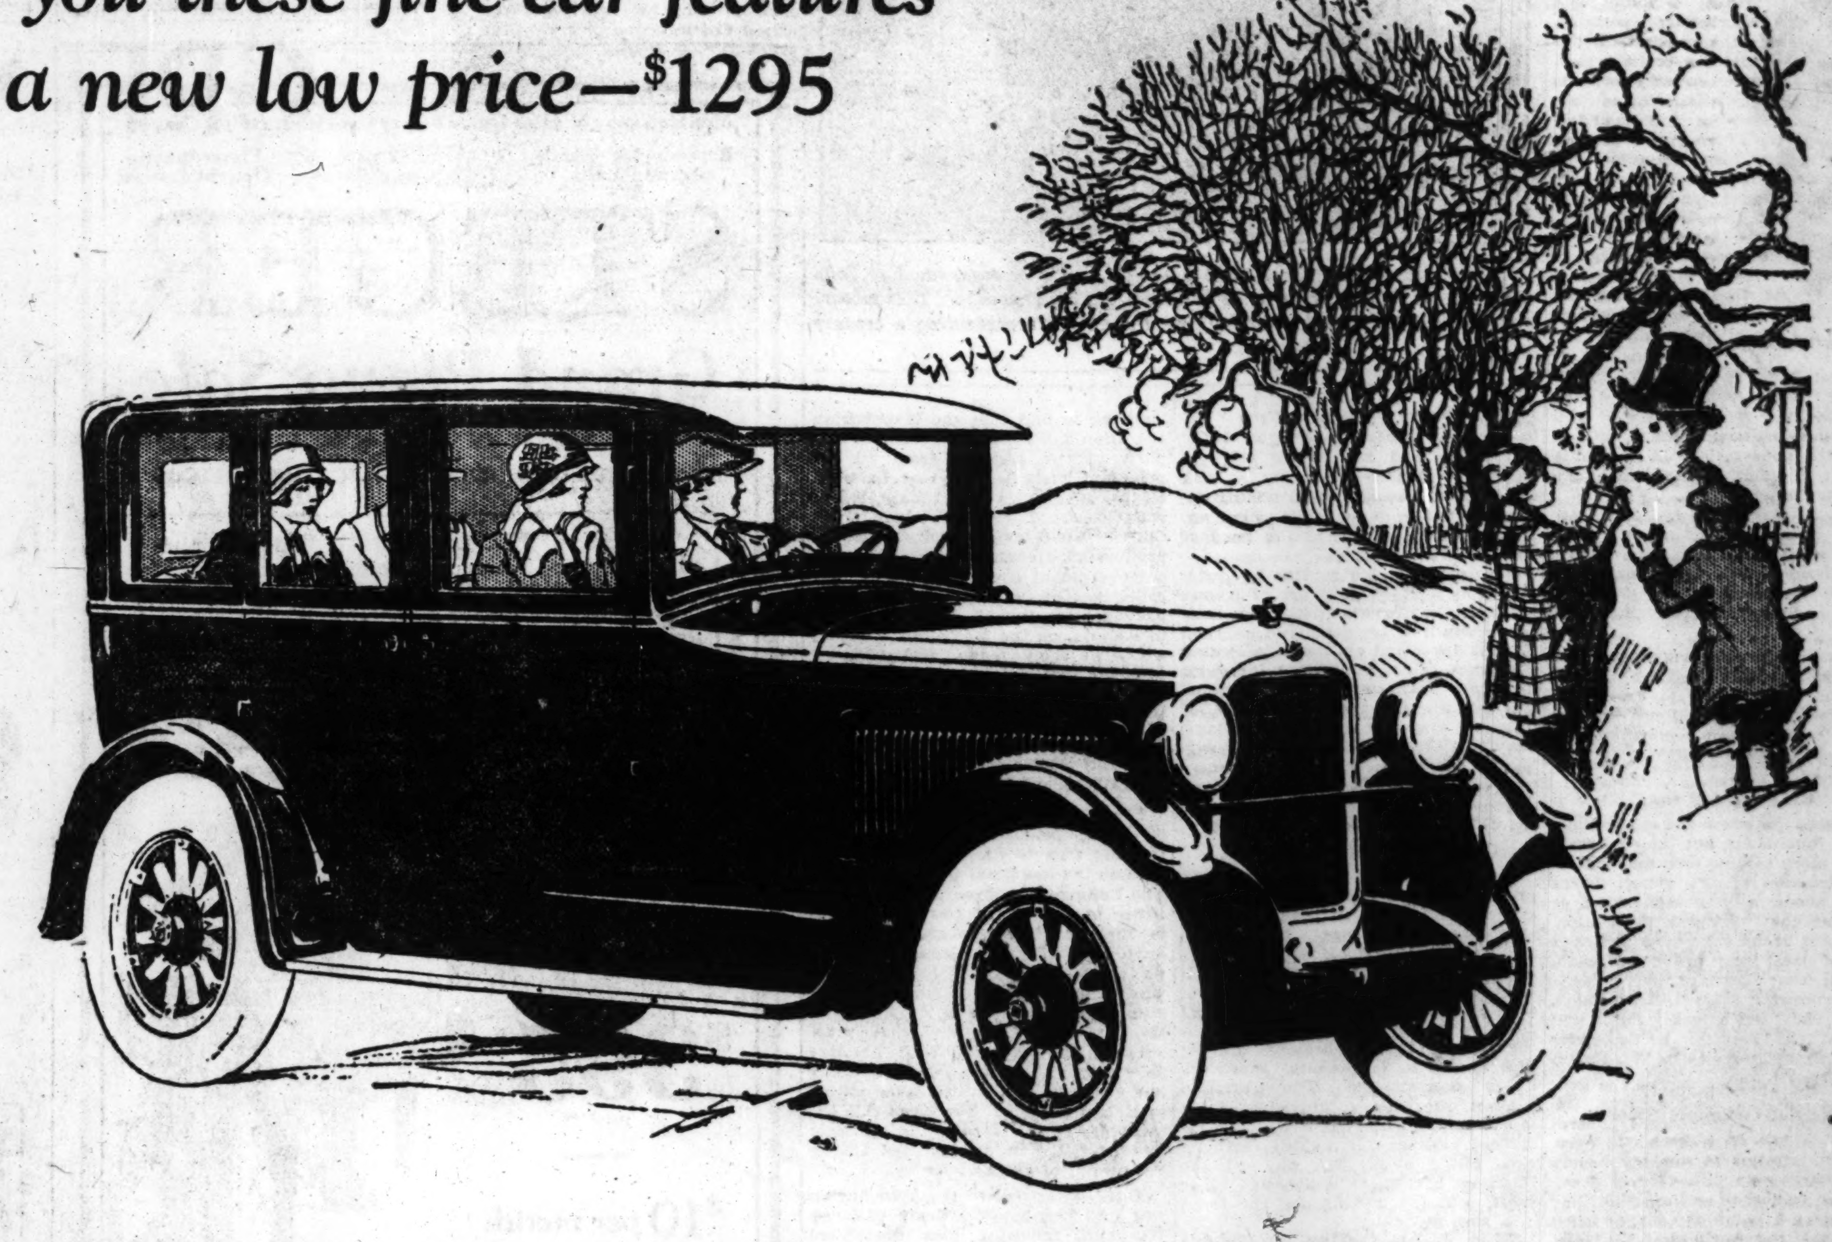
What Studebaker Saves

through One-Profit Manufacture

Gives you these fine-car features at a new low price—$1295



More power at less cost—according to the rating of the Society of Automotive Engineers, the Standard Six Sedan is the world's most powerful car of its size and weight. 28 Sedans have less rated horsepower yet sell for $100 to $1890 more.

Four wide doors—a real Sedan in every sense of the word, with surprising interior roominess and luxury.

Finer body construction — first grade northern white ash and hard maple are used in the body frames.

Costly alloy steels—we pay a premium to secure steel of extra quality. This insures greater dependability with longer life and lower upkeep costs. In 1925, sales of repair parts for all Studebaker cars averaged only $10 per car in operation.

Completely machined crankshaft — a feature found only in the most expensive cars. This insures perfect engine balance. Vibration is thereby eliminated.

Safety lighting control— on the steering wheel.

Automatic spark—regulated by speed of engine.

Coincidental lock to ignition and steering gear. A single key operates this lock as well as the locks on the door and on the spare-tire carrier.

Gasoline gauge, 8-day clock — speedometer, oil-pressure gauge and ammeter in oval group under glass. Walnut-finished instrument board.

Complete equipment includes automatic windshield cleaner, rear-view mirror, ash receiver, dome light, door pockets, attractive cowl lights, stop light, natural wood wheels.

One-Profit savings enable Studebaker to reduce the price of the Standard Six Sedan for the third time in 14 months

$1295—realize how amazingly low Studebaker has priced this Sedan of genuine fine-car quality. Three times since January 1, 1925, One-Profit savings have been passed on to purchasers of Studebaker cars in price reductions—although refinements and improvements have been added which make the present Studebakers the finest ever built.

It is impossible today for any other builder to produce a car of equal quality at the price, for Studebaker is the only manufacturer in the world equipped to build quality cars on a One-Profit basis.

Studebaker's unique facilities

Few motor car "manufacturers" have foundries, forges, etc., to make their own engines—yet one-fifth of an automobile's cost is in the engine. Even fewer build their own bodies—yet one-third of a car's cost is in the body.

Studebaker builds all its own bodies, all engines, all clutches, gear sets, springs, differentials, steering gears, brakes, axles, gray-iron castings and drop forgings. Only Ford in the low-price field and Studebaker in the fine-car field have such complete manufacturing facilities.

One-Profit value

These facilities enable Studebaker to manufacture quality cars on a One-Profit basis—eliminating outside profits. The savings thus effected are passed on to Studebaker owners in the form of higher quality and lower price.

Unit-Built construction

Studebaker facilities result, too, in cars designed, engineered and built as units. The hundreds of parts in a Studebaker function as a smooth-working unit, resulting in scores of thousands of miles of excess transportation, greater riding comfort and higher resale value.

Always kept up-to-date

Direct manufacturing control enables Studebaker to keep cars constantly up-to-date. We add improvements regardless of the calendar—we do not save them up for spectacular annual announcements which make cars artificially obsolete. Resale values are thus stabilized.

Rock bottom time-payment rates

Leading bankers, recognizing Studebaker stability, have made money available for financing Studebaker cars at low interest. They know Unit-Built cars bought at One-Profit prices and protected from depreciation by being always kept up-to-date, are exceptionally fine risks. Therefore, no car in the world is able to offer lower time-payment rates than Studebaker.

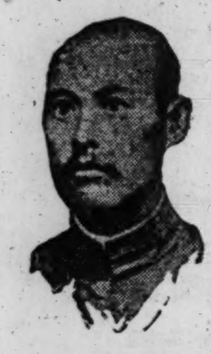
CHINA'S SPRING TO BE RED WITH DRAGON'S BLOOD

War Lords Must Fight Duel of Armies.

BY CHARLES DAILEY.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]
[Copyright: 1926: By The Chicago Tribune]



GEN. WU PEI-FU.

PEKING, Feb. 6.—The fighting in North China during the last month, although heralded as a major and decisive operation, was after all but the prelude to a serious blowup in the spring as soon as the milder weather makes it possible to throw men into the field. Recent operations decided nothing; they only brought to the public mind three factors that keen observers had known for some time:

1.—That Feng Yu-hsiang, the much-advertised Christian general, had succeeded so well in his alliance with Soviet Russia through contact with the Bolshevist government in Mongolia that fair supplies of Russian munitions were assured him.

2.—That Chang Tso-lin, the Manchurian warlord, had overstretched himself when he brought his armies of occupation inside the Great Wall and took possession of the provinces of Chihli, Shantung, Kiangsu, and Ahnwei.

3.—That the provisional government set up under Marshal Tuan Chi-jui, by agreement between Feng Yu-Hsiang and Chang Tso-lin, could not last because it was impossible for these two militarists to agree upon the division of the spoils.

Must Fight It Out.

The issue between these two men must be fought out, but the real issue is a far more serious one, and that is the destruction of the victor. There formed about a year ago what is known as the Yangtze Federation. Thus far it lacks coherence and is a series of local and provincial coalitions. In time—perhaps by spring—this slow-moving mass will become a concrete body and a leader for it will arise. At the moment he is under cover; he may prove to be Wu Pei-fu.

It was Wu Pei-fu who was the generalissimo of the Chihli party, the nearest semblance to a legal government China has had since the overthrow of the Manchu dynasty nearly fifteen years ago. It was this party under the leadership of Tsao Kun that encompassed the defeat of the Anfu-Manchurian coalition headed by Tuan Chi-jui and Chang Tso-lin and backed by Japan. The Washington conference took the starch out of that coalition by putting a crimp on Japan that held her tightly in Manchuria. Since that time Japan has played Chang Tso-lin to the exclusion of Tuan Chi-jui, and the last of the Anfu refugees quit the Japanese legation in Peking a year ago.

In an effort to readjust the situation as much as possible the Chihli party, under the leadership of Tsao Kun, restored the parliament and caused it to enact a constitution, and then Tsao Kun was elected to the presidency. It is freely charged, and probably is true, that Marshal Tsao bought many of the votes that were cast for him. It is probably equally true that many of the votes cast against him also were bought.

Builds Up a War Fund.

Chang Tso-lin had retired to Manchuria after his defeat by the Chihli forces under the leadership of Marshal Wu Pei-fu in 1922, and as ruler of the three eastern provinces, which he had dissociated from the Peking government after his defeat, he set to work to build up a great army and a war chest through the issue of Manchurian currency, which he forced upon the people. In the war of 1922 the Christian general, Feng Yu-hsiang, commanded a division under Wu Pei-fu and one of his brigades rendered valuable service in turning the flank of Chang Tso-lin almost under the shadow of the walls of Peking. It was this that turned the head of the Christian general.

Rewarded for his service by being made the military governor of Honan province, the Christian general doubled the strength of his command and had himself appointed chief of the Peking garrison. There he further increased his army until he had two divisions and two mixed brigades, in all 39,000 men, the majority of them Christians, for Feng is a fanatic, and wholesale baptism is a feature of his military training. Thus stood Feng Yu-hsiang at the opening of the second inning of the Chihli-Manchurian feud in 1924.

Chang Prepares for Revenge.

Meantime Chang Tso-lin had been preparing for the day of his revenge and with Japanese, British, and Russian experts had brought his army to a high state of efficiency. Then he began to make heavy demands upon the Peking government; he made a separate treaty with soviet Russia, and did other aggravating things. So in the autumn he was declared a rebel and President Tsao Kun sent Wu Pei-fu against him. The Christian general was made commander of the third army, holding the left wing. He did not wish to quit Peking, with its rich pickings in the way of the Hatamen Octroi, the police, and other graft, and left Peking for the front in a sore mood.

When in late October Wu Pei-fu's right wing was engaged in a death struggle with the Manchurian hordes inside the wall near Shanhaikwan, the Christian general suddenly withdrew his armies to Peking, which he occupied in the name of the people. With the desertion of Feng Yu-hsiang the center army gave way and the death locked right wing was destroyed in the greatest debacle in China's modern history. The Christian general held Peking, drove the boy emperor and empress from the imperial palace, looted it, and then set up the kuominchun, or peoples' army. President Tsao Kun and his chief followers were imprisoned on the first day of the coup d'etat, and those not put to death are still in jail and untried.

Seeks Opium Revenue.

Wu Pei-fu, without army or friends, fled to the upper Yangtze, to the neighborhood of Yochow, there to nurse his wounds. While the Christian general was consolidating himself in Peking the treachery aided Chang Tso-lin. He entered Tientsin, setting his Gen. Li Ching-lin up as governor of Chihli province, continued to Shantung, putting his own man as governor there, and then on to Shanghai, where the bait of a $20,000,000 yearly opium revenue attracted him.

The Christian general woke up one morning to find that the Manchurian operation had cut him off from all seaports and in addition from all the principal arsenals. He set to work on two lines, one a working agreement with Chang Tso-lin by which Tuan Chi-jui should be set up in Peking as provisional executive until some form of government could be devised. The other was his withdrawal of his own headquarters, though retaining Peking to Kalgan, on the Mongolian frontier, where he soon made arrangements with the Russian soviet to supply his vastly increased army with ammunition, the Christian general by now being in command of the entire northwest quadrant of China.

Withdraws from Manchuria.

Then began his movement to get rid of Chang Tso-lin in order that Feng, running true to Chinese form, might become the one great power in China. The Yangtze provinces naturally were eager to get rid of the Manchurian invader and began to exert pressure upon him, so much so that seeing he was stretched out from Mukden all the way to Shanghai, a distance of more than 1,500 miles, Chang Tso-lin began slowly to withdraw, at first under pressure of the newly formed Yangtze federation. Meantime Feng Yu-hsiang had put some of his allies in possession of Honan province. Troops of this element moved eastward to the strategic city of Hsuchow and flanked Chang Tso-lin out of the Yangtze valley.

Thus the retreat of the Manchurian war lord began. The army of Yueh Wei-chun, following him northward from Hsuchow, kept pressure on his rear and the Tiger began to withdraw through the Wall into his own provinces.

Then the situation entered a new phase, in November of last year. Gen. Kuo Sung-ling, who had been a subordinate in Manchuria, thought it was nearly over with his old chief, so he set out from Mukden for the south to block his retreat and enable the armies in his rear to come up and crush him. Here the Japanese took a hand. They threw a large force of soldiers into Mukden for the alleged protection of their nationals in that city, but really to pay an obligation owed to Chang Tso-lin for favors received and others promised.

Feng Takes Tientsin.

About this time, armies of Feng Yu-hsiang came down from Peking and in December engaged the forces of the Mukden general, Li Ching-lin, half way between Peking and Tientsin. At the same time, other forces of Gen. Li were engaged at Machang, some 40 miles south of Tientsin. The result was inevitable, and Feng Yu-hsiang's troops, about Christmas time, took possession of Tientsin and thus have an outpost for the better protection of control of Peking.

I. C. C. OFFICIAL OPPOSES TERMS OF CUMMINS' BILL

Washington, D. C., Feb. 6.—[Special.]—Provisions in the Cummins railroad consolidation bill, providing for recapture of net railway operating income in excess of 6 per cent and distribution of the excess among railroads earning less than 5 per cent, were criticized by Commissioner Henry C. Hall of the interstate commerce commission, before the senate interstate commerce committee today.

Commissioner Hall expressed doubt that the provisions would result in incentive to railroads to go forward with consolidations and declared that whatever the effect of them would be on the railroads, the effect on the commission, because of the difficulties in the way of obtaining valuations for recapture purposes, would be "immediate and stunning."

"It is not my view that stimulus or inducements are needed at the present time or for the visible future," declared Commissioner Hall.

VILLAGE CHIEF'S WEDDING LICENSE IN STOLEN CAR

On Jan. 5 Chief of Police Alfred Edward Garland of Glenview took out a license to wed Miss Katherine Moran. For some reason the wedding was delayed and the chief left the license in his automobile.

Yesterday, as the car stood in front of the Glenview fire house, three thieves stepped in and drove away. With them went the license and two dainty articles of feminine lingerie.

A few hours later Lieut. Maurice Byrne and his detective bureau squad found the automobile at Washington boulevard and Morgan street. Peter Garcia, 913 South Laflin street, was arrested, but the other two men escaped.

Lieut. Byrne called the Glenview chief and asked if he was in a hurry for the license. The chief said he thought he wouldn't need it until next January.

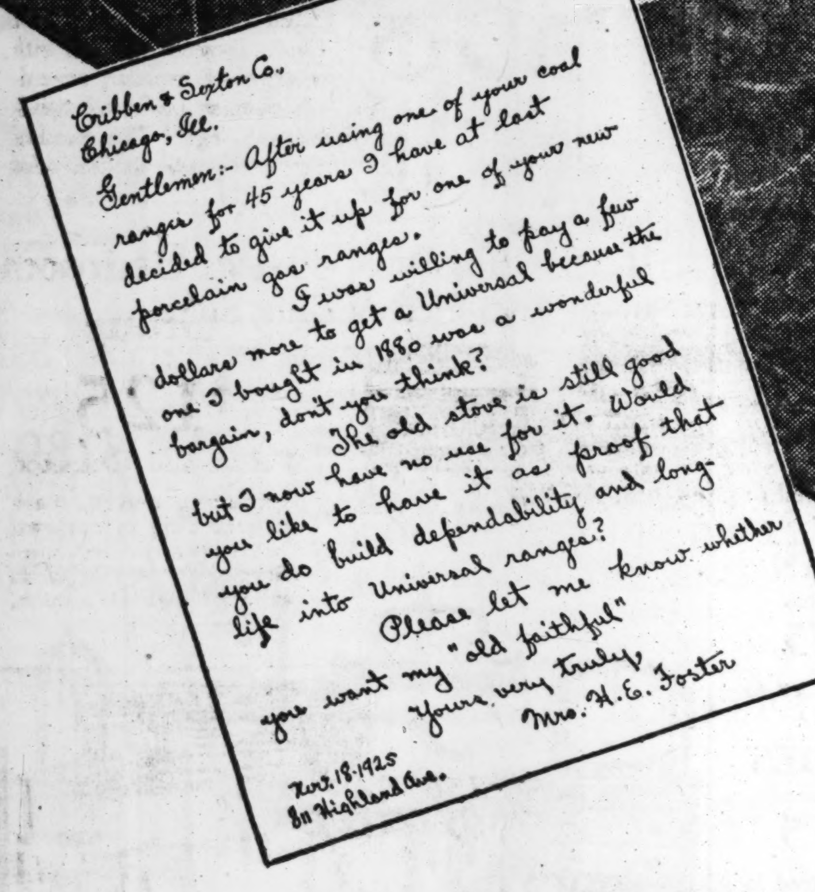
What Would You Do If You Had Used One Stove 45 Years And Wanted a New Gas Range?

—a true account of the experience of
Mrs. Foster, 811 Highland Ave., Oak Park, Ill.



Cribben & Sexton Co.
Chicago, Ill.

Gentlemen:- After using one of your coal ranges for 45 years I have at last decided to give it up for one of your new porcelain gas ranges.

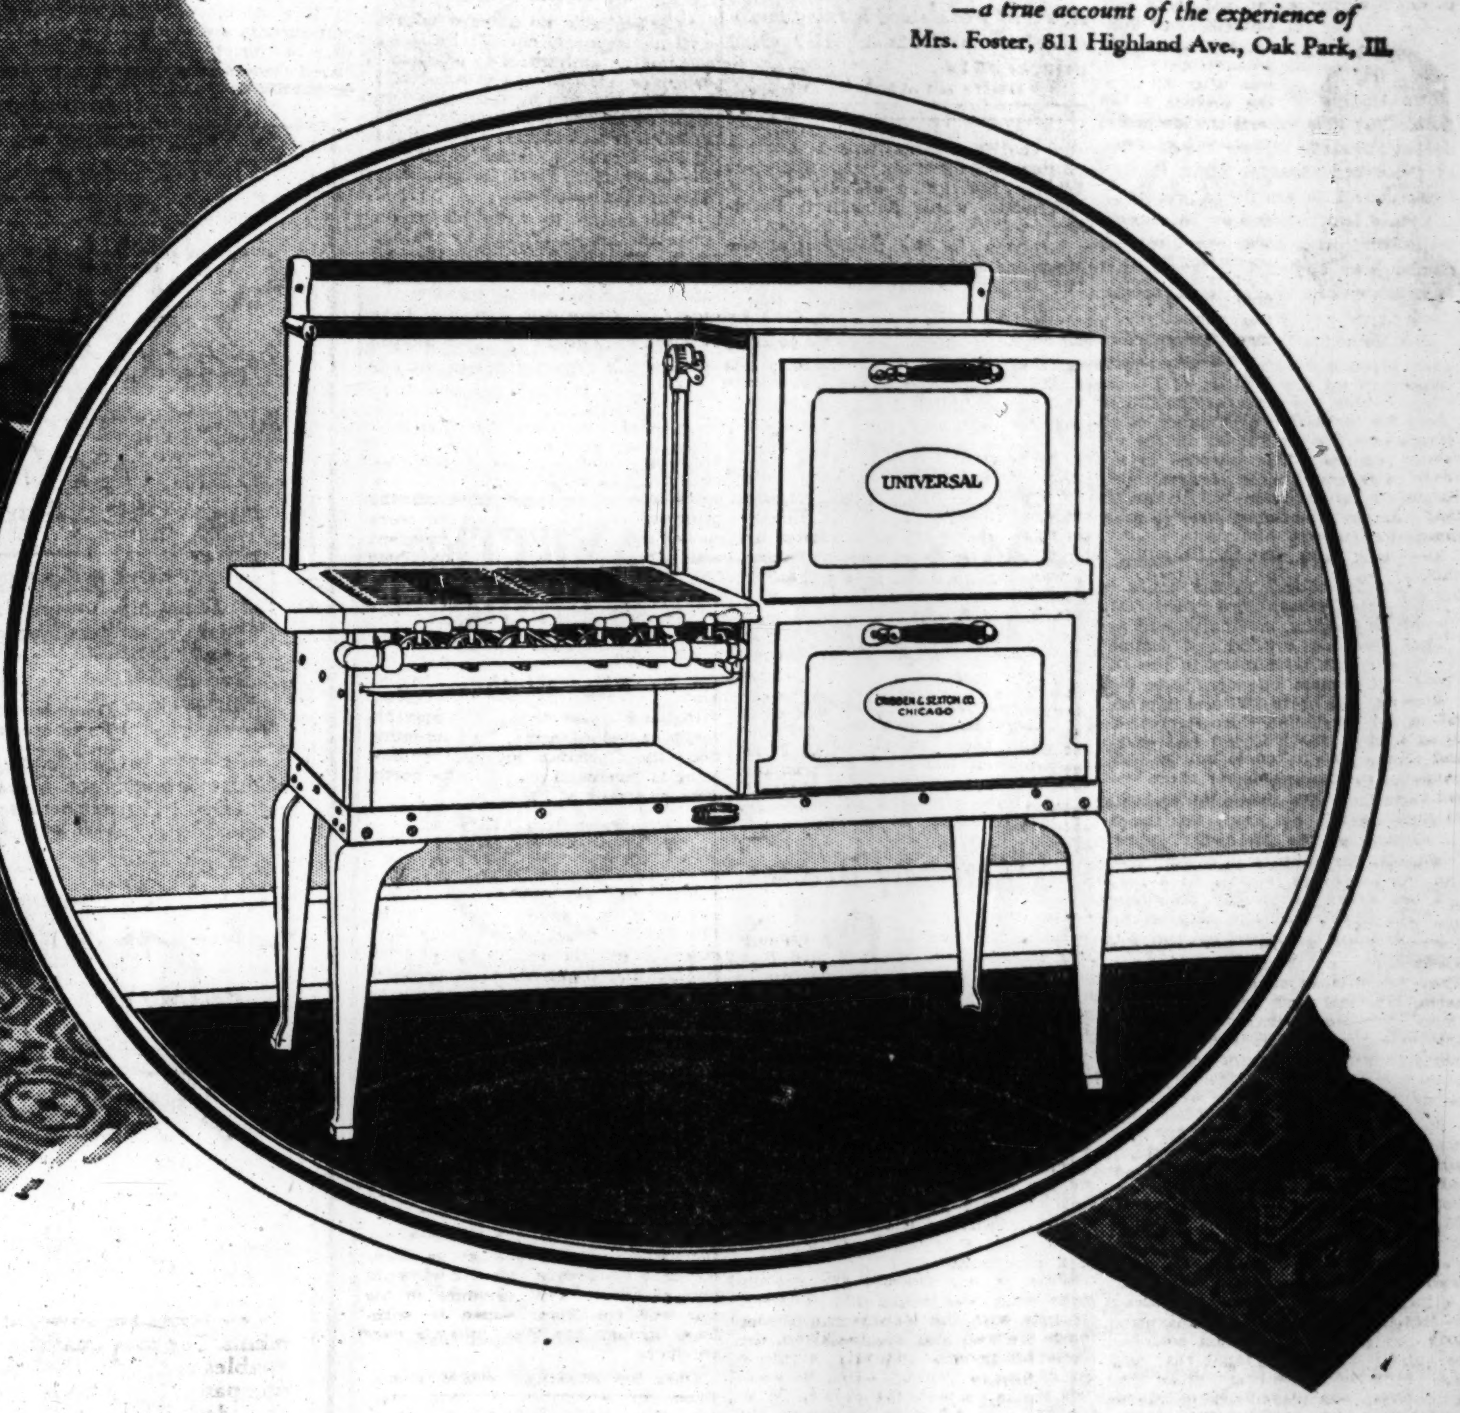
I was willing to pay a few dollars more to get a Universal because the one I bought in 1880 was a wonderful bargain, don't you think?

The old stove is still good but I now have no use for it. Would you like to have it as proof that you do build dependability and long-life into Universal ranges?

Please let me know whether you want my "old faithful"

Yours very truly,
Mrs. H. E. Foster

Nov. 18-1925
811 Highland Ave.



IN 1880, Mrs. Foster bought a Universal Coal Range made by Cribben & Sexton Co., of Chicago. She paid a few dollars more for it than she would have had to pay at that time for other stoves that looked "just as good."

But 45 years rolled by and her Cribben & Sexton Company stove served her steadily and faithfully with never the slightest indication of warping, cracking or breaking down.

The old stove is still in good condition. But last November her children insisted on her having a new porcelain gas range with an oven heat regulator and all the modern improvements.

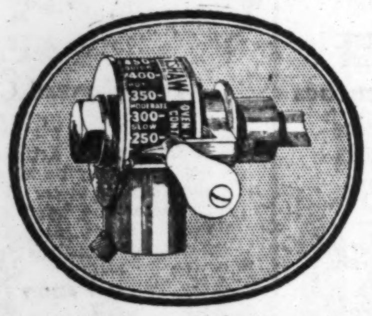
Mrs. Foster was finally persuaded to give up the "old faithful" Universal range. When she went to look at various new porcelain gas ranges she found that some were slightly cheaper than Universals. Some of these cheaper stoves were advertised as bargains.

But Mrs. Foster recalled her first experience in judging stove values. Read her letter. She did exactly what you would have done. She bought the Universal shown above and paid no more than any fine range costs.

And now, this lustrous white porcelain range stands in her kitchen—offering her all the advanced improvements and doubtless another 45 years of service and economy.

If you knew the beauty of Universal Gas Ranges to be unsurpassed; if you knew they offered all the approved labor-saving equipment; if you knew they would give you more years of trouble-free and expense-free service—if you were so sure of these things as Mrs. Foster and thousands of other women now are, would you not think Universal Gas Ranges the best bargains you could find?

These are exactly the reasons why it pays to select your new gas range at an Authorized Universal Store. They are made in many styles.



No Range is Modern Without An Oven Heat Regulator

If you knew how much easier and more satisfactory it is to bake on a range with the Universal Oven Heat Control, you would not tolerate an old-style stove. With it you can put a pie or a cake in the oven—set the regulator at the proper adjustment and go about your other work and forget the pie or cake and it will be baked to just the proper brown.

CRUSADERS ASK BLUE LAW COP TO REVIVE SABBATH

Needed to Save U.S. from Bowwows, They Insist.

BY ARTHUR SEARS HENNING.
[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Washington, D. C., Feb. 6.—[Special.]—A widespread drive, backed by powerful church organizations, is now under way for the enactment of Sunday blue laws by congress and state legislatures.

The leaders of the drive are the Lord's Day alliance and the Methodist Sabbath Crusade. Under the direction of these organizations strict Sunday observance bills are being pressed in the state legislatures now in session, while congress is being urged to pass similar laws applying to the District of Columbia and interstate transportation.

The Methodist Sabbath Crusade has been given a hearing by the senate committee on the District of Columbia at which the crusaders submitted pleas for legislation prohibitory of all forms of labor on Sunday in the national capital. The purpose is not only to enforce Sunday observance by statute in Washington, but to furnish an example of enforced piety to other communities.

"U. S. Going to Bowwows" Claim.

A bill introduced in the house by Representative Lankford [Dem., Ga.] prohibits dancing, moving picture and other theaters, bowling and commercialized sports on Sunday in the District of Columbia, offenders to be punished by fines up to $500 and imprisonment up to six months. Representative Keller [Rep., Minn.] has offered a similar bill to close barber shops on Sunday in Washington.

According to a memorial presented to the senate by Noah W. Cooper, chairman of the Methodist Sabbath Crusade, our country is rapidly going to the bowwows morally as a result of the decay of Sunday observance.

"We insist that our national Sabbath is being fast destroyed," says the memorial. "What is the proof?

"1. Nearly 10,000,000 people are working on Sunday in America in the railroads, express companies, telegraphs, shipping, newspapers, stores, and factories.

"2. Our interstate commerce, the biggest in the world, has no Sabbath. Congress is its civic guardian.

"3. About 20,000,000 Sunday newspapers are printed, shipped, sold, patronized, and read every Sunday through interstate commerce. This traffic goes through every state, a Sabbath-polluting, nation destroying stream of evils. It pulses unrestrained throughout the District of Columbia.

"4. Our capital city, once a Sabbath keeper, now is an evil example of Sabbath breaking that is polluting all our nation.

"Trains Tooting U. S. Downfall."

"Every one of the 20,000,000 Sunday papers is like a wicked pied piper of Hamelin, seducing our children, churchmen, and citizens to ruin through Sabbath breaking.

"Every one of these 200 Sunday trains is tooting America's downfall, riding America to ruin. These Sunday trains and papers combine much of the brains and money of America, and they are tearing down America's partnership with God.

"Lincoln set free 3,000,000 Negro slaves. We have the greater and harder task of emancipating 10,000,000 slaves to Sunday labor. America and ourselves must answer God's call to duty or go like Israel to the Babylon of perdition.

10,000,000 Sunday Slaves.

"We have faith that America, like Samuel of old, will hear and heed God's call.

"And we repeat:

"1. America was born and bred a Sabbath keeping nation.

"2. America must emancipate her 10,000,000 slaves to Sunday labor or soon go to ruin.

"3. The church must awake and lead, or perish."

Opposing the blue law crusade of the church organizations is another church organization, the Religious Liberty Association of Seventh Day Adventists, whose Sabbath is Saturday.

Replying to the memorial of the Methodist Sabbath Crusade committee, the Religious Liberty association says:

"We are just as zealous to induce all men to observe the Sabbath as our Methodist brethren, but we believe that both we and our Methodist brethren ought to appeal to the conscience through the pulpit and not to the civil magistrate through the legislator.

Others Oppose Cop in Church.

"Sunday observance is a religious obligation which was originated by the churches, and it has no other status than the authority of the church ritual.

"The religious legalist is satisfied with a crumb if he later can grab the whole loaf. When once the flood gates of religious legislation are opened—a deluge is destined to follow. No one objects to the preachers preaching Sunday observance or Sabbath observance from their pulpits in thundering tones and making as many converts as possible, but there are, comparatively few who are agreeable to the legal program of the political preachers who seek to make converts by the aid of civil law under penalty.

"Nearly every red blooded American citizen resents religion by law. Let the churches discipline their own members when they disregard the church creed and religious duties, but they have no right to discipline the nonchurch member for his lack of religion or divergent views on religion, nor has the church a right to shift the duty of church discipline upon the civil magistrate.

Cite Christ's Example.

"Christ made no alliance with the civil government, nor did he ask aid of the civil authorities to advance his cause or enforce his doctrines. He based his kingdom upon the great principle of love and voluntary service. Faith, instead of force; choice, instead of coercion; love, instead of fear, was the basis upon which he proposed to advance his kingdom.

"He sought to write his precepts upon the hearts of men by the spirit of the living God instead of inscribing them upon the statute books of the state by the pen of the legislator. He was an intercessor and not an accuser; a redeemer, and not a policeman; a savior of sinners, and not an executioner. Christ sought to make Christianity inspirational and not legalistic—attractive and not repulsive. God made the conscience free in the domain of religion, and he never intended that any organization of men should ever enslave it."

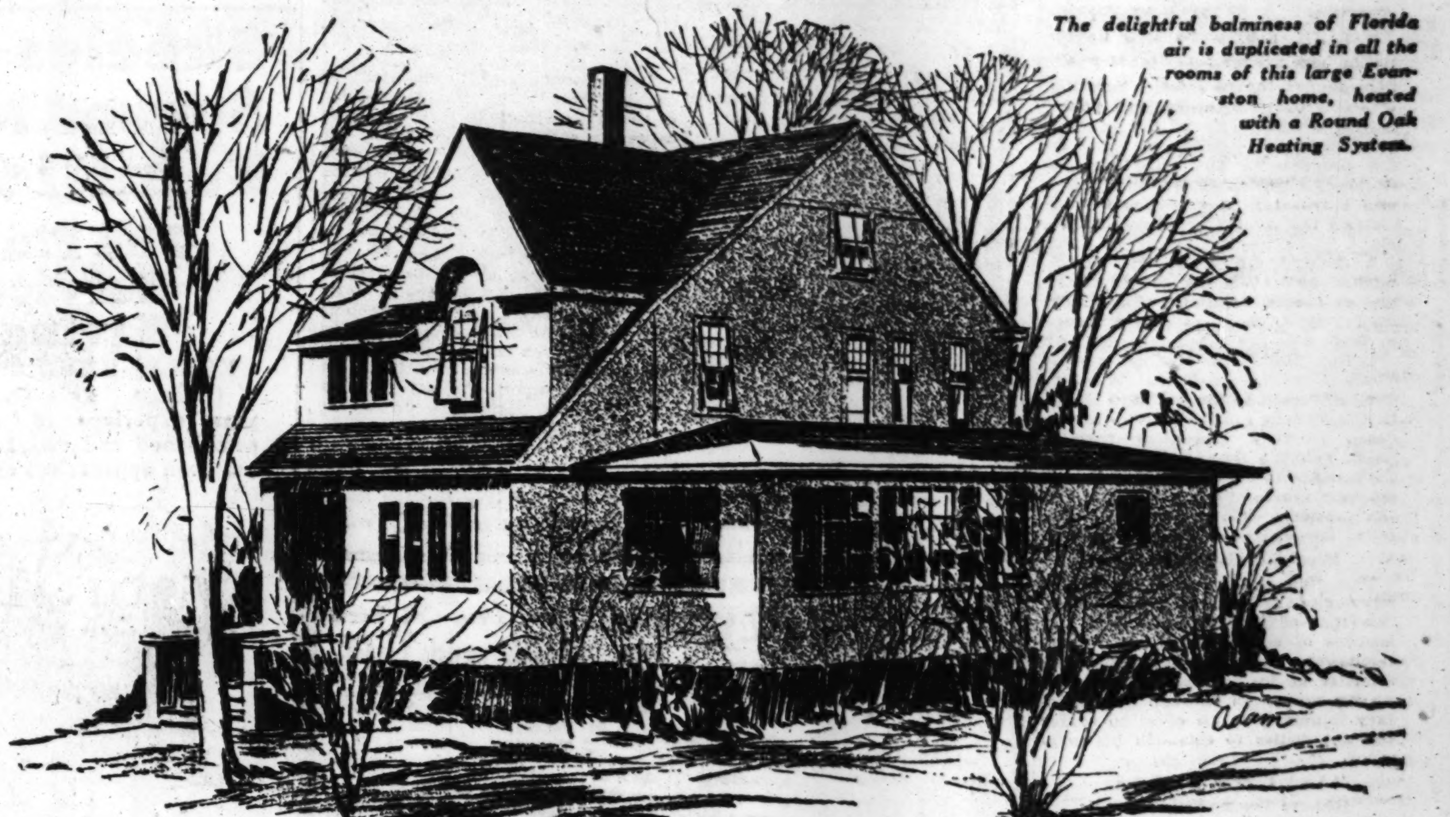
"We Are Not Going To Florida This Winter!"

"Why should we? When we can have the same delightful combination of warmth and fresh air right in our own house.

"Our Round Oak Furnace has proved to our satisfaction that a healthful temperature is not a question of geography but of the right heating plant. We find that the delightful, balmy freshness of the Land of Eternal Youth has been duplicated by the Round Oak Folks in our home.

"I am not an expert and can't pretend to say how they do it, but they get results. We have none of that close, stuffy air which used to make the family suffer with colds all winter.

"Now we have an even temperature—72° if we want to be extra warm, but 68° most of the time. The air is moist, balmy and always fresh. No wonder thousands of people are buying Round Oak Furnaces.



The delightful balminess of Florida air is duplicated in all the rooms of this large Evanston home, heated with a Round Oak Heating System.

Let the Round Oak Folks Do the Installing—

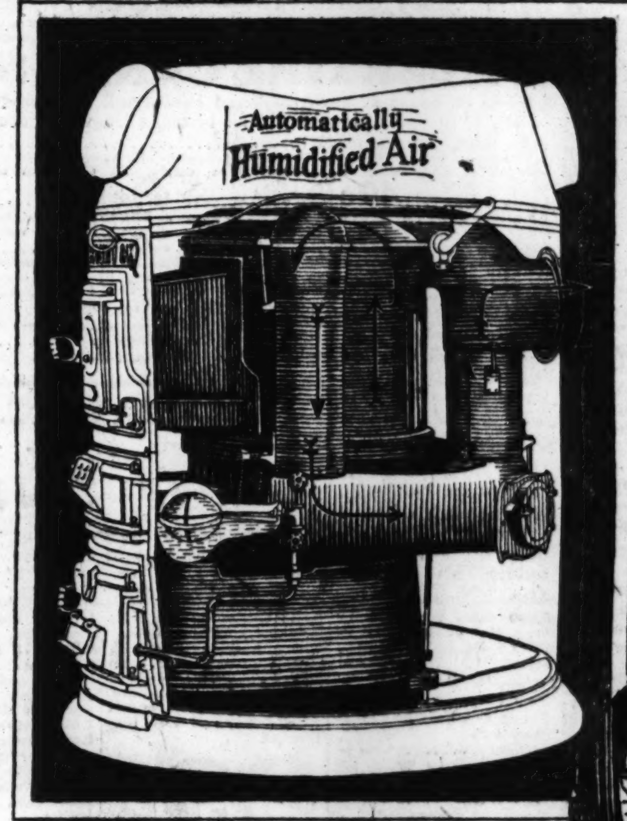
And Guarantee the Job Complete

When you order a Round Oak Furnace, the Round Oak Folks assume responsibility for the entire installation. The finest furnace on earth could not give satisfactory service unless it is installed properly. Every home is different. Different rooms—doors—windows and in other conditions which affect the heating system. The Round Oak Folks study all these things and plan the heating plant to fit them. Then guarantee the entire job.

Result—every room warm—healthful circulation of air, getting the most heat from the fuel burned, extra long life from your furnace because of proper installation, and many other features which every home owner wants.

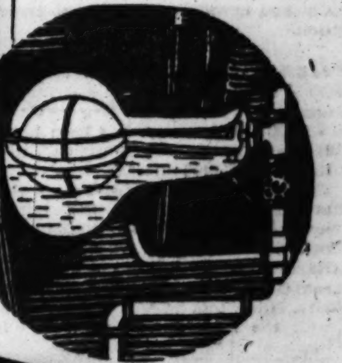
Pay From Income—Save Money

Order your furnace at once on the Round Oak Thrift Plan. Responsible home owners will find the Round Oak Folks glad to arrange convenient time payments—only a small payment down—only a few dollars a month. By paying from income you actually save the cost of your furnace. Ask our nearest Round Oak Distributor.



For Oil Burning, Too

Oil burners are becoming more popular—more in demand. Almost every home owner plans on having one now or later. When you are ready for an Oil Burner you can install one in your Round Oak Furnace and be sure of getting the best results regardless of what make of Oil Burner you buy. For use with an Oil Burner, the Round Oak Furnace has no equal. In no other warm air furnace do you find the hand fitted, air tight joints, such large heating surfaces and such long fire travel which means so much in economical heating with any fuel, especially oil.



Round Oak humidity is automatic. The air in a Round Oak heated home is never thirsty because the water pan in the furnace is always full—kept full by this Automatic Valve. Ask your Round Oak man to tell you about it.

BARE BOMB PLOT OF ARMY TERROR RING IN BERLIN

'Black Reichswehr' Aim to Kill President Shown

BY SIGRID SCHULTZ.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

[Copyright: 1926: By The Chicago Tribune.]

BERLIN, Feb. 6—To blow up the Berlin stock exchange, murder the then Minister of the Interior Severing, who now controls the national police, murder President Ebert, and proclaim a military dictatorship, was once on the program of the inner ring of Germany's "black reichswehr." This was revealed in a sensational interview in the Acht Uhr Abendblatt tonight.

A former officer of the "black reichswehr" gives the details of the plot of Lieuts. Schulz and Eisenbeck, Maj. Buchrucker, and others named as leaders of the "black reichswehr." The Rev. Mr. Schulz of Angermuende administered the so-called "Fredericus Rex" oath to the members placed in the "black reichswehr" to accept death if they committed treason. Lieut. Schulz's former aide described the attempt to blow up the boerse and smuggle murderers into the guard of the president of the republic, which failed because of police intervention.

Fascist Claims Innocence.

The Fascist leader, Herr Wulle, member of the Prussian diet and right hand man of Gen. von Ludendorff, and accused of complicity in the "black reichswehr" crimes, has informed the minister of justice that he will give up his protection through parliamentary immunity in an effort to enable the authorities to establish his innocence.

Link Forger in Murder.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

BUDAPEST, Hungary, Feb. 6.—Officials tried today to establish that a man named Schulz, alleged to have been one of the leaders in the 30,000,000,000 French franc forgery plot, was actually the man who murdered former Minister of Finance Erzberger of Germany. The murderer, Herr Schulz, has taken refuge in Budapest. Prince Windisch-Graetz, the leader of the counterfeiters, declared he had known Herr Schulz since 1923, which was the year when Herr Schulz fled, but could not positively identify pictures of the assassin.

Kenosha Releases Suspect in Lovers' Lane Slayings

Ewald Miller, who has been held at Kenosha in connection with an investigation of his whereabouts on the night of the slaying of James Sears and Madeline Latimer last October, was released yesterday to the Racine police. After Miller, whose home is in Racine, had been given a twenty day sentence on charges of wife beating Mrs. Miller told a story connecting him with the Lovers' lane murders. Her husband denied the charges.

PREMIER BETHLEN FACES FALL OVER FORGERY PLOT

BY GEORGE SELDES.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

[Copyright: 1926: By The Chicago Tribune.]

BUDAPEST, Feb. 6.—The French ambassador today called on Premier Count Bethlen to discuss the progress of Hungary's action to force restitution to French banks for the 30,000,000,000 French franc forgery plot, which apparently is not entirely satisfactory. It is reported that new demands sent by Premier Briand were delivered.

Meanwhile, the political muddle is becoming more acute. All of Count Bethlen's enemies are seemingly concentrating upon Count Teleki for his successor. Count Emerich Karolyi, cousin of Michael Karolyi and one of the strongest supporters of Admiral Horthy, publishing an attack on Count Bethlen, said:

"Count Bethlen is trying to pull a curtain over the relationship of the Hungarian forgers with the German monarchists. The French will not forgive such methods. Sooner or later the French will get to the bottom of this."

Count Karolyi's attack is taken to indicate that the entire right wing of parliament is giving support to Count Bethlen, which will make his position untenable. The count unseated Stefan Friedrich, the first Hungarian premier after the armistice, by the same tactics as he is now using against Count Bethlen.

Skeeles-Biddle Have Served Many Chicago Families for Years

The Finest of Funeral Service at a Distinct Saving of 1-3 to 1-2

SKEELES-BIDDLE funeral service is no new thing in Chicago. This organization represents more than 50 years' experience in funeral direction in this city. It has established and maintains a standard of service which is not even approached elsewhere.

ROBERTS STUDIOS

Equipment Unmatched in America

Skeeles-Biddle experience is backed by the most complete equipment of any funeral organization. We maintain the Skeeles-Biddle Memorial Chapels—one on the south side, one on the north side—the use of which is free to those we serve. These chapels, monumental in size, elegant magnificence and beauty, embody many features of thoughtful convenience and privacy found only here. Transportation is perfect. Skeeles-Biddle limousines have no superior. Skeeles-Biddle service, if an out of town funeral is desired, will be arranged completely in other cities with the same care as in Chicago and without worry or distraction.

Skeeles-Biddle Service is identical at both our South and North Side establishments. At each location will be found a magnificent memorial chapel: the South Side establishment, just opened, is pictured at the top of this announcement; the Uptown Memorial Chapel directly above. Either Skeeles-Biddle Memorial Chapel provides ample room for several hundred people.

Best for Home, Chapel or Church

No matter what the preference may be, the Skeeles-Biddle organization is ready any hour, day or night, to bring to the family complete relief of every detail, thoughtfully, carefully, and at the lowest possible expense.

Finest Caskets as low as $25

Save 1-3 to 1-2

Although the finest of funeral direction is supplied it is not extravagant nor need it be costly. Skeeles-Biddle prices do actually save ⅓ to ½ of prices commonly charged elsewhere. Your credit is good here.

SEEK PEACE IN REMAPPING WAR BY COMPROMISE

Divided Powers Proposed at Hamilton Club.

Shall the Chicago-downstate issue over representation in the legislature be settled by a compromise that eventually will give the city and the country a definite check on each other?

That question has been taken up by the Hamilton club as the only probable solution of long controversy that has engendered so much bitterness between Chicago and rural Illinois.

The proposed compromise, still only loosely formed, is for Chicago to accept a fixed limitation on its representation in one house, probably the senate, with the lower house apportioned on the basis of population. A few more years, it is pointed out, would give Cook county control of the house while downstate control would be perpetuated in the senate.

Discuss Compromise Plan.

Yesterday the entire afternoon was spent by the political action committee of the Hamilton club, where the compromise move started, in discussing the question of an amendment to the Illinois constitution to bring about the solution proposed.

The meeting started as a debate between John A. Watson, attorney for John B. Fergus in the pending mandamus suit to compel the legislature to reapportion under the existing provisions of the constitution, and former State Senator Otis F. Glenn of Murphysboro, who is now practicing law in Chicago.

Mr. Glenn suggested such a compromise as just mentioned. Mr. Watson and Mr. Fergus, who also spoke, summed up their arguments thus: "Give us what the constitution now says we may have, what has been denied us for fifteen years, before you start any talk of compromise."

Little Encouragement for Fergus.

Mr. Fergus was praised by almost every speaker for his patriotic motives, but beyond that he got little sympathy and less encouragement for the success of his suit.

Would it be a good thing for the state as a whole and for Chicago if the city had complete control of the legislature?

Most of the speakers, including former Senator Frank P. Sadler, President W. W. Beebe of the club, and Julius R. Kline, thought not.

The discussion got beyond its original bounds when Mr. Sadler said Chicago would benefit more by home rule than by control of the legislature. Mr. Kline said there is so much diversified thought in Chicago that he wondered what kind of home rule it would be.

Gives Congress as Example.

Mr. Glenn used congress as an illustration of his plan—fixed representation in the senate and proportionate representation in the house. Much was said about the character of legislators but when it came to a comparison of Chicagoans with downstaters in the assembly nobody could satisfactorily locate either virtue or vice by geographical describtion.

Mr. Fergus had defenders in Stephen A. Day and Mrs. E. W. Bemis, Democratic member of the county board. Attorney Lloyd Heth presided. When the meeting was over everybody seemed to hold to his original conviction.

HUNT WITNESSES

JOSEPH LUBY.

To give the police time to locate witnesses, the inquest into the death of Joseph Luby, 31 years old, 7938 South Carpenter street, a former business agent of the Journeymen Plumbers' union, who was shot Wednesday night and died Friday evening, was continued until February 24. Bernard Cruice, secretary of the Plumbers' union, yesterday said the charge that Luby has been a gangster was untrue. He asserted he never knew Luby to carry concealed weapons of any kind. The Luby funeral will be held from his home tomorrow to St. Sabina's church.

Father of Six Gets 20 Year Term for Slaying

James Dascola, 45 years old, father of six children, must serve a twenty year sentence in the penitentiary for the murder of Robert Killion, Judge Walter P. Steffen decided yesterday, overruling a motion for a new trial. Evidence was offered to show that Killion took home Minnie Dascola, 18 years old, late one night last August. He was met by the father and a quarrel followed in which Killion was shot and killed.

DETAILS

Many details added together complete a task. These details, carefully combined and painstakingly accomplished, enable the finished product to be termed "genuine quality."

Masters of artistry—modern and old—many times took years to complete their works. No detail was overlooked.

The markets of the world are full of products just good enough, but no great thing has ever been accomplished—no permanent success achieved—without a determination to see that every detail, no matter how small, was well and honestly done. However mistaken the individual worker may be, it is well to have a final thought: "No one could do better."

ENGINEERS O. K. LAKE DIVERSION FOR WATERWAY

10,000 Cubic Feet Is Not Too Much, They Say.

BY ARTHUR EVANS.

Chicago's diversion of 10,000 cubic feet per second from Lake Michigan, while not affecting lake levels seriously, will, by the completion of the lakes to gulf waterway, give farmers, producers, manufacturers, and shippers of the middle west and gulf states a chance to meet the competition of the Panama canal, engineering experts pointed out yesterday.

The findings of twenty-eight specialists of international reputation on the engineering board of review of the sanitary district furnished an authoritative text. In discussing the important use for navigation purposes of the water diverted at Chicago, the twenty-eight experts, after pointing out that the $100,000,000 drainage canal was designed so as to be available as a waterway, say:

"The diversion of 10,000 cubic feet per second at Chicago would make feasible a 9 foot channel withhout locks from the Gulf of Mexico to within 100 miles of Chicago, and but five locks, to be paid for by the people of Illinois, will be necessary for the remainder of the distance.

Ohio River Costly to United States.

"Whereas the Ohio river improvement contemplates some 54 locks between Pittsburgh and Cairo, all built or building, at a direct cost to the United States government.

"The improved Illinois waterway will adequately connect the Mississippi valley with the great lakes. Such a connection will encourage navigation and will give the midle west and gulf states the benefits to be derived from ample and desirable facilities for water borne commerce between the gulf and the lakes. Such a waterway is of international importance, and, with the completion of the improvements in the Illinois river, is a possibility within three or four years."

Explain Causes of Low Levels.

The twenty-eight engineers after a study of records of lake levels since 1860, declare that the greatest factor in producing fluctuations of the levels of the great lakes is the variation from year to year of the natural climatic conditions, chiefly rainfall and evaporation.

The approximate lowering of Lakes Michigan and Huron is at present 31 inches below normal. Of this, unusually light rainfall and large evaporation from 1919 to 1923 is responsible for thirteen inches. Storage in Lake Superior accounts for three inches; diversions by canals from Lake Erie, two inches, and enlargement of the Lake Huron outlets, eight inches. Thus these causes have lowered the levels twenty-six inches. Diversion at Chicago has caused only a five inch drop.

William Nelson Pelouze, chairman of the Illinois commission on the Great Lakes-St. Lawrence Deep Waterway, in an analysis issued yesterday, treats the diversion at Chicago as a navigation necessity if the middle west is to meet the competition of the Panama canal and the advantages it gives the Atlantic seaboard.

Chicago Shippers Handicapped.

"It costs a manufacturer in Chicago," he says, "more to ship his products to either the Atlantic cr Pacific coast than it does his seaboard competitor at New York to ship the same product all the way to the Pacific coast by the Panama canal.

"The second class freight rate from Chicago to San Francisco in less than carload lots is $4.43 per hundred weight. The same product can be shipped from New York to San Francisco by way of the Panama canal for $1.40 per hundredweight. The only way a manufacturer in the central west can compete with his eastern competitor for the Pacific coast trade is by first paying the freight to New York.

"There is not a city on the Illinois or Desplaines river that is not 2,000 miles nearer Liverpool by the way of the St. Lawrence than by ways of the Mississippi and Gulf of Mexico. There is not a city on the great lakes as far east as Buffalo that is not correspondingly nearer the Panama canal by way of the Illinois and Mississippi rivers than by way of the Atlantic ocean.

Sees Ocean Ports on Lakes.

"When the St. Lawrence waterway is opened, the cities on our great lakes will become ocean ports. Farmers and manufacturers of the central west will be on an equality basis, so far as freight is concerned, with their eastern competitors.

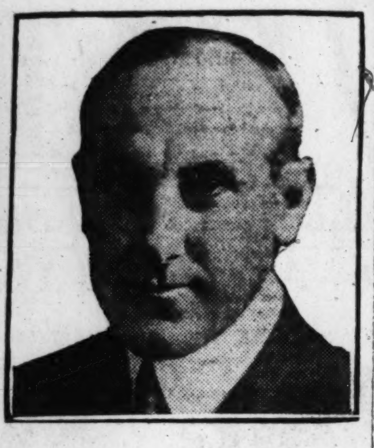
"The Illinois waterway will prove the panacea for the industries of the central west in solving the Panama canal problem. It will place farmers and manufacturers of the middle west on an equality, so far as freight is concerned, with their seaboard competitors in their trade with the Pacific coast and all trade served by the Panama canal."

GUILTY OF $25,130 EMBEZZLEMENT.

St. Louis, Mo., Feb. 6.—(AP)—William P. Durkan, former vice president and manager of the City Trust company, today pleaded guilty to three counts of an indictment resulting from his embezzlement of $25,130 in January, 1924. Federal Judge Davis sentenced him to six months in jail on each of two counts, fined him $1,000 on the third, then paroled him on the first two counts.

Movie Notables Hurt in Crash

Vera Steadman, actress, who was injured in crash that cost life of Marie Prevost's mother.



Al Christie, comedy producer, who was also injured in New Mexico auto accident.

MARIE PREVOST'S MOTHER KILLED IN AUTO CRASH

Vera Steadman, Film Star, and Al Christie Hurt.

Los Angeles, Cal., Feb. 6.—[U. P.]—Mrs. H. Prevost, mother of Marie Prevost, motion picture star, was killed, and Al Christie, comedy producer, and Vera Steadman, actress, were seriously injured in an automobile accident 23 miles east of Lordsburg, N. M., according to advices here today.

The machine in which the film party was riding overturned, it was said, while traveling about 30 miles an hour on a slippery road.

Christie and Miss Steadman were pinned under the wreckage and narrowly escaped death. The actress sustained bruises and lacerations about the face and lower limbs, while Christie escaped with a lacerated arm and head.

The producer and Miss Steadman are in the hospital at Lordsburg. After an inquest the body of Mrs. Prevost was to be brought to Los Angeles. The film party left Hollywood last Wednesday, headed for Palm Beach, Fla.

JAS. E. REND AND MANOLA S. ROOT LICENSED TO WED

James E. Rend, a son of the late William P. Rend, millionaire coal dealer, yesterday obtained a license to wed Manola Shirley Root.

Mr. Rend and his bride could not be reached last night. At the home of Mr. Rend's brother, Joseph P. Rend, 70 East Scott street, it was said that no information on the wedding could be given.

On Nov. 19, 1925, James E. Rend sued Mrs. Mabelle Rend for divorce, alleging she deserted him five years before. In 1924, his son, James E. Rend Jr., sued his parents to recover $350,000 left in trust by William P. Rend. The younger Rend alleged that his father and mother schemed to defeat a clause of the will which stated that if any of the stocks in the $350,000 trust were sold, the entire amount should revert to the son. The son lost

SEES SCHOOL OF FUTURE RUN ON FREUDIAN LINES

School teachers of the future will be experts in emotional complexes as well as the "three R's," Dr. William B. Owen, president of the Chicago Normal college, predicted in a talk to the Ella Flagg Young club at the Great Northern hotel yesterday.

"Freud's theories on the subconscious mind have had an important bearing on American education," he said. "Though some of his reasoning is fantastic, a part is sound, and this is being applied in the classroom."

Children of the next generation, Dr. Owen said, will be taught self-expression, determination and the conquering of fear as they now are taught spelling and arithmetic. The subconscious mind of the educated child, he prophesied, will be a slave, not a master.

GIRL, 19, ELOPES WITH MOTHER'S ADMIRER OF 59

T. Fred Laramie, 59 year old attorney with offices at 105 North Clark street, and Miss Marion F. Powell, 19 years old, obtained a marriage license at Crown Point, Ind., yesterday.

Miss Powell's mother, Mrs. Grace L. Powell of 4116 Irving Park boulevard, obtained a warrant for the arrest of the attorney on Dec. 3, charging that he had taken the girl to a hotel after a cabaret party. At the time Mrs. Powell said that her daughter had boasted that she would steal Laramie, who had been for some years an admirer of the mother.

Laramie was once city solicitor of Maywood. He was also a politician in the Twentieth ward and was candidate for the state legislature in 1902.

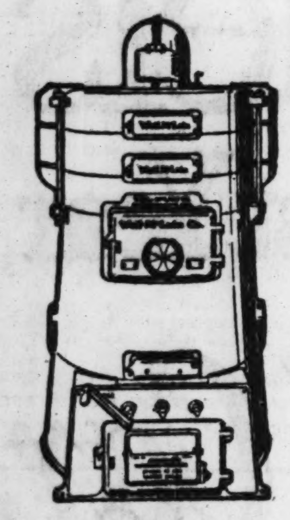
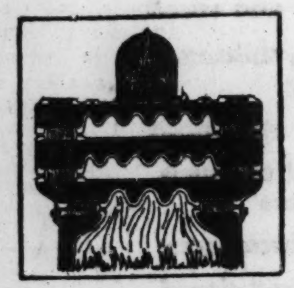
Read Why! On all sides you hear men talking about this boiler improvement. "Think of enlarging the heat-surface without increasing the size or price of the boiler," says one. "Makes flat heating surfaces as obsolete as the old horse and buggy," says another. "What a difference in fuel economy a few corrugations make!" says a third.



Round Type Boiler

For steam, vapor, vacuum and hot water heating; made in sizes for bungalows, residences and small apartments



Note particularly that these boilers have fuel saving corrugations in every section

Weil-McLain Boilers give you more heating surface

Heating Surface Increased

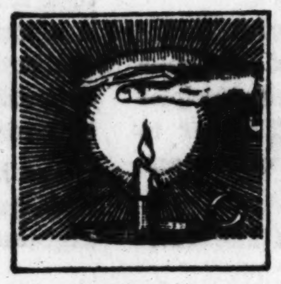
Less than five years ago Weil-McLain Boilers brought to the public a new conception of heating efficiency and economy. Home owners quickly grasped the fact that here was something far in advance of previous practice. They asked us the reasons for these revolutionary results. And here is what they learned.

By means of deep corrugations the heating surfaces in Weil-McLain Boilers have been tremendously increased. This has added greatly to the capacity and efficiency of the boilers without otherwise adding to their size or adding a single penny to their price.

You can easily figure it out for yourself. Picture these corrugations 〰 straightened out. They will make a surface as long as this ———————. By means of these corrugations Weil-McLain put 40 per cent more heating surface into the same space.

This added heating surface in every section in Weil-McLain Boilers means proportionately greater heating efficiency—more heat per ton of coal or coke or per gallon of oil—lower fuel bills for you—a truly remarkable boiler value.

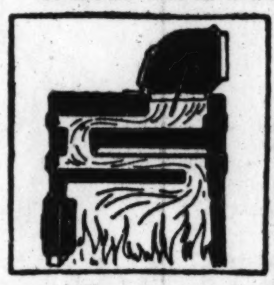
Fuel-Saving Corrugations in Every Section



The surface directly above the fire is most efficient. To prove this, first hold your hand at the side of a flame—then directly over it. You will find the hottest point directly over the flame.

The candle test (at left) demonstrates in a simple way that heating surface directly above the fire is the most valuable. The Weil-McLain "double-surface" crown sheet section directly above the fire has deep, fuel-saving corrugations to greatly increase the valuable heating surface at this most important point. All other sections have Weil-McLain corrugations to further increase efficiency and save fuel.

Back-and-forth Fire Travel



Long "back-and-forth" fire travel

But this is not all. Perhaps of equal importance is the famous Weil-McLain principle of long "back-and-forth" fire travel. In this modern boiler there are no short cuts to the chimney. The hot gases are baffled backward and forward through the corrugated heating surfaces, until the maximum number of heat units are absorbed and delivered to your radiators.

Scientific Combustion

And so it is throughout the entire boiler. Advanced designing has made possible Scientific Combustion which assures more complete burning of the fuel and more heat in the burning gases.

Weil-McLain Boilers burn any of the solid fuels (hard coal, soft coal or coke) and because of the forethought in their modern design they are unexcelled for oil burning.

Unexcelled for Oil Burning

The quick, intense heat produced by modern oil burners demands in a boiler a great amount of concentrated heat-absorbing surface, large water content and a long fire travel. You get all this in Weil-McLain Boilers through corrugated heating surfaces, large water spaces and long back-and-forth fire travel.

SMITH ATTACKS M'KINLEY RECORD IN '24 CAMPAIGN

Contribution Nil, Spoke Little, He Charges.

"Less than twenty minutes in speaking and not a dime in cash was the gross amount of Senator McKinley's help in 1924 toward the campaign by Illinois Republicanism to carry this state for President Coolidge, Vice President Dawes, and all the Republican congressional, legislative, and local ticket," Frank L. Smith, candidate for the Republican nomination for the United States senate, charged yesterday in a statement issued to fellow committeemen of his party.

This statement, Mr. Smith says, is in reply to a letter written to the Republican committeemen by Senator McKinley. In this the senior senator questioned the Republicanism of Mr. Smith in ignoring the party platform on the world court adherence.

Not Worried Over Charges.

"I am not in the least worried by the silly charges he is making," said Mr. Smith. "I have no fear that you will pay any attention to that sort of peevishness. Senator McKinley is disturbed by his own lack of progress and is seeking to evade responsibility for voting us half way into the league of nations in defiance of the openly expressed wishes of the overwhelming majority of the Republican voters of Illinois."

During the week of Oct. 6-11, 1924, he recalls, the big tour of Republican state candidates was arranged. This was to hold meetings in congressional districts, arouse interest and teamwork for the whole ticket. Senator Deneen, Gov. Small, congressman and state candidates down to trustees for the university were members of that pilgrimage. Senator McKinley was asked to be the speaker for the national ticket.

Delays Joining Campaign.

"Senator McKinley accepted the invitation," says Mr. Smith. But it was three days later, Thursday, at Bloomington, Mr. Smith continues, before the senator joined the party, speaking for six minutes. At Peoria Mr. Smith timed the senator for seven minutes, and at Galesburg on Friday the senator is given four minutes.

"Then we lost him," says Mr. Smith. "The rest of us completed the schedule, working until Saturday night, but Senator McKinley was not with us.

"The next I heard of him he was in Southern Illinois, campaigning for his own renomination as senator in 1926.

"Because you have had occasion to hear much of Senator McKinley's liberality with money, you may assume that what he failed to contribute to the Illinois campaign of 1924 in personal effort, he made up by money contributions.

"Remember that I was chairman of the Illinois Republican organization in that campaign, and that I know just what contributions were made. As state chairman, I report to you, faithful helpers throughout that campaign, that the aggregate of Senator McKinley's money contributions for the Republican campaign in Illinois in 1924 was precisely nothing.

"The returns show that we did fairly well without him and I am willing to leave the issue of my Republicanism, and of his, to the Republican precinct committeemen and the voters."

COOLIDGE AIDS NEAR DEFEAT IN VOTE OF SENATE

Washington, D. C., Feb. 6.—[Special.]—Administration forces in the senate received a scare today when the Democrats and radical Republicans almost succeeded in displacing the tax bill and forcing consideration of the Copeland resolution requesting the President to call a conference of operators and miners for a settlement of the anthracite strike.

Senator Copeland [Dem., N. Y.], leader in the move to force action on the coal situation, asked unanimous consent for consideration of his resolution, as he has done each day during the last week. As usual, objection was made, this time by Senator Metcalf [Rep., R. I.]. He then moved to take up the resolution. A motion to table his motion came from the Republican side.

Vote to Table Defeated.

The Democrats, with the single exception of Senator King [Dem., Utah], lined up solidly against the motion to table. They were joined by a dozen Republicans, with the result that the motion to table was defeated by a vote of 38 to 41. It looked as though Senator Copeland finally had won out. When the direct motion to take up the resolution, however, was put there were enough changes in votes to enable the administration to defeat it by a vote of 38 to 41.

Just before these votes were taken a new move toward a strike settlement was launched on behalf of the Democrats by Senator Robinson [Dem., Ark.], minority leader. Senator Robinson introduced a bill creating a board of industrial adjustments to deal with the present anthracite strike situation and with future coal difficulties.

Robinson Bill Provisions.

It would be composed of the secretary of labor, the secretary of commerce, and the chief of the bureau of mines and two citizens not engaged in the production or distribution of coal, appointed by the President. The board is empowered to conciliate differences, encourage arbitration, and ascertain the causes of a strike and recommend adjustments.

U. OF C. ENROLLS CAMPUS JANITOR, EX-AIR OFFICER

Application by a janitor for enrollment in the University of Chicago led yesterday to the discovery that a former officer of the Italian air corps has been working as a campus caretaker.

Vincent Speivalo, the student-janitor, came to America after the world war to pursue his study of philosophy. Sleeplessness, due to an affliction developed in the war, forced him to work at manual labor. For a time he was a sailor. Then he came to Chicago, penniless, and obtained employment at the university.

Nearly every book, it is said, that is known to professors in philosophy at Chicago University, has been read or examined by Speivalo.

DEVER ADDRESS STARTS CHICAGO ON IDEAL WEEK

Putting into practice the principles he voiced in the proclamation asking Chicagoans to observe the week of Feb. 6 to 12 as American Ideal week, Mayor William E. Dever yesterday inaugurated the celebration of this period with an address at a massmeeting at the City club. He stressed the necessity "to preserve, expand, and intensify our American ideals" as the first duty of present and future generations of Americans.

"While the general public may at first experience some difficulty in understanding the motives of this observance, it is bound to become a valuable development in calling attention to the principles underlying American institutions," he said. "Although there are things happening in this city about which I am much disturbed, I am of the opinion that Chicago is not as bad as it has been painted; that its bone and sinew are as truly American as any other city's, and that, compared with the great uplift spirit here, the criminal element is small."

Urges Recreational Commission.

Asserting, "we build parks and playgrounds in a haphazard way and use them in a haphazard manner," the mayor expressed the wish that the recreational and cultural commission now being considered by the city council may be authorized, "to function in an entirely new way in extension and utilization of recreational and cultural facilities Chicago affords, for the greater convenience and education of the people."

This project, Mayor Dever said, he regards as one of the most important phases of his administration, and as of more importance in an economic way than a proposed increase in the size of the police force.

Willoughby B. Walling, who presided at the massmeeting, introduced Mr. Dever as the "mayor of the most typically American city."

Ideals of Past Described.

Dr. James Lattimore Himrod delivered an address on the ideals that animated such great characters in American history as Washington and Lincoln, and pointed out the aptness of the declaration of Nathan Hale, "I regret that I have but one life to lose for my country" to the principles of American Ideal week.

Bartow A. Ulrich, 86 years old, gave personal reminiscences of Lincoln, whom he knew as a boy.

American Ideal week will be the subject of special programs in many Chicago churches today, as it was in Jewish synagogues yesterday.

In connection with observance of the week here, the French Mutual Aid society announces that its members will place a wreath of flowers at the foot of the Abraham Lincoln monument in Lincoln park this afternoon. The ceremony is to be a token of the esteem in which the memory of the emancipator is held by the French people, it was explained. President Alphonse Campion of the society will make a brief address.

TROOPERS' GUNS KEEP MOB FROM LOUISIANA NEGRO

Shreveport, La., Feb. 6.—[Special.]—Rifles in the hands of state troopers backed by the determination of a sheriff and a jailer, prevented lynching and provided a fair trial in the case of Joe Hardy, Negro, whose hearing has just closed in the little town of Coushatta, La.

While troops stood on guard, a jury of white men established a precedent in this southern community. They failed to exact the death penalty of a Negro who killed a white man. The jury was divided on the question of the death penalty and the state accepted a plea of guilty of murder without capital punishment. Hardy was sentenced to a life term.

For two days following the slaying of John S. Glover, prominent planter, Hardy evaded a mob of angry citizens. He later surrendered to two members of his race and was conducted to a place of safety.

On Jan. 25 Hardy was brought to Coushatta for trial, but he made such a substantial plea of self-defense that the jury stood six against the death penalty. While the jury was deliberating conspirators planned to stab the Negro in the confusion that was to follow a false alarm of fire. This was foiled when the sheriff slipped the prisoner away through a secret passage in the courtroom. No verdict was reached and a mistrial resulted.

On the day preceding Hardy's second trial five men entered the jail at Alexandria where he was held and demanded the Negro. The jailer refused to give him up.

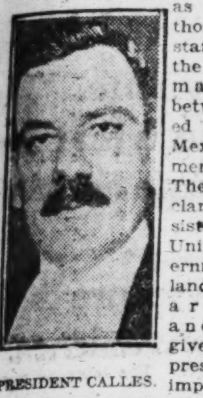
U. S. IN ERROR ON OIL LAW STAND, CALLES ASSERTS

Mexico's Action Within Its Rights, He Says.

[Copyright: 1926: By the New York Times.]

Mexico City, Feb. 6.—President Calles today gave what he emphasized as his first authorized executive statement since the present diplomatic deadlock between the United States and Mexican governments developed. The president declared that the insistence of the United States government that the land and oil laws are retroactive and confiscatory gives, as he expresses it, "an impression of an incomplete legal situation."



PRESIDENT CALLES.

He did not hesitate to declare that the American interests who considered themselves harmed by the controversial laws involved were the "origin of the present diplomatic deadlock."

The rumor in high circles that a failure to harmonize the situation so as to conform to the state department's view may mean the withdrawal of recognition by the United States, does not influence his government in the existing situation, he said.

"All Classes Guarded."

When asked about the charge often made that his government is socialistic, or even bolshevistic, Calles asserted that the legitimate rights of all classes are protected, but he insisted "a sense of elementary justice binds the government to procure the economic liberation of the Mexican proletariat."

In the matter of the deportation from the United States to Mexico of Mexicans unfriendly to the present government of Mexico, it was remarked that President Calles was particularly interested, while as for the alleged conspiracy hatched in San Antonio and printed in big headlines, the president is even less concerned. His government, he said, is ready to meet any domestic crisis.

Blames Ignorance.

The attitude of a certain part of the American press is due, in Calles' opinion, "to ignorance." Widespread talk that scores of persons have been executed without trial the president denounced as defamatory, the purpose being to agitate for an unfriendly feeling toward Mexico.

The first question involved the land and oil laws. It recalled to the president the position of the state department in Washington as to confiscation and retroactiveness, it being the position of the American government that more than $1,000,000,000 of American property is involved.

Not Yet Perfected.

"The law," the president replied, "regulating paragraph 1, article 27, of the constitution, and the regulating law of the same article concerning oil, are not yet perfected, because, in the process of enactment and enforcement, Mexican laws are still lacking the regulations the executive has to issue if the laws are passed by congress, in order to fix the scope and the proceedings of the enforcement of the principles or provisions contained in the said laws. Therefore, I think that the stand taken by the American government, of considering the so-called land and oil laws retroactive and confiscatory, is based on the impression of an incomplete legal situation.

"I do believe, of course, that the interests that consider themselves harmed by the laws could have had a certain influence in the origin of the present diplomatic deadlock."

"Is it the intention of the Mexican government rigidly to enforce it, regardless of the nationality, persons, or corporations affected?" he was asked.

The President's Reply.

"To enact laws," the president answered, "here or elsewhere, without the intention of rigid enforcement of them or permitting in the said laws the establishment of differences according to the nationalities, persons or companies affected, would be, I think, immoral and unfair from every point of view."

Next the correspondent called his attention to the diplomatic deadlock.

"The diplomatic relations," the President responded, "between Mexico and the United States, as those existing between Mexico and any other country friendly to us, have necessarily to concern a government willing to maintain the best of harmony with the government of the nations with which it has friendly relations. We cannot give an opinion. Neither could rumors bear an influence upon a serious government in the process of making laws adjusted to national principles, using the indisputable right of sovereignty, and keeping within the practices and even the limitations of international law."

Mrs. Price Post (Emily Post), herself a woman of high social standing, is known everywhere as the author of "Etiquette" (the Blue Book of social usage). She is also a novelist of distinction.

EMILY POST

In her book "Etiquette," which is the unquestioned authority on correct table appointments and usages, Mrs. Post says:

"A water glass standing alone at each place makes a meager and untrimmed looking table." As a beverage Mrs. Post suggests ginger ale—either alone or combined with other beverages or fruit juices.

When asked which ginger ale she considered best, Mrs. Post unhesitatingly said Clicquot Club Pale Dry. She said:

"I think Clicquot Club Pale Dry is much the nicest ginger ale I have ever tasted. It is attractive in color, tempting, sparkling, and delicious in flavor. In fact, it seems to complete the hospitable effect of a perfectly appointed table."

GRANGE GETS YANKEE STADIUM OPTION

HELEN BATTLES SUZANNE TODAY IN NET DOUBLES

Lenglen and Partner Favorites to Win.

BY DON SKENE.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

[Copyright: 1926: By The Chicago Tribune.]

NICE, France, Feb. 6.—[Special.]—Helen Wills and Suzanne Lenglen will slam their respectively famous shots at each other across the tennis net tomorrow for the first time.

A clash between the two greatest women tennis champions in the world was assured in the mixed doubles finals at Suzanne's home club, the Parc Imperial, today when Miss Wills, with the giant Swiss champion, Charlie Aeschliman, beat Stanley Doust, veteran Australian star, a former Davis cup hero, and Miss Radcliffe, English player, 6—1, 7—5, in the semi-finals.

Odds Favor Suzanne.

Tomorrow the American and European girl champions will have their first chance to trade punches outside of newspaper headlines when Miss Wills and Aeschliman face Mlle. Lenglen and her newest doubles partner, Baron de Morpurgo, the sheik of Trieste, who after the war became champion of Italy. Mlle. Lenglen and Baron de Morpurgo.

The popular Aeschliman, husband of the American, Leslie Bancroft, whom Suzanne crucified, 6—0, 6—0, two days ago, is known not to have great love for either Mlle. Lenglen or Baron de Morpurgo, and "Little Poker Face," although saying nothing, is determined to make a fierce fight against her archrival, Mlle. Lenglen, who is the only player standing between her and world supremacy. The betting is 8 to 5 in favor of Mlle. Lenglen and Baron de Morpurgo.

All Seats Sold Out.

The enlarged stands at the Nice club are sold out for tomorrow's match, setting a record in gate receipts during the present Riviera season. One ardent American tennis fan, who has followed the Riviera tournament for years, already has suggested to Aeschliman that he and Baron de Morpurgo are free to stand idle in the far corners of the court, allowing Miss Wills and Mlle. Lenglen to fight it out in practically a singles duel. Aeschliman smilingly said he would do so if Baron de Morpurgo consented, but so far it has not been arranged.

The Europeans have a distinct edge because Miss Wills is not a great doubles player on account of the American system of concentrating on singles play, while considering mixed doubles of minor importance.

Helen Wins, 6—1, 7—5.

Miss Wills and Aeschliman scored a victory today in a cold, blustery wind, which whipped the dust from the courts into the players' eyes like miniature Sahara sand storms. Helen and Charlie easily won the first set, 6—1, but in the second set Doust and Miss Radcliffe fought gallantly and forced the stars to 7—5.

Mlle. Lenglen this morning won the finals in the women's singles, smothering Miss Emily Wright of England, 6—0, 6—0. Miss Wright was helpless in what must have seemed to her like a blizzard of perfectly placed strokes.

Admirers of Miss Wills hoped that the players friendly to the Californian who have played with Mlle. Lenglen this week might give the American champion advice about Suzanne's weaknesses. They have willingly given Helen advice, but it compares with that of the veteran baseball pitcher who told the recruit twirler that Ty Cobb's only weakness was a base on balls.

The betting on Mlle. Lenglen in the singles next week is 5 to 1 for Suzanne to win and 3 to 1 that she wins straight sets.

Chicagoans Win National Doubles Racquets Title

Robert A. Gardner and Howard Linn of the Chicago Racquet club became national doubles racquets champions yesterday when they defeated Clarence C. Pell and Stanley G. Mortimer of the New York Racquet and Tennis club, defending title holders, in the final match of the tournament here. The title is brought to the west for the first time in the game's history by the victory of the Chicago pair. The score of the final match was 6—15, 15—10, 15—12, 3—15, 15—12.

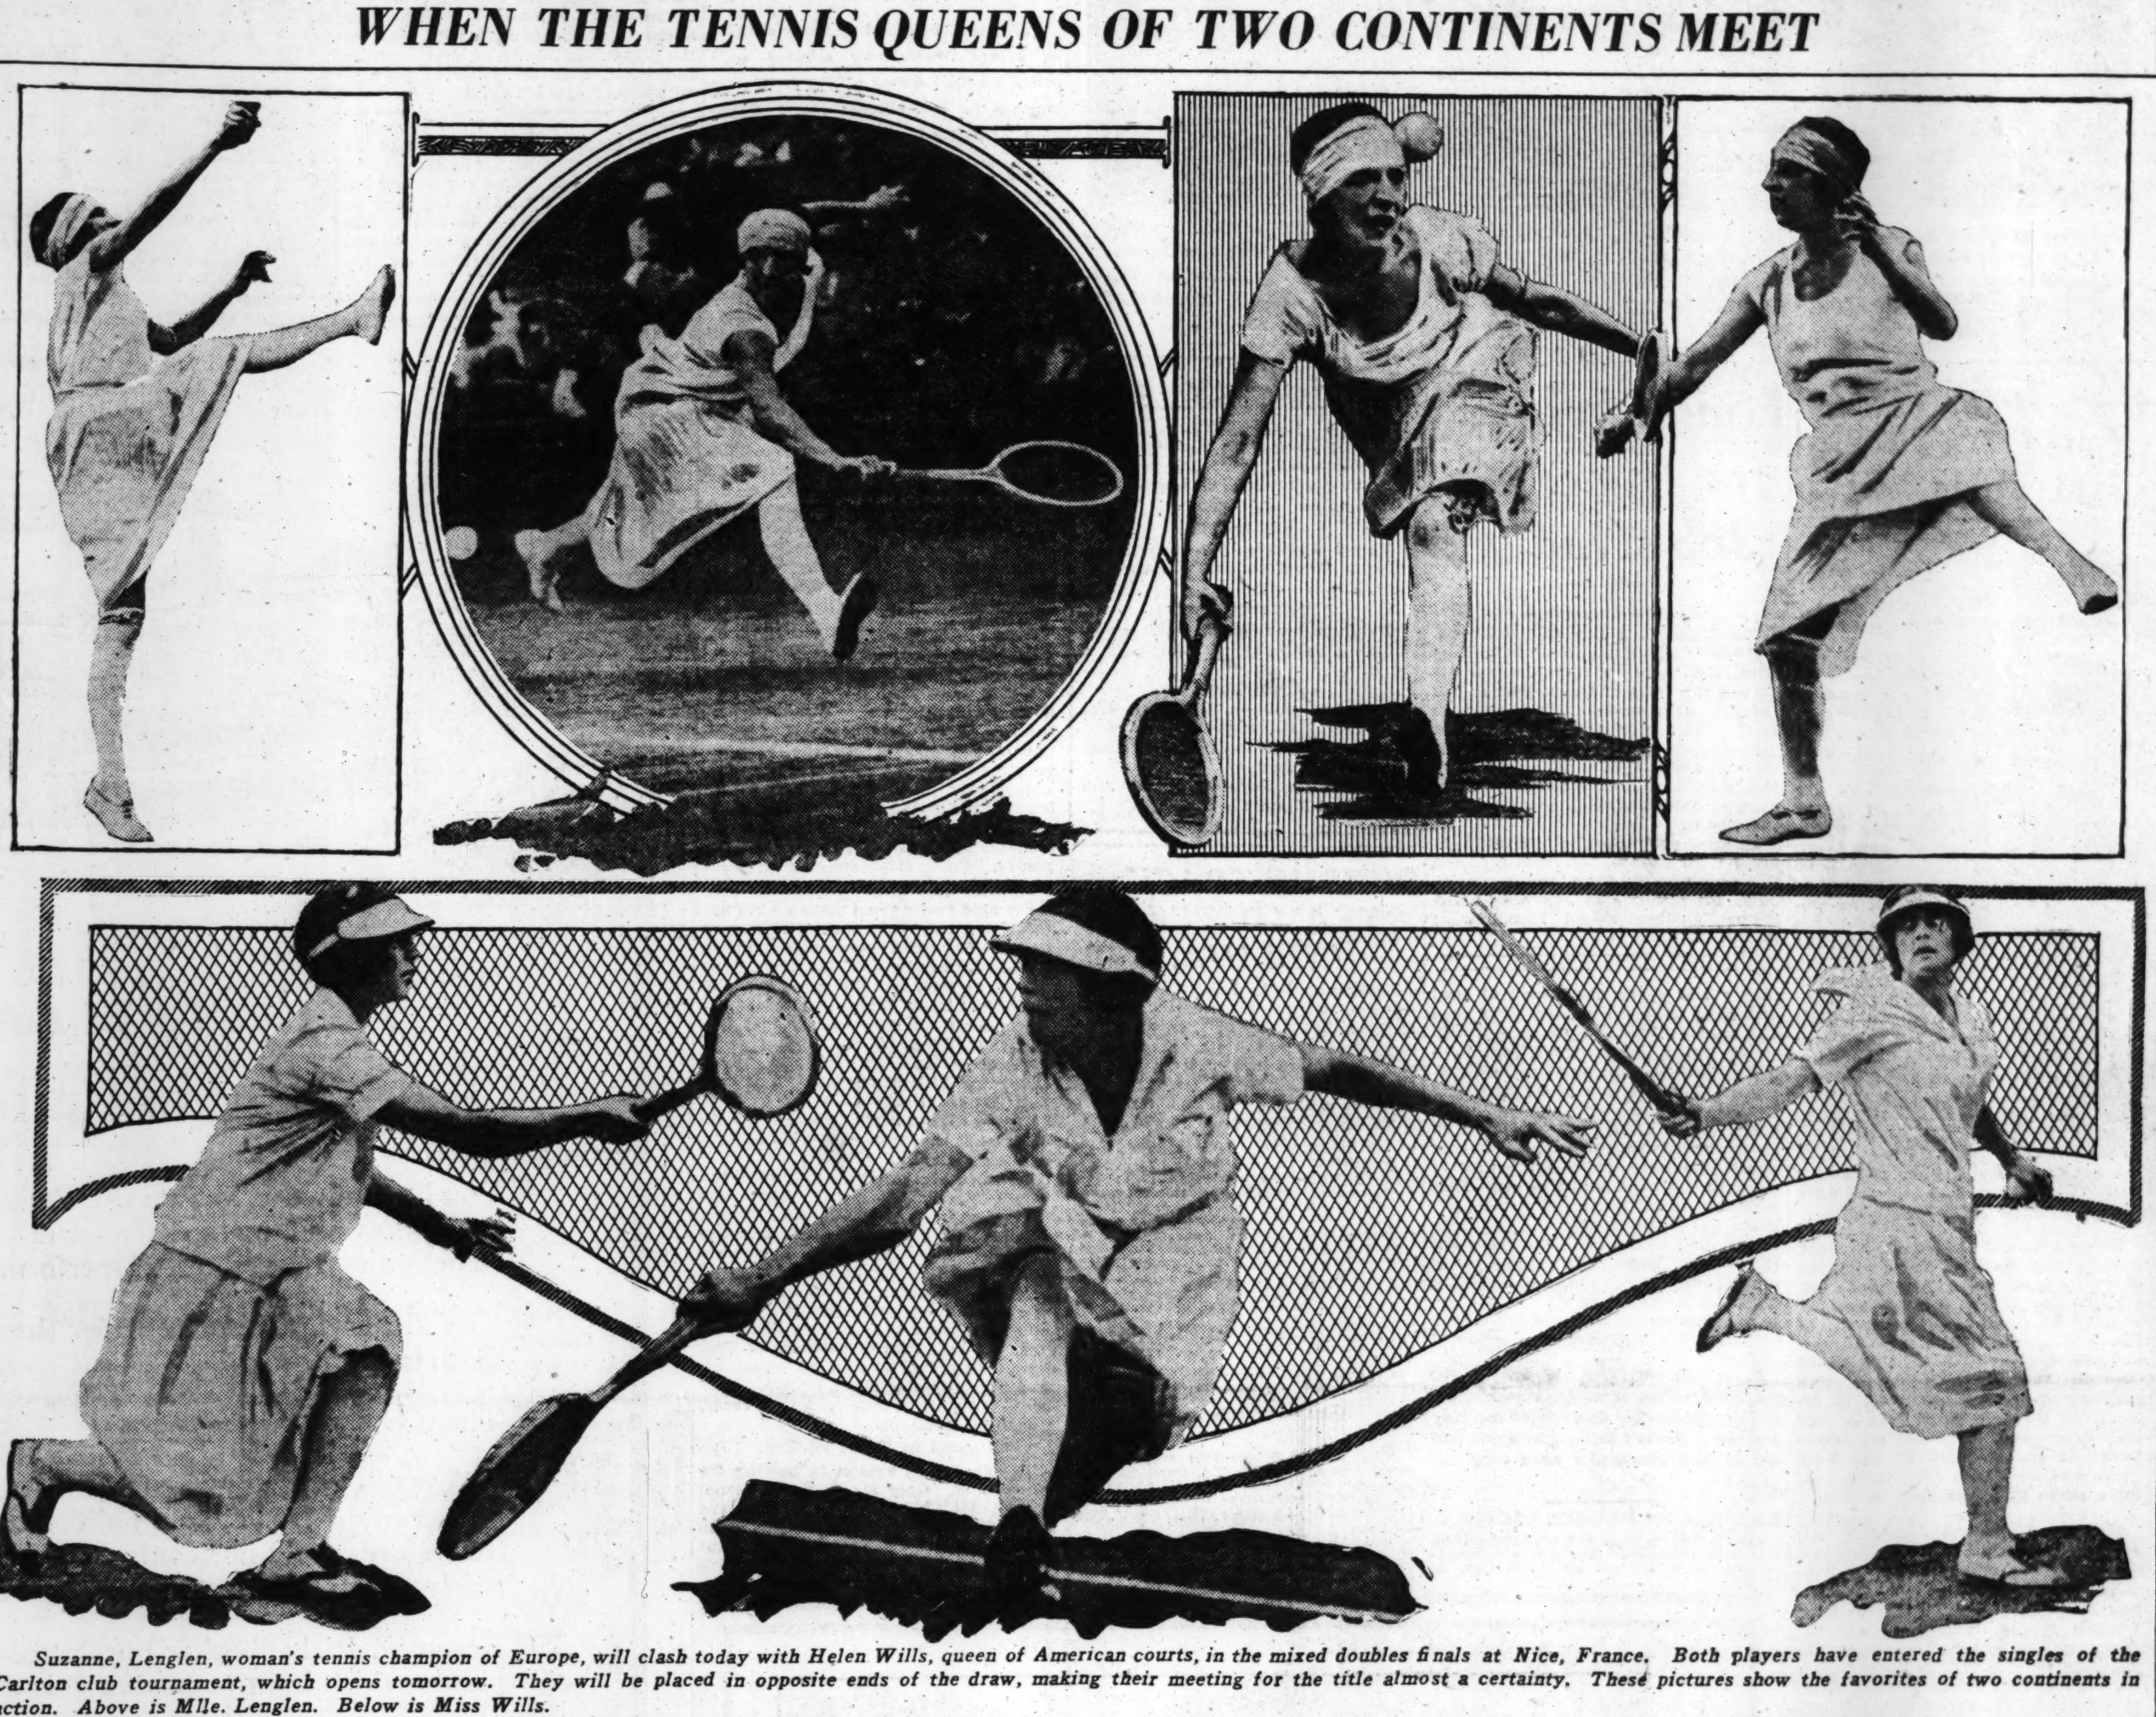
WHEN THE TENNIS QUEENS OF TWO CONTINENTS MEET



Suzanne, Lenglen, woman's tennis champion of Europe, will clash today with Helen Wills, queen of American courts, in the mixed doubles finals at Nice, France. Both players have entered the singles of the Carlton club tournament, which opens tomorrow. They will be placed in opposite ends of the draw, making their meeting for the title almost a certainty. These pictures show the favorites of two continents in action. Above is Mlle. Lenglen. Below is Miss Wills.

New Orleans, La., Feb. 6.—[Special.]—Before the greatest crowd that ever attended the races here, Nurmi, 3 year old colt from Mrs. Payne Whitney's Greentrees stable, today captured the $30,000 New Orleans handicap, the richest stake ever run at a winter track in the United States.

He was first in a field of twenty-one of the fleetest thoroughbreds in training. Scratch finished second, a head behind the winner, while another head separated the second horse from Dazzler, coupled in the betting with the winner. Lounger finished fourth, a length and a half in front of Morning Cloud. The race was at a mile and a sixteenth.

Mrs. Whitney, one of the wealthiest turf women in America, in whose colors Nurmi raced to victory, occupied a box at the Fair grounds track and saw the game little son of The Finn, under excellent handling by Jockey J. Thomas, speed to victory.

Dazzler Runs Good Race.

Although Nurmi won, it was a question as to whether he or Dazzler, his stable mate, ran the better race. The latter was forced to take the wide route to get through and at the finish was making a drive for the lead.

Starter Hamilton had the unwieldy field away in good alignment. Sir Peter rushed to the front, setting the pace until the turn into the stretch. Lounger followed in close pursuit but at the turn for home Nurmi, after working his way up steadily after a bad beginning, closed with a rush through the last furlong, and outstayed Scratch.

Nurmi Wins $32,000.

The race was run in 1:47. Nurmi took down $32,000 as the winner's share; Scratch, $4,000; Dazzler, $2,000, and Lounger, $1,000.

The stake was first run last year, and like Nurmi the winner of that race was Quatrain, a 3 year old. The victory automatically made Quatrain a Kentucky Derby future book favorite.

Today's victory also makes Nurmi a formidable Derby contender, but it is doubtful if he will become the top heavy choice for this great race as was Quatrain a year ago.

Nurmi will now be pointed either for the Derby at Tijuana or the Louisiana Derby to be run at the Jefferson park track here March 17. He has already been nominated for the Kentucky Derby.

Thunberg Breaks World's Mile and Half Ice Record

Detroit, Mich., Feb. 6.—[Special.]—Clas Thunberg, flying Finn on skates, broke the world's record for a mile and a half skating against time in a special exhibition race at the start of the second day's program of the international ice skating championships at Masonic Countrp club on Lake St. Clair Saturday afternoon.

Thunberg skated the distance in 4:27 2-5. The former record was 4:28, made by John F. Johnson of Minneapolis almost a score of years ago.

Thunberg tried for another mark in the 880, but his time, 1:22 2-5, was six seconds slower than the world's record.

Valentine Bialis of Lake Placid, N. Y., won the half mile senior race for men. Bialis led all the way. Ricard Donovan of Endicott, N. Y., was trailing Bialis until 15 feet from the finish line, when he fell and Eddie Murphy of Chicago moved into second place, closely followed by Lew Morris of New York.

Toronto's women skaters made a clean sweep in the 220 yard dash for senior women. Lela Brooks made every pole a winning one to cross the line an easy winner, running her total of points up to 90.

Ice in Poor Condition.

The winner's time was :24, comparatively slow on account of the poor ice. A light rain began falling, and the ice was cut up considerably, making it impossible for the gliders to show their best speed.

Valentine Bialis of Lake Placid, N. Y., recorded his second victory of the day when he skimmed across the ice a close winner in the ¾ mile race for men. Bialis spurted near the finish and his last two strides gained him a victory over Eddie Murphy of Chicago, who just managed to nose out Eddie Reed, also a Chicagoan.

Another close race was the quarter mile dash for intermediates, won by Melvin Johnson of Minneapolis. The skaters in this race were all closely bunched at this finish. George Thiel of Chicago was second and Leslie Burt of Toronto was third.

Eddie Beats Eddie Three Feet.

Only three feet separated the skaters at the finish line in the two mile race for men, the final event of the day. Eddie Reed of Chicago won, Eddie Murphy, also of Chicago, was second, and Valentine Bialis of Lake Placid, N. Y., who led the point scorers for the second day of racing, was third.

Vinson Sahlin of Chicago captured the 220 yard dash for boys under 16 years of age. Summaries:

MURPHY, FARRELL LEAD

Detroit, Mich., Feb. 6.—(AP)—Eddie Murphy of Chicago, with 160 points, went into a tie with Oneil Farrel of Chicago for world's all-round skating honors by his points won in the international speed skating championships on Lake St. Clair today.

Charles Gorman of St. John, N. B., who is not competing here, held third place with 150 points, and Valentine Bialas of Lake Placid, N. Y., was fourth with 120. The all round classification, though unofficial, is based on uniorm scoring for similar events in the principal skating meets. This season's ratings are based on the national championships at Binghampton, N. Y., the world's championships at St. John, N. B., and the international meet at Detroit.

OHIO'S PUNCH AT FINISH CONQUERS MAROONS, 18-14

Columbus, O., Feb. 6.—[Special.]—Playing without Cookie Cunningham, injured center, Ohio State defeated University of Chicago basketball team tonight, 18 to 14, in a game featured by close guarding.

The contest was hard fought. Both centers, Alyea, Chicago star, and Hecktorne, substitute for Cunningham, were ejected from the game for personal fouls shortly after the first half started.

Chicago outplayed Ohio in the first half, leading 10 to 8 when the whistle blew. Four long shots by Dempsey and Jeffrey of Ohio in the last five minutes of play gave the Buckeyes the game.

Zimmerman of Chicago and Dempsey of Ohio displayed spectacular form, the former scoring eight points and the latter nine.

A crowd of 7,500 fans saw the game. Ohio's victory avenged the 21 to 20 defeat handed the Buckeyes last week in Chicago and kept the victors in the race for the Big Ten championship.

N. DAME, 26; ILLINOIS, 14

Champaign, Ill., Feb. 6.—[Special.]—Notre Dame continued its winning streak tonight when Coach Keogan's team defeated Illinois by a score of 26 to 14, bringing the Hoosiers' victories up to twelve to a solitary defeat.

The first half was a fairly even battle, in which Crowe's long shots helped to give Notre Dame a lead, but it looked like anybody's game even if the Illini trailed. The withdrawal of Johnny Mauer for a crucial part of the game weakened the Illini attack and in the closing minutes the interjection of Mike Nyikos put the finishing touches on the Illini. Mike was in only about two minutes, but he made a basket and a free throw.

The Illini had plenty of shots but no luck, Daugherity suffering an especial hoodoo. Lineup:

Hoff Vaults 13 Feet 1 1-2 Inches for New Record

Boston, Mass., Feb. 6.—(AP)—One world's record was beaten, two foreign stars met defeat, and another world's record was equaled seven times tonight in the 37th running of the annual indoor track and field games of the Boston Athletic association.

Charley Hoff, world's champion pole vaulter, shattered his own world's indoor record by clearing 13 feet 1½ inches. He set a mark of 13 feet 1 inch Thursday night in New York.

Hubert Houben, sprint champion of Germany, appearing for the fourth and last time in his American trip, was defeated in the 40 yard dash semifinal. Adrian Paulen of Holland, still wearing his sea legs after his recent voyage, finished in the ruck in the 660 yard run.

Taylor Ties Hurdle Mark.

As fast a field of indoor high hurdlers as was ever assembled was responsible for the seven times equaling of the record of :06 over the 45 yards distance. F. Morgan Taylor of the Illinois A. C. was among the stick steppers who tied the world mark.

Jimmy Connolly of Washington, D. C., won the Hunter mile by 20 yards from William Goodwin, New York A. C. W. C. Baldwin of the Boston A. A. was third. It was Connolly's first victory in the event after finishing second five times.

Charles Major, Negro jumper of Coburn Classical institute, won the high jump with a leap of six feet three inches.

Harvard's two-mile relay team ran Yale's quartet off its feet in their annual classic. Kobes turned over a 25 yard lead to Willard Tibbetts, who stretched it to nearly 75 yards. Watters held this advantage, and Haggerty, running anchor, breasted the tape a full 90 yards ahead of Vorster, Yale anchor man.

The Boston college quartet won the two mile intercollegiate relay, leading all the way. Syracuse finished hard on the Maroon's heels, and Dartmouth was a poor third.

Murchison Wins Sprint.

Loren Murchison won the final of the 40 yard dash for the sixth successive year. He finished a yard ahead of the field, one-fifth of a second slower than the world's record of 4 2-5 seconds. Behind was Miller of Harvard.

Holy Cross inflicted a defeat to its traditional rival, Boston college, in their relay, finishing fifteen yards in front.

Alan Helffrich came out in front and held the lead all the way, winning the A. Paul Keith 660 yard run. Ray Dodge of Illinois A. C. and Cecil Cooke, Syracuse Negro runner, were second and third. Adrian Paulen, Dutch flyer, finished, but had trouble on the corner, taking them wide and gradually dropping far into the rear.

Dartmouth galloped away from Brown in the mile relay, featuring these old rivals. Maine beat New Hampshire and Boston university outran Colby.

BUFFALO LAWN BOWLING TEAM WINS U. S. TITLE

St. Petersburg, Fla., Feb. 6.—(AP)—Buffalo, N. Y., today won the lawn bowling doubles championship of America by defeating Grand Rapids, Mich., in the finals for the event in the National tournament here, 20 to 14.

J. W. Teskey and O. C. Feine, skip, proved a hard combination to beat, and it was due to their good bowling in the closing innings that victory was taken from the Michigan team, Maurice Jay and A. C. Terrell, skip. The score was close, in fact, until the last two ends. In the final end, four down, Terrell triel to make it a dead end, but failed, and Buffalo finished with an additional two points.

Owing to delays in the consolation, finals were not rolled during the day, but will be staged Monday.

YANKEES TRADE WALLY SCHANG FOR MOGRIDGE

New York, Feb. 6.—(AP)—Wally Schang, veteran catcher of the New York Yankees, was traded today to the St. Louis Browns in exchange for Pitcher George Mogridge, former New York and Washington American leaguer, and a cash consideration. Edward G. Barrow, business manager of the Yankees, in making this announcement also said William Albert, Georgetown university outfielder for the last three years, had been signed with the Yankees.

The deal which sends Schang to the Browns is the first of a series of big transactions by which Manager Miller Huggins hopes to build up the club to a place it held in the American league before the championship reign of the Washington Senators.

ASKS FOR OWN GRID FRANCHISE IN PRO LEAGUE

Football Magnates Think It Over.

BY IRVING VAUGHAN.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

RED GRANGE.

Detroit, Mich., Feb. 6.—[Special.]—The business of professionalizing football seems to be quite a complicated process. The gentlemen who have the burden of providing the collegiate athletic notables with an opportunity to collect rapidly opened their semi-annual meeting here this afternoon, and after about five hours of deliberation appeared to have made no more headway than a mule on a treadmill.

C. C. PYLE.

With Mr. Joseph Carr, president, in the chair, the members of the National Football league went into session at 1 o'clock this afternoon and at 6 o'clock announcement was made that nobody seemed willing to accept the championship pennant for the season of 1925. Outside of this unusual proclamation not much was produced beyond the determination to meet again tomorrow and endeavor to shave down or enlarge the roster of the league. At present twenty-two clubs hold membership, and that is too many for one president to handle unless his salary is boosted.

Stadium Lease Signed.

While the paymasters of post-graduate athletes were indulging in their mental gymnastics, the capable Mr. C. C. Pyle of Cash and Carry fame was a busy fellow trying to make more hay for himself and the still more capable Red Grange, late of the University of Illinois.

Before the magnates of the pro league met they were informed by Mr. Pyle that a contract had been signed whereby Grange would appear with his own eleven in the Yankee stadium at New York next fall. Signatures to the papers were annexed last Monday, with Ed Barrow representing the Yankees. The document covers a five year period with privilege of renewal, but has a provision that it will not be effective unless the Grange all-stars are given a franchise in the professional circuit.

Giants May Oppose Red.

The application of the Pyle-Grange corporation is up to the holders of the franchise now known as the New York Giants. A representative of this outfit was present today, but Pyle didn't approach him on the matter, so his attitude on the presence of another pro eleven in Gotham isn't known. As Grange might prove quite an attraction in New York, there is good reason to suppose that the Giants will oppose the admission of a rival team.

During the session today somebody brought up the subject of taking collegiate athletes as in the case of Grange. This was discussed at great length and it was finally decided to adopt a rule prohibiting the signing of a collegiate until his class has graduated.

Who Won Pennant?

The matter of awarding a pennant was delayed because the representatives couldn't decide who deserved it. Chris O'Brien's Cardinals of Chicago and the Pottsville, Pa., elevens thought they were entitled to it, but there were others who thought otherwise. The trouble was that Detroit, Philadelphia, and the Chicago Bears, who were next in line, refused to accept it. O'Brien, who was assessed $1,000 because four high school boys played in a game against his team, expressed his opinion that he ought to be awarded a gold plated flag because of his contribution to the league treasury.

Al McGuirk was charged with being responsible for shoving the four prep boys into a pro combat and failed to receive an amendment to the league edict that he dispose of the Milwaukee franchise within ninety days. Neither did O'Brien receive any consideration on his plea that his $1,000 fine be remitted.

N. Y. LEASE CONFIRMED

New York, Feb. 6.—[Special.]—Edward G. Barrow, business manager of the New York Yankees, confirmed reports from Detroit today that Red Grange had obtained a lease on the Yankee stadium to conduct professional football games next fall.

Mr. Barrow said he had come to terms with C. C. Pyle, Grange's manager, whereby Grange leases the Yankee stadium for a period of five years. Professional football games will be staged at the stadium every Sunday and holiday from Oct. 15 to Dec. 31, he said.

To Capt. McConnell of Iowa goes the credit for stopping Rasey within bounds. His work was the only stellar work of the mix, which was rather slow throughout.

The first half, which ended 9 to 6 in favor of Iowa, was marked by fumbling and fouling. In the second frame the Hawks came back and ran the score to 17 to 6 before Gay, a Gopher substitute, dropped in a free toss. Lineup:

Get Money Before Fans Cut You Off, Jim Tells Wills

Chicago, Feb. 7, 1926

Mr. Harry Wills,
New York City.
Dear Mistah Wills:

For almost as long as I can remember there has been talk of a fight between you and Jack Dempsey, and I wonder if this battle ever will come off. The fight fans have been steamed up over it now for several years. Everybody wants to see it come off. You always have appeared ready to fight him at any time. He declares he's ready to fight you. Both of you are sitting back waiting for some to offer a million or two and no one seems willing to promote the show.

HARRY WILLS.

What stumps me is the fact that both of you can just sit calmly and wait when you know that the public is eager to pay more than $1,000,000 to see you two fellows go to it. Why not get that money before the public cools off or before both you and Jack are put away in homes for the aged.

I guess in the old days when you were a stevedore on the docks you didn't sit back and wait if there was a chance to put on a fight even for a purse of a couple of hundred. Of course that was before you became a business man. About that same time Mr. Dempsey was just a punk around Chicago, getting a lot of his meals off the free lunch counter and tickled to death if he got an opportunity to go out back of the stock yards and sock with some tough egg for a purse of a hundred.

Now it's my private opinion that neither one of you can begin to put up the scrap now that you could have done in those days and it's too bad you didn't get together at that time. I guess Mistah Wills you wouldn't jump into a fight right now as you would in the old days of the stevedoring. They tell me that in those times if some bloke got smart with you, you simply laid down the barrel of lead you were carrying under your arm and knocked him into the ocean.

Gee what a scrap it would have been if Dempsey had happened to be loitering on the dock one those days and you happened to bump into him while carrying an armful of railway ties. Naturally he would have flared up and you would have dropped the load of ties and the fight would be on. That would be a fight worth seeing. I don't know but what I would give about fifty myself to see one like that. But these bouts between a couple of big business men for a purse of a million don't appeal to me at all.

Respectfully yours,
JAMES CRUSINBERRY.

P. S.—Undoubtedly, Mistah Wills, you read about Dempsey's new nose. If you fellows ever do get into the ring together I guess I know where you will try to sock him and I need only one guess.

Hinkle in Line for Ingram's Job at Indiana

Bloomington, Ind., Feb. 6.—[Special.]—Following failure of Indiana university athletic officials to announce the name of a successor to Bill Ingram, at a meeting this week in Indianapolis, reports here are that Tony Hinkle, former University of Chicago football, basketball, and baseball star, and now assistant to Pat Page at Butler, is being considered for the position.

Indiana attempted to get Shaughnessy from Tulane, but he is reported to have turned down the overture. After his last trip to Japan with the Maroon diamond squad, Hinkle went to Butler.

CUBS OF 1908 RANKED AMONG BASEBALL'S BEST

Set Standard for Teams of Today.

[This is the second of three articles by James Crusinberry dealing with great baseball teams of the past. Tomorrow he will discuss the Philadelphia Athletics.]

BY JAMES CRUSINBERRY.

It was ten years after the supremacy of the Baltimore Orioles before the second of the three greatest baseball teams of all time blossomed and it was two more years before that team reached its highest point of efficiency. In the spring of 1906 Frank Chance brought out his famous Chicago Cubs, who made a runaway race for the National league pennant, setting a record of 116 victories. But it was two years after that when the Cubs really distinguished themselves as one of the three greatest baseball outfits of all time.

In that year, 1908, both New York and Pittsburgh were in the field with strong teams and the greatest pennant fight of all time ended in a tie between the Cubs and Giants, with the Pirates only one-half a game behind.

Cubs Prove Their Gameness.

The fact that Chance and his gallant athletes went into the Polo grounds with the fans storming the park and battering down the fences and still won the playoff to capture the pennant stamped the team as really great. Following that hectic experience Chance brought his team back west and played the Detroit Tigers for the world's championship, winning four out of five games.

Now, in picking the Cubs of 1908 as the second really great team we are not forgetting the White Sox of 1906, who won the American league flag and then trimmed Chance and his men, four games to two, for the world's championship. That White Sox team was a wonder team sure enough. It had great pitching, great fielding, and superlative intellect. But they were called the hitless wonders. The fact that the team won with the weakest bunch of hitters in the league was wonderful, but it prevented it from being a really great team.

On the other hand, the Cub machine was perfectly balanced. There was that de luxe infield, Chance, Evers, Tinker, and Steinfeldt, with Zimmerman as utility. The outfield was superb, with Schulte in right, Hofman or Slagle in center, and Sheckard, one of the smartest outfielders of all time, in left. There was Johnny Kling behind the bat, king of catchers of that time, with Pat Moran as assistant. And the pitching staff, Brown, Reulbach, Overall, Pfiester, and Frazer, needs no comment.

Second in Team Hitting.

It was a lean season in batting for all players. Only six in the National league hit .300 or better. But the Cubs were second in the league in team batting. They won the pennant with 99 victories and 55 defeats. New York and Pittsburgh were tied for second place with 98 wins and 56 losses.

The team established a standard for playing baseball that teams even at this time are striving to attain. The 1908 Cub team was almost flawless and there wasn't a white liver on the squad.

Mary Browne Beat Martha Bayard in Tennis Meet Final

New York, Feb. 6.—(AP)—Miss Mary K. Browne of New York, former national champion, defeated Miss Martha Bayard of Short Hills, N. J., in the final round of the Heights Casino tennis tournament today, 6—3, 2—6, 6—4.

Miss Browne combined a driving, back court game with a brilliant net exhibition to overcome the steadiness of Miss Bayard, who recently eliminated Mrs. Molla B. Mallory from the tournament. The match required two hours to play, during which most of the games went to deuce. Miss Browne ranks No. 6 in the national ratings, with Miss Bayard No. 7.

As Beautiful As It Is Wonderful in Performance

¶ You have always known the Rickenbacker chassis—both sixes and vertical 8's—were super-fine in construction and matchless in performance.

¶ You did not, perhaps consider the bodies quite up to that standard.

¶ There was a reason for that.

¶ Like most other automobile manufacturers Rickenbacker in the past did not build, but bought, its bodies. Therefore, could not control the details of workmanship and quality of materials.

¶ Recently, Rickenbacker purchased the big (12-acre) plants which built bodies for this and other concerns.

¶ Now those plants are devoted exclusively to the designing, fabricating and finishing of Rickenbacker bodies.

¶ Seven types are standard this season—and all conform to Rickenbacker standards of quality—which are the highest.

¶ Better cloth is not made than that silk-mohair which now goes into the upholstery of Rickenbacker closed types. Finer leather is not known than goes into the open models.

¶ Money cannot buy better springs or other materials—nor does the industry know better craftsmanship.

¶ "At last," you will exclaim, when you see the new models, "Rickenbacker bodies are in full harmony with the performance of the chassis."

¶ P. S. These chassis are identical with that in which "Cannon Ball" Baker during 1925 made the longest list of road records ever made by one man driving the same car in one year.

RIDERS OF SEVEN NATIONS IN SIX DAY RACE HERE

Germany and France Send Strong Teams.

There are two reasons why Chicago's thirteenth international six day bicycle grind, which starts at the Coliseum next Sunday night, should be more exciting and thrilling than any of its predecessors. The first is that Manager Paddy Harmon has split up the teams of Ernest Kockler and Carl Stockholm, Chicago boys, as well as the team of Freddie Spencer and Bobby Walthour. The second is that seven nations will be battling for first honors. The nations which will be represented are: United States, Australia, Switzerland, Italy, Belgium, France, and Germany. With so many different countries competing there is certain to be a lot of rivalry.

Harmon has announced eleven of the fifteen teams. Kockler seems to have an edge on his old partner, for he will be riding with Horan, rated one of the best six day riders in the game, while Stockholm will have Tony Beckman for a mate. Stockholm, however, has a high opinion of Beckman's ability, and has offered to wager Kockler his end of the purse that he and Beckman will beat out Kockler and Horan.

German, French Teams Entered.

The other teams are:

Freddie Spencer and Franco Georgetti, Reggie McNamara and Bobby Walthour, Harry Stockelynch and Alphonse Goosens, Georges Wambst and Charley Lacquehay, Louis Beneratto and Otto Petri, Oscar Egg and Piere Sergent, Alex McBeath and William Hanley, Eddie Madden and Freddie Taylor, Richard Golle and Werner Miethe.

The newcomers to America for six day racing will be the German team of Golle and Miethe and the French rider, Sergent. Golle has been the road champion of Germany the last two years while Miethe is rated one of his country's best road riders and six day stars. They both are sturdy riders, well able to stand the gaff.

A team that will be feared by all other contestants is that of Harry Stockelynch and Alphonse Goosens. The husky Belgians are the best pair of jammers in the race.

Spencer Paired with Georgetti.

Spencer and Georgetti will make a good team, while McNamara and Walthour will be hard to beat.

Saturday night there will be professional and amateur sprint races.

Eaton, Notre Dame Star, to Coach Creighton Preps

He is an Omaha boy and was graduated in [illegible] from the school he is now to coach.

In the Wake of the News

SIX DAY BIKING.

PADDY HARMON, sponsor for the new $8,000,000 amusement stadium on West Madison street, who is about to conduct another six day bicycle race at the Coliseum (which from recent experience will be financially successful) likes to tell in our presence how we once advised against his entering the bicycle game in Chicago. Paddy tells it with a chuckle. Well, we'll submit the facts and you may judge whether we were not right at that.

Back about 1914, Harmon came to us for our opinion, as sporting editor, of his plan. We replied, "Although six day races go over big in New York, I don't believe Chicago is ready for them," and cited a previous failure. Harmon and his associates went ahead at Dexter Park pavilion. Carlos Ames was interested in the venture. As the crowd failed to come, Ames would step outside, go up to the box office and buy a ticket to stimulate trade. The first night's receipts of $126 was mostly Ames' money.

Well, on the final night, the place was packed but the week showed a deficit of $21,000. That last night fooled them, however. Paddy thought Chicago "demanded" bike racing. So he formed a company to build a board track at Riverview. It lost $81,000 before it became wreckage.

Harmon is a sticker and he gave other six-day races. The second, third and fourth were frosts, but the losses were decreasing. At the fourth race, the house was "papered" for three nights. A coterie, said to include "Umbrella Mike" Boyle and Packey McFarland, had a checker counting the admissions and not knowing of the "comps," figured up the show had made money, so decided to run a rival race, bidding high for the riders. At the time, their loss was estimated at $29,000.

At Harmon's fifth race, the loss was only $200 or $300 to each member of the syndicate. Thereafter the shows paid out, and the $140,000 sunk before bicycling began to pay, has been made up, it is said, in the seven or eight races since that time.

But were we so far wrong in thinking Chicago was not ready for "six-day races" in 1914?

Oh, It's Simple Now.

Dear Wake: I notice some Helper wants to know why blue grass is green. It's very simple. The green coloring of most deciduous angiosperms and lower plants is due to the pigments in the chlorophyll contained in the chloroplasts in the protoplasms of the cells of the parenchymal tissue of the leaves. Three pigments are present, green, yellow, and red, but green is predominant in a majority of plants (including blue grass.)

Just a dainty little mite,
The image of a star,
One of thousands in your flight
From dreamy realms afar.

I wonder what you used to be,
Before a snow flake rare,
And if you were at one time free
From all your comrades there.

I've sometimes visioned that you dwell
Up with the filmy clouds,
Or then again in starry dell,
Or with the fairy crowds.

Your labor is a lovely one,
To float down through the air,
And on the winter days so fine
Help cover flowers fair.

Hidden Ball Trick.

Wonder if any Helper can go back farther than I on the hidden ball trick? In the '80's, Chicago and Detroit were fighting for the pennant. In game with Clarkson pitching, Thompson of Detroit made a 3-base hit, but was put out at third by Ed Williamson, Chicago shortstop, by the hidden ball trick (ball concealed under his arm). The umpire, however, did not allow the out, claiming he had not seen the play, for which he was hissed by the fans.

Finer Than Ever--and More Modern Than Any

There has been no lowering of quality in the New Franklin. On the contrary, quality has been raised, strengthened, increased. Everybody knows it, and the car shows it. Wheelbase is longer, materials are finer, the standard of inspection the strictest in the industry. And at the same time Franklin offers exactly what the modern owner is demanding in lightness, agility, compactness and economy. This double leadership is found only in Franklin: only Franklin combines endurance and fineness of the highest pre-war kind with size and performance of the most modern type. And only Franklin can offer such wonderful easy-riding, such sensationally beautiful style. Its superior performance is founded on copper-radiation air-cooling, the most important engineering development of the year.

DE VITO, MARINO TO BOWL AGAINST STEIN AND COHEN

Reiselt Holds 3 Cushion Race Lead.

Chicago and St. Louis bowling fans will have an opportunity to witness the first big inter-city match of the year when the local doubles team, Dominick De Vito and Hank Marino, goes into battle against Otto Stein and Ben Cohen, two of Missouri's most prominent maple spillers.

The first half of the match will be staged in St. Louis tomorrow, Tuesday and Wednesday nights. The second half of the series will be played in this city at Bensinger's Randolph alleys on Feb. 13 and 14.

De Vito and Marino have won the championship of the Great Chicago bowling tournament for five consecutive years and have won many national and sectional titles. Both are members of the Boyle Valve team, which, under the name of the P. L. Wethe team, took the Randolph league championship last year.

In the coming match De Vito will roll against Cohen and Stein will bowl against Marino.

Otto Reiselt, the Philadelphia cue star, remained in the lead of the National Three Cushion Billiard league after last week's play. The present standing of the league follows:

	W.	L.	H.R.	B.G.
Otto Reiselt, Philadelphia	64	36	12	29

The standing of the Chicago Billiard league, in which the competitors are playing for the William J. Blake trophy, follows:

Sunday, Feb. 21, the annual "women's partners sweepstakes," which will be open to all women bowlers, will be rolled at Bensinger's Wabash alleys.

The ninth annual tournament of the Chicago Women's Bowling association will be staged at Bensinger's Randolph alleys from Feb. 27 to March 12. The entry lists will close Feb. 15.

Tomorrow will see the last game of the L. A. B. three cushion tournament, which has been in progress at Mussey's, 67 West Madison street, for several weeks. Dick Hefter and Edward Fisher will meet in the final game, which will decide first and second places. Each player has won 5 games and lost 1. They play 40 points from scratch.

Chicago has entered more than 200 teams in the American Bowling congress at Toledo.

Bird Spectacle in Louisiana Marsh Thrills Becker

BY BOB BECKER.

In the Marsh, Louisiana Gulf Coast, Feb. 6.—[Special.]—A sunrise in the Louisiana marsh is an experience you do not soon forget. Thousands of acres of flat, low lying marsh land, countless thousands of ducks, cormorants, pelicans and other water birds—when you are guided through this combination you get a thrill a minute.

We were up at four this morning to find a cold northwest wind blowing, anything but a welcome greeting to one who must sit in a tiny duck boat. Five o'clock found us in the lee of a ramshackle unpainted cabin waiting for Tony, our guide, to finish his coffee. Tony is a Cajan, a swarthy French speaking marsh dweller, in whose veins flows the blood of the old French Acadians of the Evangeline country. Standing outside of Tony's cabin trying to find a warm spot out of the wind, I could hear Tony and his pals talking in musical staccato French patois, which they speak fluently, whereas their English is broken and difficult to understand.

A few minutes later Tony put me in the front of his pirogue. Down a narrow "trenas," or channel, he poled the craft toward the ponds in the marsh where we were going to watch the morning flight of waterfowl. Sunrise came with a rush. The murky, obscure light over cat-tails and water gave way to a suffused glow from the east as we paddled across a big pond.

As if this light in the east were a signal the ducks began to fly. The marsh had awakened to a new day, and how the blackjack or ring necked ducks, and the gray ducks, did snap into it. You could hear much splashing, a whistle of wings, and then silhouetted against the sky would be five hundred or a thousand waterfowl. They hurled themselves against that pinkish glow in the east, they wheeled, darted and zipped down wind to vanish behind us.

Tony shoved our pirogue into a bunch of cat-tails so that we could enjoy a ringside seat for the morning show.

THE most noticeable of the changes in the Improved Star Fours are the new Hayes-Hunt bodies, being in construction, style, finish and appointments unsurpassed in low-priced automobiles.

The new chassis frame has sub-frame mounting of the transmission unit that insures permanent alignment. A "kick-up" over the rear axle and lowered front axle lowers the bodies two inches, increases driving ease and riding comfort.

The Continental Red Seal Star Four Motor is the most modern, most powerful in low-priced cars.

ELCAR proves its greatness at the Auto Show

Ten minutes after the doors of the Coliseum opened on the first day of the Auto Show, the first ELCAR 8-in-Line was sold off the floor of the ELCAR display. When the doors closed for the last time last night 42 ELCARS had been sold, dozens of demonstrations asked for and arranged, and hundreds had declared their intention of giving first thought to ELCAR when ready to purchase a new car . . . . Only a great car could achieve such a record. If you were of the thousands who daily thronged the show and who stopped for an admiring, covetous study of the ELCAR display, you will concede instantly the justice of ELCAR'S claim to greatness, for never was there a car which could more completely delight eye and mind than, for one, the 8-in-Line 5-passenger Sedan . . . . The eye finds its pleasure in lines eloquent of grace and speed and power — a body long and low, roomy within and luxuriously upholstered, superbly finished without in two-toned, enduring Murcote . . . . The mind finds assurance of lasting satisfaction in the more practical matters of mechanical features—the Lycoming motor, the sturdy frame, "Instant" chassis lubrication, hydraulic four wheel brakes, balloon tires, Swan carburetor and manifold . . . . and finally, the price—$2265 (f. o. b. Elkhart, Indiana), which makes this greatest of ELCARS the outstanding value of its class.

This Is Way Granges Dressed When Grandpa Was a Kid

[This is the first of a series of articles by Morrow Krum dealing with the correct thing in sports apparel of two generations ago.]

BY MORROW KRUM.

No gladiator of Rome's famous Coliseum ever was more fully prepared to meet the exigencies of his favorite sport than was Arthur Curtis, one of Wisconsin's best gridders two generations ago. Dr. Arthur Curtis now is a physician and surgeon of prominence. When he romped into the gridiron he was prepared for football, trench warfare, shinney-on-your-own-side, or a wrestle with a steer. If you will look closely, you will see a pair of football shoes, heavy shinguards, heavily ribbed pants, as neat a little tight laced waist as ever adorned a male figure, an abundance of hair, and rather inelegant, not to say, baggy shoulder and arm pads. In action Dr. Curtis wore a heavy skull protector and probably a nose guard.

If the ferocity of 11 men garbed as Arthur Curtis didn't scare the enemy to death, other tactics were employed, but it has been said that psychology wins football games. Walter Eckersall says Dr. Curtis was one of the greatest of the nation's football players. Walter also says that the pads the doctor wore were not so good. They slipped around and got out of place. Still they added to the terror of the player's appearance.

Ask your grandpa if those weren't terrible times.

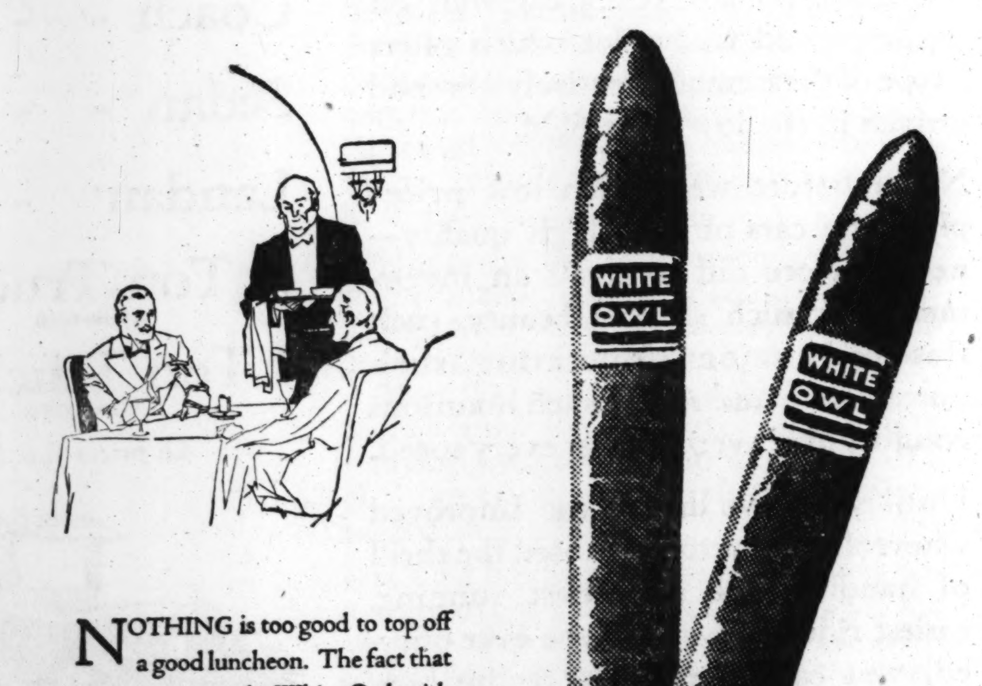
millions are saying "tasting better than ever"



NOTHING is too good to top off a good luncheon. The fact that so many men order White Owls with the coffee may, therefore, be taken as a strong indication that true judges of cigar value are considering only the sweetness of taste and mellowness of tobacco from the finest crop in years — and forgetting the low price made possible by enormous production facilities.

The Tribune will pay $5 for each question accepted for the Inquiring Reporter to ask. Send name and address with your question to "The Inquiring Reporter," Chicago Tribune.

The Question.

If a singles match is arranged in France between Helen Wills and Suzanne Lenglen, who do you think will win?

Where Asked.

Randolph at State street.

The Answers.

Miss Lillian Simions, 825 Edgecomb place, stenographer—Although Mlle. Lenglen is rated the world's best woman tennis player, I think Helen Wills would triumph in such a match. Suzanne has ability and experience, but lacks the necessary endurance. Helen has the skill and experience, plus the staying power. I have seen Miss Wills play and I believe it will take a world's champion to beat her.

Mlle. Tamiris, Drake hotel, dancer—If Miss Wills meets Mlle. Lenglen in France, Helen undoubtedly will conquer. I have seen both play and consider Miss Wills more skillful. Somehow I do not think they ever will meet, for the French star usually is evasive when the California girl is in her immediate vicinity.

John Dove, Los Angeles, Cal., skating acrobat—Mlle. Lenglen won't have a chance with Helen Wills. The California girl is the greatest woman net player of the day. If they meet the match may be hard fought, but I am sure Miss Wills will win. From present indications it will be difficult to match the pair.

Miss Bessie Pattison, San Francisco, Cal., singer—I have seen Miss Wills and nearly all the other great women tennis stars, but I consider the coast girl the best in the country, if not in the world. If she meets Mlle. Lenglen, Helen may have a hard match, but she'll win.

Miss Helen Blaire, Sheridan Arms hotel, actress—I have been interested in Miss Wills' ability with the racket for a long time. I have watched her play on many occasions. I think I know what her chances would be in such a match. If she meets Suzanne Lenglen, and I think she will, she will encounter a strong opponent. But Miss Wills will win. It's Helen's big chance. Don't you think she'll take advantage of it?

Scotland Beats Wales, 8-5, in Annual Rugby Match

EDINBURGH, Scotland, Feb. 6.—(AP)—Scotland defeated Wales in their annual international rugby football match today, 8 to 5.

DEMPSEY TO BOX TUNNEY HERE, IS TIP FROM EAST

Report Says Match Is Slated for October.

This is the latest story written in the ever increasing collection of stories concerning the ring plans of the long idle heavyweight champion. Unlike most of the other stories this one comes from what seems to be an authoritative source.

The backbone of the story is found in the assertion that Billy Gibson, manager of Tunney, has notified P. T. Harmon, builder of the proposed $8,000,000 stadium on the west side of Chicago, that Harmon's proposition for the fight is satisfactory both to Tunney and to Dempsey.

It's a Muddled Outlook.

Gibson now is in Florida and so is Tunney. Dempsey is in Atlanta, Ga. It is reported here that Harmon is sending a representative to Florida next week to go over the details of the fight with Gibson.

The fight experts here admit that the plans of Dempsey are involved sadly and it is impossible to tell what the champion really intends to do. He has contributed to the confusion by giving out contradictory stories at every opportunity. Floyd Fitzsimmons has helped deepen this muddle by announcing periodically that Dempsey intends to fight under his promotion and that the fight may be held anywhere from Michigan City to Boyle's thirty acres. Tex Rickard recently got in bad with the New York boxing commission by refusing to deny the story that he planned to match Dempsey and Tunney in New Jersey, and Los Angeles did its bit to upset all other yarns by sending out a statement that Dempsey and Wills would fight in the west.

Harmon Won't Talk.

The New York source from which the Chicago story seeped today said that no verification would be obtained from Harmon. "He'll probably deny this story, at least refuse to discuss it," the informer said. "Harmon knows it is foolish to discuss a championship fight until after the April primaries in Chicago and the boxing bill has been ratified.

"Harmon also knows that it would be courting disaster to stage a Dempsey-Wills battle in Chicago. The race angle might result in trouble and irreparable damage be done to boxing in Chicago. Harmon also is said to believe that Tunney is a better match for Dempsey than the 36 year old colored fighter."

THE SPORTING GOODS by WESTBROOK PEGLER

WHERE THE WORST IS NONE TOO BAD.

In Florida the prize fight business is conducted on a strange basis. A recent governor of that state decreed that only bad fights should be permitted. Champions and all other fighters suspected of proficiency in their violent vocation are forbidden to practice in the state of Florida, and promoters are rather hard put to find fighters bad enough to conform to the legal requirements.

You may think that this should be easy enough—you may even rattle off a specimen fight card, made up of prize fighters bad enough to keep far within the Florida law. But whom would you take for your standard? The governor who issued the decree neglected to define a bad fighter, and the best minds of the fight business differ on the matter, some holding that all fighters worse than Fred Fulton should be eligible, others insisting that the standard should be set as low as Joe Beckett.

But, if you accepted either of these as a standard, where would you find the talent to make up a card of four bouts? Of course, you would select Mike McTigue for your main event, matching him with, say, Joe Stoessel. And for your semi-final you couldn't ignore Tut Jackson of Washington Courthouse, O. He probably would be paired with Young Jack McAuliffe, although we have heard that young Jack has retired from the ring to capitalize his peculiar talents as a demonstrator for a mattress firm.

Florida, we take it, is perilous ground for the prize fighter. A boy may represent himself as a thoroughly punk fighter and exhibit as credentials a pair of callouses as big as pancakes on his shoulder blades. But he might be matched with some one very much worse and thus be made to look pretty good by contrast. Many injustices are committed in the name of the law and such a boy might be arrested by the constables and convicted of making a good fight, although innocent.

Willie Stribling has boxed in Florida and we suspect that the authority who certified him as one of the eligibles under the regulations was taking a dirty dig at Willie Stribling. Willie may make a lukewarm fight now and again when the house is short, but he certainly is a good prize fighter and therefore has been guilty of an offense against the laws of Florida.

THE EMBOTTLED UMPIRES.

Professional hockey apparently offers all the sanquinary charm that has been refined out of baseball in this age of regulation, ethics, etiquette, and discipline. It has been a long time since the customers at a major league ball game indulged in that dangerous pleasure known as the bottle shower, some clubs having forbidden the sale of cold drinks, however mild, among the crowds in order to deprive the impetuous members of their brittle bouquets.

There have been no bottle showers at the ice hockey games in New York where the influence of refinement as exerted by the police, the boxing commission, and the baseball authorities has just about extinguished this once noble event. But there have been fine showers in both Montreal and Ottawa this winter and perhaps the old classic can be revived in the United States before the retired stars have died off.

In fact, hockey may save not only the fine old sport of socking the umpire, but the allied sport of rioting, which is all but extinct in the stadiums on this side of the border. The Canadians riot well and with slight provocation, whereas we have wasted six years in vain to send the flash over the wire: "Riot breaks out in the Garden."

The night that Willie Stribling fought his return bout with Mickey McTigue in the Newark armory we thought the long awaited moment had arrived. The atmosphere was somewhat tense, anyway, because the Ku Klux Klan was booming at the time and Stribling came from Georgia, whereas McTigue was a Corkonian Irishman and a sort of color bearer for those who walked out of step with the night gowned Nordics.

OURSELVES AS OTHERS SEE US.

It is generally agreed among American coaches, trainers, and the like that athletes should neglect John Barleycorn and jilt the nicotine girl. An American football player who is found guilty of gazing on the wine when it is synthetic or smudging his tonsils with the fumes of the toxic shrub automatically becomes an ex-football player and a traitor to his alma mater.

But when the English athletes come across to romp in our gymnasiums we notice them smoking the wood burner, or pipe, whenever they like, and we understand that they irrigate their systems with ale, port, and even an occasional tot of hard liquor. Perhaps they overdo it a little bit, just to scandalize and amaze those among us who hold that one jolt of ponjola or one whiff of smoke will stunt the growth, lose race, impair the morals, and generally raise hell, if one may say so, with athletic constitution.

When the French youths were playing through to the challenge round of the Davis cup matches last summer, and spending more energy than a football player is asked to put forth, we saw them refresh themselves between sets with draughts of some fluid that looked more like three star Martelle than star spangled H-2-O.

But when Helen Wills appeared on the French Riviera recently she stirred up some genuine seven column amazement in the French press by declining a glass of champagne between sets with the remark that she hated the stuff and preferred orangeade. Miss Wills also passed up the cigarets, intimating that she never smoked, and the French couldn't get the idea.

Motor Official Declares War on Loop Congestion

Leads Industry in Drive for Double Deck Crossings.

AN OFFER of $25,000 in cash to start a fund to be secured from automobile manufacturers or Chicago business men to erect a double decked street crossing at State and Madison, Chicago's busiest corner, was made by E. H. Cord, president and general manager of the Auburn Automobile company, during show week.

"Traffic congestion in Chicago is at its worst at the street corner intersections," said Cord in urging the industry generally to help relieve congestion. "If Chicago people could look down from an airplane and see the maze of traffic at street intersections, one-half of which is held up while the other half moves slowly by the crossing, they would realize the necessity of immediate relief at street intersections.

"If we were to lower Madison street and elevate State street over it as a bridge we would eliminate all street crossing accidents and collisions, as well as doubling the capacity of the traffic of both streets and eliminating all crossing delays.

"Traffic stop lights naturally assist in handling traffic, but, in my opinion, they are but a makeshift and hold up traffic."

Cord asked industrial heads to fully support Secretary Herbert Hoover in his national conference on street and highway safety to be held in Washington, D. C., on March 23.

"I would like to suggest that every man engaged in the automobile industry, whether manufacturer, engineer, dealer, or salesman, and every automobile owner do his part in observing traffic regulations, assuming the personal responsibility of setting a good traffic example."

Commenting on the acceptance of his proposal, the Auburn official said, "With a contemplated production in 1926 of approximately 5,000,000 cars and with the prediction of statisticians that 30,000,000 automobiles will be owned in the United States in the near future, something must be done for the protection of the American citizen and his property and to facilitate the handling of traffic in our larger cities

"With our interests centered in Chicago, we want to contribute financially and morally to this greatest cause—the saving of life and property. If this subscription is not accepted by the city of Chicago, we stand ready to subscribe $25,000 to any one locality where such a fund may be started and completed to finance my proposed traffic program."

He's Out to Learn the Truth About Motordom.

The Tribune will pay $5 for each question accepted for the Inquiring Reporter to ask. Send name and address with your question to The Inquiring Reporter, Chicago Tribune. For today's question Marie V. McWilliams, Mayo Clinic, Rochester, Minn., was awarded $5.

The Question.

Do you approve of buying an automobile on the monthly payment plan?

Where Asked.

Washington boulevard and Kilbourn avenue.

The Answers.

Catherine Herald, 550 Swain avenue, Elmhurst, stenographer—The time payment plan in buying automobiles must be a good thing for the country and the industry generally, but personally I prefer buying outright and paying cold cash. After the "new" wears off a car it seems to me that monthly payments would become more and more annoying.

George Hutchison, 5023 Chicago avenue, artist — I have tried both the time payment and the cash purchases, and find that paying fully for a car at the time it is bought is by far the best plan. Cash saves time and annoyance for both the dealer and the purchaser, and it should be encouraged at all times when the purchaser is in a position to clean up the deal in the beginning.

Mrs. Lorraine Brennan, 108 Lamon avenue, housewife—I certainly favor the time payment plan in buying automobiles. It makes it possible for thousands of people who could not possibly pay cash for a car to enjoy all of the advantages of the automobile. Time purchases, too, keeps the dealer interested in the car purchased and makes for better service to the owner.

Thomas Maloney, 4612 Jackson boulevard, electrician—I prefer the time payment plan because it does not put a big hollow space in the pocketbook just at the time a new car needs cash to run on. If the industry had not established installment plans thousands of people could not now own cars.

Rose Herald, 550 Swain avenue, Elmhurst, operator — I think that monthly payments are the finest things established by the automobile industry. Everybody needs a car in these modern days, and not everybody could pay cash.

One Law for All Traffic Is Aim of Coast Experts

LOS ANGELES, Cal. — Sentiment for a uniform traffic ordinance is sweeping the cities and towns of the southland like wildfire, according to letters from city and county attorneys reaching the Automobile Club of Southern California. It seems probable that this section will be the first in the United States to have city laws governing motor vehicles conform approximately to a single standard.

To introduce the proposed plan throughout southern California, the legal department of the club recently sent to the attorneys for more than 200 towns and cities copies of an ordinance prepared with a view of general adoption. These attorneys were asked to consider the proposed law thoroughly and to give any assistance they could in bringing it to perfection for presentation to the law making bodies of the various communities. Replies received so far from the attorneys to whom the law was submitted are highly favorable and many contain pertinent suggestions indicating keen interest on the part of communities and a desire to make their local laws conform with those of other communities in regulating motor vehicles.

The proposed ordinance is the result of joint labors on the part of the public safety and legal departments of the club, aided by Dr. Miller McClintock, director of the bureau of traffic research of the University of California. It is believed that a uniform law is more important in this section than any other of the country, in view of the enormous number of motor vehicles owned here and the large number of touring motorists from all sections of the country.

It has long been held a bad situation to have laws governing motor vehicles changed with the passing of the limits of different communities as this contributes to unintentional law breaking and the incidental conflict with the authorities. Should the proposed uniform traffic law be generally adopted, as now seems probable, the motorist will have only one set of traffic rules to memorize and visiting tourists may travel free throughout southern California in the knowledge that they will be governed by the same law in one town as in another.

Chicago Traffic Ills Attacked by Effective Bureau

A. of C. Calls In National Body for Local Survey.

THE muddle of urban traffic has nearly overwhelmed many cities, and has cost sums approximating the capacity of the United States mint.

In Chicago numerous agencies are operating for relief. The latest is a traffic research bureau with a definite aim, national in scope, that does not content itself with theories and suggestions, but plunges right into traffic itself to find out from an engineering standpoint where the troubles lie and how they may be corrected.

Within two months from the time the Albert Russel Erskine bureau for street traffic research was established by a grant to the University of California, Dr. Miller McClintock was working out with the Association of Commerce of Chicago an engineering examination of the problem in that city which will give facts and plans adaptable to every community in the United States.

Work began Jan. 1. The Association of Commerce undertook the survey at the request of the Chicago city council. The Erskine bureau was called upon and Dr. McClintock made chief technical counsel.

This will be the most complete, most practical investigation ever made in a large city. It will involve:

Pedestrian safety and regulation.
Street car and bus operation.
Heavy truck traffic.
Signal installation.
Speed control.
Parking regulations and conditions.
Street obstruction for building and other operations.
Law enforcement.

Dr. McClintock has long been an acknowledged expert, with practical ideas regarding traffic control. He wrote the Los Angeles traffic code, which has attracted wide attention and which has been a practical success.

Such a code will be developed for the metropolitan area of Chicago. Modified, it will serve any other American commonwealth which asks it.

With it will be prepared a manual for police traffic control which will be practically the first authoritative such work ever prepared.

Officials everywhere, including police traffic chiefs, have been invited to submit their problems to the bureau for all the help it can give.

The vast amount of material which this bureau will have always available will be accessible at all times to public officials in any city which cares to take advantage of it, though the bureau is in no sense a general consulting organization.

Its primary object is to develop street traffic engineering, and two scholarships in this technical subject are included in the grant.

Though presented to the University of California by the Studebaker Corporation of America, the name and control of that company has been entirely divorced from the bureau, so that its achievements may be not alone untrammeled, but freely available for their engineering value to every community in the country.

Smaller Motors, Cheaper Fuel to Enter Motordom

MEMBERS of the Society of Automotive Engineers who attended the annual meeting in Detroit last week found much to talk about in the maze of scientific research and experiments that is going on in the industry in an effort to make cars cheaper to operate, less costly to buy, and longer lived.

It was pointed out how motor cars and trucks will eventually be powered with small, lightweight engines using the heaviest grades of low cost oil for fuel; of efforts being made by the oil industry to perfect a nondetonating motor fuel; and of the practical results obtained in using steam as the cooling agency for motors.

There were other interesting papers read, which dealt with methods of preventing brake squeals, the trend among auto body finishers toward the study of current fashions in silk and textile colorings to apply to their own craft, the part animal bones and insects play in the development of paint colors, and development of greater engine power.

Owing to the large increase in winter driving, as indicated by the fact that the percentage of closed automobiles to all passenger cars produced in this country has more than in the last five years, and now tutes half of all cars manufac the problem of satisfactory at low temperatures has assumed importance, and it has become sary to make a more intensive gation of the difficulties in winter driving and of prevent them.

Driving in closed cars is as able at speeds of 35 to 40 miles hour as at more moderate Extensive tests of cars operating zero weather are now made by of an ammonia refrigerating where the temperature is reduced any desired degree, with a blower recting a current of air directly the radiator of a test car, at a 35 miles an hour.

PONTIAC SIX

Captures Chicago

PONTIAC
CHIEF OF THE SIXES

PRODUCT OF GENERAL MOTORS

Fresh from its laurels at the New York Automobile Show, the new Pontiac Six scored a spectacular triumph at its presentation to the motorists of Chicago.

At the local automobile show, at our salesrooms on Michigan Boulevard and throughout the city, it excited interest to fever heat.

Retail orders for the full week established a record destined to stand for years to come.

We witnessed the Pontiac's presentation at the Chicago Show—saw the crowds milling about the display in the Coliseum—heard them ask questions, express opinions, and draw comparisons between Pontiac Six and other sixes and fours that sell for more.

The Pontiac Six in reality is over three years old—because over three years ago General Motors determined to develop a Six so high in quality and low in price as to win instant public acceptance.

To that end were devoted the almost limitless resources of the corporation. And, as a result, the Pontiac Six introduces into the field of low priced sixes certain desirable, tangible features so new and unique that a radical revision of the nation's ideas on motor car values is already under way.

Engineers will tell you that the Pontiac Six has "almost a square motor." That's their way of describing its comparatively large bore and short stroke —3¼x3¾. In every day English it means that the Pontiac power-plant was designed to roll up multiples of a thousand miles with minimum mechanical attention.

It is a big power-plant, too. Its piston displacement is 186.5 cubic inches—the largest official rating of any six with closed body priced below $1,000—with more officially rated power per pound of car weight, too!

In addition to stamina, margin of power and entire absence of strain and effort, the Pontiac Six motor has a flexibility and smoothness that most men believed were beyond the ability of any group of engineers to attain in any low priced six. And if you doubt that in the slightest, just get behind the wheel!

Merely on the basis of such a phenomenal motor, the Pontiac Six would establish an entirely new basis for comparison. But General Motors wanted to establish a difference in value so emphatic, decisive, and obvious, as to compel a rigid comparison with all heretofore values.

So they added to the Pontiac Six these other features that buyers have always wanted in a low priced six—and always wanted in vain, namely:—

Genuine beauty—a superior Fisher Body with all the quality and superlative craftsmanship that the Fisher emblem denotes the world over. The only Fisher Body offered on a six-cylinder closed car priced below $925—

—a Fisher Body in rich Duco colors, completely equipped with such beauty of line, color, contrast and finish that it literally explodes the theory that a low priced six body has to be dumpy, dowdy and drab.

An element of bigness so marked that it is one of the first things to catch your attention; headroom that ends the damaging of hats and skulls; wide, free-swinging doors; deep, loungy, comfortably cushioned seats.

Comfort and all that the word implies. Pontiac's 110" wheelbase combined with full balloon tires (29x4.75) and scientific spring suspension, marks the end of the day when the owner of a low priced six has to baby his car on rough roads at high speeds or apologize to his passengers.

After an almost endless series of tests at the General Motors Proving Grounds under every conceivable condition—at the hands of engineers and testers who delight to break the heart of a car, the Pontiac Six was developed, improved and brought to final perfection.

Judging from the universal reception of this new car everywhere, we are convinced that the factory will never be able to meet the demand for the Pontiac Six for months to come—despite heroic preparations involving the expenditure of millions.

Nothing could be more logical. Why shouldn't sensible investors the country over turn to a six that offers beauty, bigness, comfort, stamina, quality and thrilling performance for only $825—less than the cost of some four-cylinder cars—and that can be purchased at substantial savings on the extremely liberal General Motors Time Payment Plan. They will. And when they do, we here in Chicago will feel the effect—not enough cars to go around.

Arrange now to place your order. It makes no difference with which Oakland-Pontiac dealer you place it—priority will be based solely on date. Assure yourself today of getting delivery when you are ready to take it.

Hundreds are going to be compelled to wait next spring. Now is the time for you to act.

National Shows Insure Greatest Motor Car Year

Price Revisions Still Interest Factory Experts.

BY WHITCOMB WILLIAMS.

DETROIT, Mich., Feb. 6.—[Special.]—With the New York, Detroit and Chicago automobile shows—the annual classics—off their minds, automobile manufacturers and dealers are looking forward to the work of keeping their supply of both passenger cars and trucks up to within speaking distance of the anticipated demand.

As expected, the big shows were larger and better than ever. New York and Chicago report new attendance records at their national shows, which indicates decisively that the public has no intention of easing up in their purchasing of automobiles. It is nearly one year ago that buying began as never before. This condition increased and continued throughout the year, and every indication points to the fact that it will continue indefinitely. So sure, in fact, are the manufacturers that they are right in their belief that schedules for the year are larger than ever before. By early spring practically all the new expansions of the leading companies will be ready for business and the increased outputs. These expansions have cost in excess of $100,000,000, and include both mammoth buildings and new machinery for the newest models in passenger cars.

An important problem in this year's automobile business, and one that has been growing rapidly during the last few years, is competition. Opinion is about equally divided among those in the trade on the question of a further or general price revision. That present prices will maintain throughout the year is the conclusion of some, while other are of the firm opinion that some general price increase will be affected by the time the half year period is reached.

It is pointed out by the "bears" in the trade that the quite recent general downward move by manufacturers of cars in the semi-low priced class will eventually force the cheaper grades to a further cut in an endeavor to keep the buying public from paying a few dollars more and getting a higher grade car.

With the steadily diminishing number of companies now manufacturing automobiles, and if business maintains its precent activities, the public may continue to expect to look for lower price tags on its automobiles. Ever since the manufacture of automobiles has become an established industry this has been its history, and will undoubtedly continue in the future.

On the other hand manufacturers themselves declare that possible price changes—if there are any within the next few months—will not be downward, and boldly announce, at least many of them do, that recent reductions were too sharp considering the rising cost of raw materials, particularly rubber.

But one thing is certain. Prospective buyers of 1926 models should not delay in placing their orders because they are told one make or another is planning a price reduction. The price is liable to go the wrong way, and it must be remembered that manufacturers are not in the habit of giving advance notices on price changes.

Unless the automobile industry falls victim to a credit laxity no one at this year's shows could foresee anything but a bumper day ahead. The coolest and steadiest minds in the industry seem to agree that the only possible threat ahead lies in too small payments on time sales and that nothing short of a national collapse can rob the business of a large volume of sales and a satisfactory profit this year.

Whether or not a new production and sales record will be hung up on the evening of Dec. 31 next remains to be seen. If the demand warrants it, the manufacturers are in excellent position to satisfy it—in better position, in fact, than ever before.

TIGHTEN WHEN COLD.

Tighten up parts of the car when the engine is cold. Heat expands and if this is remembered a perfect job may be had.

FARM AND GARDEN

Shipping Cattle Direct from Farm to Packing Plant

Farmers Are Divided on Efficacy of This New Method.

BY FRANK RIDGWAY.

SHIPPING live stock direct from the farm to the packing plant to avoid the extra charges and commissions tacked on the animals as they pass through the terminal stockyards has injected one of the most upsetting questions that has ever confronted the interests involved in the meat industry.

It has recently become one of the most vital issues in live stock circles. Men discuss it with a finger on their lips, warning that "there is dynamite in this direct shipping proposition," perhaps because it involves such a wide range of interest with investments of billions of dollars. It includes the individual farmer, producers' coöperative selling agencies, transportation interests, terminal stockyard companies, old line commission firms, and the packers. Worlds of things are being said by both advocates and opponents, but most of them wind up with "this is just for your personal information—I'm not to be quoted."

Idea Is Not New.

The shipping of live stock direct from local concentration points has been practiced, more or less, for about 25 years. Hard surfaced roads and motor trucks have added new impetus to the movement. Development of this system and the movement of live stock, particularly hogs, direct to packers, has been growing at a fairly rapid pace during the last few years. It is roughly estimated that approximately one-fifth, or 20 per cent, of all the hogs marketed in the United States are sent direct from the local shipping stations to the packing houses instead of going over the regular route that takes them through the terminal stockyards, where they are handled by commission merchants.

One-fifth of the hogs marketed in the United States last year were sent direct from farms or local concentration centers to packing plants instead of through central markets. There are farmers wondering today if the direct system of marketing can be developed to the point where terminal live stock markets can be done away with. Is their question absurd? Opinions of the various interests concerned in the handling of live stock will be given in this department. The first article appears below and others will follow. Your opinion will be welcome. Address your letter to the agricultural editor of The Tribune.

About 11,000,000 of the 53,000,000 hogs marketed in the United States last year went over the direct route and did not reach the terminal markets. Whether this will put more money in the pockets of the farmer in the long run has become a debatable question which has been seriously considered at various live stock meetings throughout the country this winter.

The direct plan is being developed on an extensive scale particularly in Iowa, and Minnesota. In Ohio, parts of Indiana, and to some extent in Illinois, hogs are being marketed direct. The Iowa State college at Ames, Ia., is authority for the figures which show that 26.8 per cent of the farmers' hogs in Iowa are shipped direct to packers; 9.6 per cent to reloading stations or concentration points, and 63.6 per cent to the central markets.

What Iowa Farmers Save.

The Iowa farmers, who ship their hogs direct, save about 25 cents a hundred, according to Charles E. Hearst, president of the Iowa State Farm bureau. He says that shrinkage is higher on direct shipments.

The movement is growing rapidly in Ohio. F. G. Ketner, manager of the Eastern States company [a farmer owned company], and live stock director of the farm bureau in that state, says that last year, the second year for his company, farmers shipped direct to 22 different packers 66,794 head of hogs, netting the shippers $1,812,218. This company handled 14.67 per cent of the hogs marketed coöperatively in Ohio last year. These hogs were shipped direct to the packers from 29 counties in Ohio, and from five shipping points in Indiana.

Mr. Ketner estimates that through this direct plan of shipping, hog raisers save from 10 to 35 cents a hundred pounds. The hogs are sold on a dressing percentage guarantee basis and the packer benefits by getting what he pays for. The farmers, selling through the Eastern States company, guarantee that hogs dress out 73 to 77 per cent, cold weight.

Trucks Are Important Item.

The farmers find a trucking system is necessary in order to haul in the hogs from the farms surrounding the concentration points. With trucks enough hogs can be collected to attract packer buyers.

The system followed by the Ohio company brings about the centralization of selling and decentralized or direct shipping. Direct shipping without centralized selling is a vicious practice from the producers' standpoint, according to Mr. Ketner.

Missouri farmers who ship their live stock through a coöperative association to the East St. Louis market, had almost the opposite experience from that of the producers in Ohio. By carefully checking the returns on shipments of hogs over a period of months the Missouri farmers discovered that the direct shippers were losing money. Hogs of about the same grade were shipped direct, while a similar number were shipped to the stock yards and those sold through the terminal market returned to the farmers $24.05 a carload more than the hogs sent straight to the packing plants.

Opinions Differ.

Farmers themselves are divided on the question. Many now actively opposing the direct shipping plan, believing that in the long run live stock prices are lowered. Packers seem to like both systems. Commission men of the old line group and the stock yard companies are against the direct shipping method. Some of the live stock producer organizations are on the fence, opposing it as it is operated today, and yet they know it is here perhaps to stay and are struggling to meet whatever condition develops in the future.

The National Live Stock Producers' association at its recent annual meeting, held in Chicago, appointed a committee of five to make a fair study of the entire situation and endeavor to find what the farmers' group selling agency's attitude should be toward the direct selling plan.

There are live stock raisers who believe the direct selling plan is best for the farmer and in a superficial study of the situation have come to wonder if the central live stock yards, as known today, can be done away with and the markets shifted to the local concentration points. This suggestion, of course, is considered extremely absurd by stock yard companies and the commission men who make their living selling live stock at the terminal markets.

Ground Almonds

Grow them in your garden. A delicious nut with a flavor resembling the cocoanut or the Almond. Meat snow white, shell very thin. Very prolific, a single nut yielding from 200 to 300 nuts in a hill and will do well in any kind of soil.

Plant in the spring the same as potatoes and a big crop can be expected about potato harvest time. Grow some for the children. Everybody likes them.

Send 10 cents in silver or 2 cent stamps for a package of these nuts or 25 cents for 3 packets.

BROKERS' LOANS $3,513,174,154; WALL ST. JARRED

New York, Feb. 6.—[Special.]—Brokerage firms affiliated with the New York stock exchange borrowed $3,513,174,154 from banks, trust companies and other banking agencies in New York City as of Jan. 30, for the purpose of carrying on their operations, both for customers and investment account, according to an official statement issued by the New York stock exchange today.

This vast sum includes $2,516,960,599 borrowed on demand loans, and $996,213,555 borrowed on time loans. If the loans of investment bankers and brokerage organizations not members of the stock exchange were included, it is estimated the total borrowings for Wall street speculative and investment account would approximate $5,000,000,000.

Loans Larger than Expected.

It was pointed out that $2,516,960,599, or 71 per cent, was borrowed on call or demand loans, and $996,213,555, or 28 per cent, on time loans. Loans of $3,043,044,309, or 86 per cent, were obtained from New York banks and trust companies, while $470,129,845, or 13 per cent, were obtained from other lenders.

Wall street was taken by surprise at the magnitude of the promised figures. One often-cited private estimate of $2,500,000,000 had been rather commonly deemed too high. Of the total loans reported, approximately $1,310,729,012 was borrowed through out of town branches and correspondent offices.

Loans Small on Market Values.

Large as the total of loans may seem, the aggregate of these loans, according to E. H. H. Simmons, president of the stock exchange, constitutes less than 6 per cent of the total market value of securities listed on the exchange, about 7 per cent of the market value of listings exclusive of United States government bonds, and about 10 per cent of listed stocks alone.

"The securities listed on the New York stock exchange have experienced a notable increase," President Simmons said. "Listed stock issues on Jan. 1, 1919, numbered only 612, as against 1,045 on Jan. 1, 1926—an increase of seventy per cent. Similarly, listed bond issues have increased from 1,131 to 1,368 issues—an increase of twenty per cent. At the beginning of this year the market value of issues listed totaled approximately $70,000,000,000. Exclusive of United States government bonds, the market value of listed issues amounted to $52,118,877,999, consisting of $34,480,257,125 stocks and $17,638,550,874 bonds."

Deal Only Through Reputable Investment Houses.

The importance to investors of purchasing their securities through reputable investment houses cannot be overstressed.

When there are so many substantial houses which have built up an excellent reputation for honorable dealings it is difficult to understand why so many investors blindly invest their funds through obscure houses or through individuals of whom nothing is known.

It costs no more to invest through the most reputable house than through an unknown or shady one. And in the long run it may cost a great deal less, for the chances of loss in dealing with the latter are always present.

In dealing with a house or an individual that is a stranger to you, you have no guarantee of honest dealing except a stranger's word—and what is that worth?

You have no assurance that the security you are purchasing is all that it is represented to be.

You have no assurance, in some instances, that they have actually purchased the security and had it transferred to your name.

You have no assurance that they will endeavor to protect your interests in the event that anything should later go wrong and place your investment in danger.

You have no assurance, even, that the house or individual will still be there if you need their assistance later.

A thoroughly reputable investment house has built up its reputation through consistently dealing honorably with its customers.

This reputation has become one of its most valuable assets, and it cannot afford to jeopardize it by dealing otherwise. Its success depends on its continuing to live up to its reputation.

Such a house depends on continued patronage and reorders from a satisfied clientele, and to secure this it must not only deal fairly with them, but must protect their investments as far as possible after the securities have been purchased.

To have an investment "go bad" after it has been purchased from the house might lose it a lot of future business. Many reputable houses will, therefore, endeavor to watch the securities they have sold, and, if any weakness or danger threatens, will frequently attempt to strengthen the securities and avert the danger, even to the extent of advancing considerable sums of their own money for the purpose.

Such houses must employ a competent staff of experts to enable them to carefully and thoroughly investigate each proposition connected with any issue they intend to underwrite, and the assistance of this staff, as well as the exhaustive records and files of information kept, are always at the service of the investor.

And last, but not least, the reputable and established investment house is in business to stay and is always there when you want it.

$10 DOWN

BEST BUILT

$10 Down Will Bring You $240 a Year

Almost unbelievable—yet it's a fact. Only $10.00 required. Then we start building.

Any car owner will gladly pay $10.00 a month for garage rent. In some localities the rent is $12.00—and in still others, $15.00. But we will figure conservatively—and say $10.00.

A two-car Best Built Garage will bring at least $20.00 a month rent—$240.00 a year. If you own a car, pay yourself the rent instead of using a public garage.

Your monthly income from the garage will take care of all expenses—and after the garage is paid for, the income continues month after month—year after year.

All this on $10.00! That's all you need to convert some idle, vacant space near your alley into an income for life.

Every Best Built Garage includes:

Cement floor; slate-coated shingle roof that is guaranteed for 15 years; electric light; plumbing; painting; exclusively designed hardware and other conveniences.

All Offices Open Daily, 8:30 to 5:30. Monday and Wednesday Evenings Till 9; Sundays, 9 to 4

Corn lost ⅛@⅜c and closed with May at 82½@83⅜c and July at 85⅝@85¼c, final figures being at the lowest point of the day. Oats were ¼@½c lower, with May 43@42⅞c and July 43⅜c, while rye was 1¾@2c lower, with May $1.06 and July $1.06⅞.

Wheat prices had a range of 3⅜@4⅞c for the week, but the undertone was easy on the May and it closed 1⅝c lower than the finish of the previous week, while the new crop months were ⅛@¾c higher. Corn was 1⅝@1⅞c lower, and oats ⅝@1⅞c lower for the week, with rye 1⅛@3⅛c lower. Lard declined 22½@35c and bellies 15@25c for the week, with ribs 12½c higher.

Light Trade in Wheat.

Trade in wheat largely was of a local character, with little in the news that attracted attention. An advance of 1½@3½d in Liverpool and ½@1c in Buenos Aires was responsible for the early firmness, but the buying was not aggressive, and some of the locals who absorbed the offerings the previous day started to take profits, and found support limited, the decline of 1⅛@2⅛c from the top being easily attained. Winnipeg was weak and 1⅛@1⅞c lower. February at Buenos Aires closed at $1.53½ and March at $1.56⅝. Rosario was ⅛c lower with February, $1.62½.

A continued lack of aggressive export demand is counting heavily against the maintenance of bulges, and local sentiment as a whole is more bearish than for some time past. A further easing in premiums at Omaha was reported, and indications are for larger receipts in the southwest. The trade look for a moderate decrease in the visible supply on Monday. A few unfavorable crop reports are coming from parts of Illinois, but the trade regard it as entirely too early in the season to start a crop scare.

Oats Near Season's Low.

Corn and oats were dull and easy, with the weakness in wheat a factor. Nearby deliveries of oats sold within a fraction of the lowest figures of the season, and the best support in both corn and oats came from shorts and from scattered commission houses. No change of consequence was made in the cash corn basis. Charters for 300,000 bu. oats were made at 3c to Buffalo, including winter storage here until opening of lake navigation.

Rye showed more weakness than wheat and scattered liquidation was in evidence on the decline. No export demand of consequence has developed during the last few weeks and bulls have become discouraged.

Flaxseed at Buenos Aires closed unchanged with February, $1.65.

DRY GOODS AND GARMENT NEWS

[Copyright: 1926: Fairchild News Service.]

NEW YORK.—The usual Saturday calm prevailed today in the local gray goods market. Little business was transacted and prices were unchanged.

NEW YORK.—The week concluded today with continued dullness and weakness reported in both the local and Calcutta burlap markets. Prices were unchanged.

PHILADELPHIA.—Both carded and combed cotton yarns have maintained their price stability during the last week. The situation in yarns and cotton goods has shown little change so far this month. The majority of dealers are playing safe, with little choice in the matter, since most of their customers and the spinners are adhering to the same policy.

NEW YORK.—The local and foreign raw silk markets were reported holding steady today, with little change noted. Yokohama wired that 100 to 200 bales had changed hands in the open market and prices unchanged. Canton was reported easier with prices on 14-16s about $5.25.

NEW YORK.—Gradual shortening in the supply of certain numbers was the outstanding development during the last week in the primary rayon market. Reports advised that heavy fiber, 300 denier and larger had turned to bigger business.

BANKRUPTCY PETITIONS

The following bankruptcy petition was filed yesterday. Forest R. MacFarlane; liabilities, $707; assets, $39. Attorney, H. R. Brintlinger.

CASH·GRAIN NEWS

Export demand for cash wheat at the seaboard was flat, and while there were claims of 70,000 bu durum being sold to Italy, some exporters claimed there was wheat headed for that country that could not be sold except at heavy losses as compared with replacement cost. The same applied to Manitobas. No business in other grains was claimed.

Chicago handlers sold 3,000 bu wheat, 22,000 bu corn; 44,000 bu oats, and 2,000 bu barley to the domestic trade.

Basis on hard winter wheat at Omaha was quoted ½c lower yesterday with No. 2 hard 3c under Chicago May. St. Louis and Kansas City basis was unchanged while locally premiums were steady with No. 2 hard, 7@8c over May.

Demand for cash corn was fair and the basis ½c lower to 1c higher with No. 3 grades, 5@9c; No. 4 grades, 9½@13½c; No. 5 grades, 13@16½c, and No. 6 grades, 17@18½c under May. Outside markets were ½c higher to 1c lower.

Offerings of cash oats were light, but demand less active and the basis was unchanged to ½c lower as compared with May. No. 2 white sold at 1¼@1⅜c, and No. 3 white at 1¼@2¼c under the future.

Official receipts of grain at Chicago Saturday: Wheat, 25 cars; corn, 174 cars; oats, 39 cars; rye, 3 cars; barley, 21 cars.

WORLD'S·GRAIN MARKET·NEWS

Pit longs in wheat and corn unloaded freely at the close, making a weak finish, with trading continuing after the regular hours, which is unusual. Sentiment was so bearish that it created active buying of bids for Monday in both wheat and corn, with the finish at the lowest of the day.

A great deal of comment was heard about the general tiredness of the wheat and corn trade, and the limited outside business. Sentiment was so bearish that ordinarily it would mean that the market was in a position to rally with any good buying.

There are indications of a moderate decrease in the visible supply on Monday. Chicago stocks should show a small reduction, Kansas City decreased 113,000 bu in five days, and Minneapolis decreased 200,000 bu for the week. The world's shipments for the week are estimated at 11,700,000 bu, against 18,760,000 bu last year.

There was a lot of selling of wheat by commission houses at the last, who are said to have been long and the northwest was also a seller early. The fact that Winnipeg wheat closed in the bids was regarded as significant by the bears, considering the advance in Liverpool cables.

A report from New York said there is no use worrying about the Argentine corn crop, as all advices indicate that it is made and harvesting will commence next month.

"The wheat situation remains one of theories of possible exhaustion as opposed to a very indifferent export demand," Thompson & McKinnon says. "Action of the market shows that theories are losing their force and that the market needs something concrete and tangible to advance, or even maintain prices. There is little opportunity of an important betterment in the distributing of coarse grains and they will continue to feel the weight of the accumulations now in commercial channels."

Marketing of wheat in the Canadian northwest has dwindled for weeks, and is running about 300,000 bu a day, and are expected to be quite moderate for the balance of the season, says the Winnipeg Free Press. It is safe to say that the Canadian surplus still to be sold is now in the visible supply, or about 115,000,000 bu. The wheat position on Feb. 4 is as follows: Delivered by farmers, 324,900,000 bu. Loadings out of country elevators, 294,296,000 bu. Inspections, 291,639,150 bu. Shipments from Fort Williams and Port Arthur, 180,357,891 bu. Vancouver position at the same date was: Receipts, 35,806,400 bu; shipments, 31,934,864 bu. Vancouver shipments in the last week were 2,672,000 bu.

Winnipeg messages said that it looked like the pool was selling wheat at the close on Friday and again on Saturday.

A Scottish grain firm expresses the opinion that they had believed the European wheat requirements had been overestimated. Now they regard the invisible supplies as small, as buyers have had no confidence and have bought in a hand to mouth way.

A Liverpool message says that Germany exported 1,600,000 bu last week and continues to offer wheat freely. Her large rye crop has made some think that she will export wheat the balance of the season. The better opinion is that she will import as much strong wheat as she exports of her native. The unusual feature is that German millers can see ample supplies, particularly Argentine, which will be of inferior quality and of poor natural weight. This it is feared will throw a heavy demand on the high grade Canadian wheat. This it is claimed will reveal itself when the demand revives, which cannot be far off, as heaviest arrivals appear to have been dealt with and quantities are small.

Lincoln, Neb., reports dirt roads in bad condition and marketings of corn are small. Des Moines and Fort Dodge, Ia., say country offerings of corn are improving. Springfield, Ill., reported weather fine, country roads are getting into better shape, but movement of corn is slow.

Liverpool strength was attributed to the rally in American markets which caused shorts to cover. Plate offerings were steady with some inquiry for nearby wheat. Chilian wheat crop is 4,800,000 bu larger than last year. It raised 24,000,000 bu last year.

Local hog buyers enjoyed a bargain sale in butcher grades yesterday. Arrivals at 6,500, including 3,100 "directs," were augmented by more than 14,000 carried over from Friday, which gave buyers all the advantage, and stock exceeding 200 lbs in weight declined mostly 10@25c, with instances of as much as 40c loss evident on medium and heavy butchers, comparing extremes. Good to choice 250@325 lb averages brought $12.00@12.65, few 225 lb weights reaching $13.00. High priced specialties in light weights sold upward to $14.00 for 160 lb averages, which were on par with Friday, were too few in numbers to cut much figure in the general market. General average price receded to $12.60, against $12.80 the previous Saturday. Prevailing quotations are mostly 15@25c under a week ago.

Hog Receipts Small.

Hog receipts at Chicago last week at 176,200 were second smallest since last November and below any corresponding period in over five years, being 40,900 under the five year average. The estimated average weight of hogs at 239 lbs. was heavier than any corresponding week in over five years and 9 lbs. above the five year average. The first $14.00 hogs this year appeared Friday, which goes back over four months for an equal. General average price at $12.80 also stands highest in over four months, being $2.20 above a year ago and $5.65 higher than two years ago.

Weakness prevailed in the cattle market most of last week, with closing prices unevenly lower than a week ago, inbetween grades of steers in spots indicating as much as 25@50c loss since the high time the previous week. Better grades depreciated the least, due to the scarcity of strictly prime offerings. General quality graded lower, which accounted for some of the decline in prices. Best yearlings available averaged 1,066 lbs., and topped at $11.65, against a peak of $12.00 at the high time the previous week. Steers averaging 1,595 lbs. reached $11.25. Butcher stock declined 25@50c. Calves show 50@75c decline since a week ago. Stockers and feeders lowered 25@40c in sympathy with the decline in fat steers.

Lamb Market Weak.

Lamb market broke sharply under moderate supplies early last week and was slow to recover losses in mid-week as country loadings were curtailed in an effort to check the drastic decline in prices, which are $3.50@4.00 under a year ago. The week's general average price at $14.50 was lowest in over four months and $3.70 under a year ago. Closing prices last week were 25@50c under a week previous. The week's top at $15.25 compares with $15.75 the previous week and $17.45 less than two months ago. Some lambs bringing below $15.00 last week were turned in as $16.00 feeders about two months ago. Matured sheep held firm throughout the last week. Yearlings ruled steady to 25c lower.

Receipts for Monday are estimated at 22,000 cattle, 62,000 hogs, and 22,000 sheep, against 26,340 cattle, 62,648 hogs, and 23,557 sheep a week ago, and 21,577 cattle, 66,922 hogs, and 14,176 sheep the corresponding day a year ago. Next week's receipts are estimated at 57,000 cattle, 185,000 hogs, and 76,000 sheep, against 56,211 cattle, 233,72 hogs, and 61,054 sheep a year ago.

KING MAMMON GOOD TO YANKS, VIEW OF BRITONS

BY HARPER LEECH.

Varying views of American policies and prospects by three Britons of widely different stations in life and partisans of different theories of human society have been widely read in the last few days. Laid side by side they tell us a great deal about ourselves.

The gentlemen who have diagnosed us are: Morgan Jones, Laborite member of parliament; Lord Rothermere, Northcliffe's successor, newspaper man and industrialist, F. C Goodenough, chairman of Barclay's bank, sharing the theories of finance and world politics that one finds in high finance here, especially Atlantic coast finance.

Jones is frankly disgusted with us. Mammon owns America, he says. But evidently Mammon prevails here, principally because his subjects earn enough money to buy Mammon's goods. Get this: "The people are very well dressed—far better dressed on the whole than in London. You could not easily pick out the members of one class from another in the streets as you can here. The stenographer, let us say, was as well dressed as the wife of the director of the firm for which she worked."

How come?

Call Rothermere to the stand. He talks in a familiar strain: "It is a well established fact that the wage curves of the various countries of the world follow the curves of their power development. Standardization, simplicity, and cheapness are the benefits that directly accrue from the large scale electrical administration of the United States.

"In Great Britain, on the contrary, our totally inadequate production of power is carried on under a petty and parochial system of methodless muddle. If we continue to flounder in the swamp of obsolete organization we shall assuredly end in economic collapse."

Now for Goodenough—intriguing name indeed.

Summarizing his recent speech, Mr. John Steele, TRIBUNE London correspondent, cabled: "He said that the temporary threat of New York to take London's place as the world's money market now had passed, the industrial activity in the United States was absorbing all available money and the world was now turning to London for fresh capital for development. This is of the greatest possible importance, as it means a permanent increase of invisible exports."

Get that "invisible exports." It means interest received by England with which to pay for food imported. Invisible exports are indeed not visible in the form of fur coated stenos. Gentlemen who pine for a financially supreme America may be patriotic, but the great masses may congratulate themselves that "the industrial activity in the United States was absorbing all available money"—and even that sounds exaggerated, when one notes our own healthy market for foreign bonds.

Load up the old pipe with this coincidence and smoke it a bit. Gentlemen who share Mr. Goodenough's point of view in this country were for the United States joining the world court. Charley Schwab and his kind, who created both wealth and jobs, were against it.

Delancey-Clinton Com'l Bldgs. & Theatres

New York City

First Mortgage Serial Gold Bonds

Dated November 15, 1925 Due Serially, 2 to 15 years

Interest payable May and November 15. Callable at 102 and accrued interest. Title Insurance Policy by Title Guarantee and Trust Company, New York City. Corporate Trustee: American Exchange-Pacific National Bank, New York City. Normal Federal Income Tax up to 2% on the annual interest paid when claimed. Pennsylvania, Connecticut and Vermont four mills tax, Massachusetts and New Hampshire income tax up to 6% of the interest refundable upon proper application, as provided in the mortgage.

Security: These bonds will be secured by a closed first mortgage on land, theatres and commercial buildings and leasehold properties located in the most densely populated sections of New York City and described as follows:

Three-story commercial and 1220-seat theatre to be erected on land owned in fee, Nos. 180-186 Suffolk Street and 11 Clinton Street.

Present six-story building to be reconstructed so as to contain 600-seat theatre, apartments and stores and land owned in fee known as Nos. 105-107-109 Rivington Street.

Present four-story building to be reconstructed for store and loft purposes and leasehold premises at southwest corner of Delancey and Attorney Streets. Also 1700-seat theatre, together with 1000-seat roof garden theatre and three-story commercial building to be erected on leasehold estate at Nos. 126-128 Clinton Street through to Attorney Street. These leases both expire April 30, 1963.

Four-story building to be renovated and improved for stores and dwellings now located on land owned in fee at southeast corner of 12th Street and Avenue B. Also on adjoining plot, Nos. 185-191, inclusive, Avenue B and 602 East 12th Street, owned in fee and a 600-seat theatre with two-story commercial building to be erected thereon.

The properties were recently appraised by independent and thoroughly reliable appraisers at $2,089,750. Excluding the two leasehold estates, the actual cost of the land owned in fee is $477,750 or over 38% of the total bond issue.

Estimated Earnings: Motion picture houses, properly located and operated by large and successful organizations, produce the largest income in proportion to the invested capital of any class of real estate. Furthermore, the income from this class of property is little affected by business conditions and building costs, and is maintained over a period of years with remarkable stability. After liberal allowances for operating expenses, film rental, salaries, advertising, rents on leaseholds, taxes, etc., the annual net income from the four properties is estimated at over four times the heaviest yearly interest charge.

Guarantee: The Bijou Holding Corporation, majority stock of which is owned by individuals in the Delancey-Clinton Realty Co., Inc., guarantees the completion of and payment for the buildings to be erected and further guarantees the payment of the first maturing $300,000 principal amount of this issue. The guarantor company control eight theatres in New York City, earning this year not less than $200,000. Officers of the Delancey-Clinton Realty Co., Inc., have had 17 years of experience in the motion picture business and they own approximately 50 parcels of New York City land in which their equities amount to over $2,000,000.

PRICE: To yield 6% to 6.50%, according to maturity.

New York, Feb. 6.—(AP)—Mixed price movements in today's stock market reflected the evening-up of speculative accounts in anticipation of the publication of the stock exchange figures on brokers' loans.

Unusually heavy buying of Asociated Oil presumably was for the account of bankers who announced after the market closed that they had acquired control by the purchase of substantial holdings at $59 a share and were ready to make the same offer to minority stockholders. The stock closed at 59 for a net gain of 1¾ on the day, after having attained a new record high at 59⅛. Pacific Oil also touched a new record top at 82¾, up ¼, but most of the other oils showed only minor changes.

Specialties Show Strength.

Specialties, in which favorable developments are reported to be pending, were again under accumulation. United Fruit soared 11 points to a new record high at 296 and then eased to 292. American Snuff jumped 8¼ points to a new top at 158, and American Metal preferred, American Type Foundry, Cuban Dominican Sugar preferred, Electric Storage Battery B, Endicott Johnson, Fifth Avenue Bus, Omnibus common and preferred, and Savage Arms closed 1@5 points higher, after attaining new high prices for the year.

Standard industrials were rather sluggish. American Can, Baldwin, and U. S. Steel common all closed fractionally lower. Motors were subjected to bear selling, but offerings were well absorbed and in most cases net losses were limitd to fractions.

Postum Cereal Is Weak.

Despite reports that Postum Cereal had agreed to pay $185 a share for a controlling interest in California Packing, the stock of the latter closed nearly a point lower at 175, after fluctuating between 173½ and 177. General Electric, Sloss-Sheffield, Union Bag and Paper, National Cloak and Suit, and Universal Pipe preferred also were conspicuously heavy. United States Rubber common closed two points higher at 85½. Rails were featureless.

The curb market was broad and active. Woodward Iron rose 16 points to 98. Gains of 2 points or more were recorded in General Baking A and Power Corporation of New York. Glen Alden Coal improved 1¾ points on active dealings. Oil shares again reported large volume. Carib Syndicate opened with a gain at 2½ points at 17, declined to 15¼ and rallied to 17⅞. American Maracaibo dropped 2 points to 8½.

Bond Market Is Irregular.

Irregular tendencies developed in today's bond trading. Local traction securities started off toward higher levels, but yielded their gains in the late trading under the pressure of realizing sales.

Profit taking also invaded the sugar group, but failed to check the buying of Warner refunding 7s, which advanced 1½ points, and Cuba Cane 8s, which moved up fractionally. Vertientes Sugar 7s fell back two points. Skelly, Pan-American and other oil issues turned heavy, but a firm tone was displayed by miscellaneous issues such as International Paper 6s, Kelly Springfield Tire 8s, Utah Power 5s, and Rogers Iron 7s. French government and municipal obligations and Belgian bonds were strong.

Foreign exchanges held steady in quiet trading. Demand sterling ruled just above $4.86 and French francs were quoted just under 3.75 cents.

CHICAGO CURB MARKET

Interest continued in local bank shares last week, although price changes were within a narrow range. Continental and Commercial National was the feature, selling up 5 points to 455 bid, 460 asked. Illinois Merchants improved about 2 points to transactions between 617 and 619. First National was unchanged, 540 being freely bid with offerings at 545. The rights were steady at 86½ to 88½. Central Trust company of Illinois showed a 3 point improvement at 320 bid, 323 asked. Chicago Trust was wanted at 235. Standard Trust and Savings, after selling at 236, was offered at that price, with best bids at 232. National Bank of the Republic rose to 270, a new high.

The trend in the miscellaneous group was mixed, and in some instances prices were lower. After selling at 260, Congress hotel was offered at 240, with best bids at 220. Elgin National Watch was again traded between 87 and 88. By-Products Coke maintained its previous advance with numerous transactions between 87¼ and 88½. McCord issues were again active, the common declining from high sales at 16¼ to low and last transactions between 15½ and 15¾, while the preferred moved up 5 points to sales at 106. It was later offered at lower figures, however, with best bids at 101. Great Lakes Transit was in good demand, scoring a 5 point advance to high and last sales at 28. Wahl preferred showed a better tone, numerous buyers carrying the bid price up to 62, with offerings around 65. Hall Printing was quiet at 24 bid, 26 asked. Interstate Iron and Steel preferred was slightly higher, with buyers at 107. The common was quoted 73½ to 76½. Kellogg company continued steady at 103 to 105.

Butler was unusually quiet during the week, with only a few shares of stock being traded, the low sales reported were 32½, with high sales of 33⅝, the market closing with 32⅞ bid, and sock offered for sale at 33⅛. The Creamery Package issues were in better demand, 34⅞ being bid for the full voting stock, with a few shares offered for sale at 35¼. The preferred was wanted at 99, with best offerings at 102. Albert Pick preferred was wanted at 97½, with available stock at 98¼. Chicago Mill and Lumber preferred was in good demand at 101, with sales at 103. Real Silk preferred moved up on bids of par, with cheapest offerings of stock at 102.

Quick & Easy Turning on Balloon Tires With Split-Second Steering

On a country road, at touring speed, you can swing around the car ahead of you, certain that you can cut back to your side of the road easily and quickly.

When Reo pioneered the nation-wide use of balloon tires, Reo engineering genius developed the Reo Split-Second Gear to make steering quick, certain and easy.

Powerful reduction gears of simple design and assembly, so greatly multiply the power applied to the steering wheel by the Reo driver that only a small amount of strength and a short movement of the wheel suffice for ordinary driving needs.

Reo owners have known this since the first balloon-tired Reo. Its efficiency is even more apparent in the New and Improved Reo Sedan.

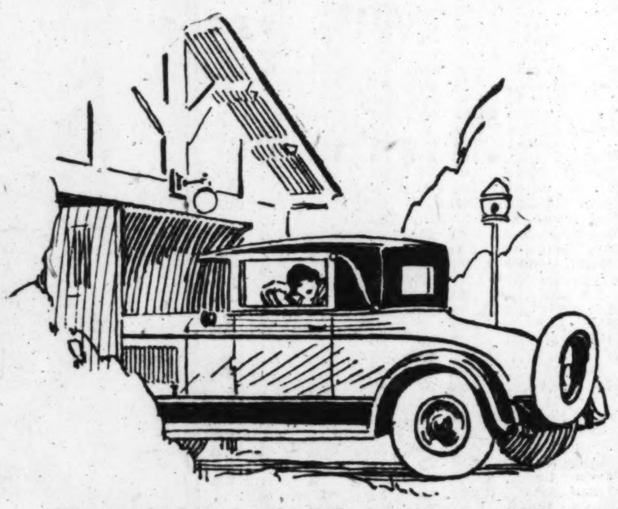
You'll Find You Can Do This

You can quickly manipulate a Reo into and out of the curb without hard tugging and pulling on the wheel.

On a country road, at touring speed, you can swing around the car ahead of you, certain that you can cut back to your side of the road easily and quickly.

To turn a corner, you will move a Reo steering wheel only a little way—no need to "wind" it through a wide arc in order to move the front wheels a bit.

Only a drive in a new and improved Reo can fully demonstrate the great difference between its control and that of other cars. You can make what tests you like—when the car is standing, at slow speed, or when driving rapidly—and find new steering ease and speed at every turn.



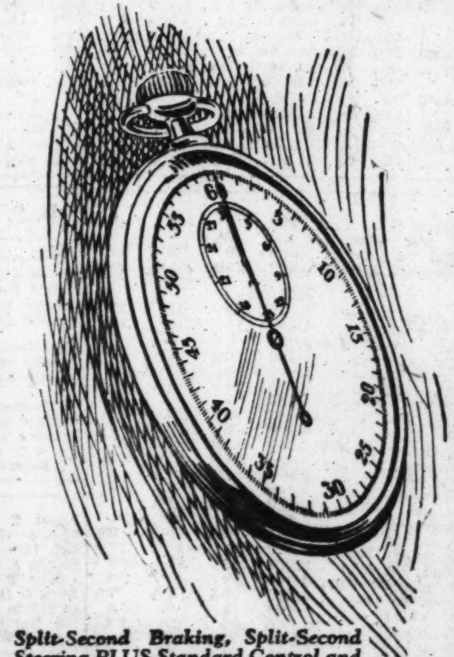
Women who have found it difficult and tiring to control the ordinary balloon tired car, should try a Reo. They are invariably amazed to find how easily a Reo handles—and how beautifully built and finished a Reo is.

How Reo Does This

Powerful reducing gears make control safe and positive, while multiplying tremendously the pull of your hand on the steering wheel.

Reo puts steel against steel, and reduces wear so that Reos worn out after eleven and twelve years of hard usage have steering gears as tight as the day they left the factory. Seldom, if ever, does any part of a Reo steering assembly need adjustment.

Reo utilizes rolling friction instead of sliding friction to transmit the turn of the steering wheel to the front wheels. That makes steering easier for the same reason that rolling over a road is easier than being dragged over it.



Split-Second Braking, Split-Second Steering PLUS Standard Control and Standard Gear Shift on the New and Improved Reo

Come in and see this New Sedan

No printed picture can reproduce the lines and appointments of this New and Improved Reo Sedan.

Printed words can give you only a scant outline of its merits and distinction:

Split-Second Steering,
Split-Second Braking,
PLUS
Standard Control and Standard Gear Shift.

Many minor refinements and improvements enhancing beauty, comfort and dependability.

And the same long-life, far outlasting its honest speedometer, so characteristic of every Reo.

Come in and see it.

Why women like the New Reo

Its Split-Second Braking and Steering PLUS Standard Control make driving easier and safer.

Its wider, deeper fenders accentuate the lengthened lines of the deep cowl, long hood and graceful body.

It offers an exceptionally wide range of color selection—Gulfstream Blue, and Cuban Gray Simplex finish, two-tone Hydro Blue and Radio Blue, and a number of others.

Like all Reos, it rides rough places gently, and has deeply cushioned seats that enable you to relax while driving.

Come in and see it.

SYNAGOGUE ON PINE GROVE IS SOLD—$315,000

New Owners Move In on July 1.

The congregation Anshe Emes has purchased the synagogue and center building of the Temple Sholom, which is located on Pine Grove avenue at Grace, for $315,000 cash. The lot on which the synagogue stands has a frontage of 150 feet on Pine Grove and 125 feet on Grace, and for years it has been a landmark in that vicinity. It is just a block east of Broadway.

Has 1,300 Seats.

The synagogue proper, which has the most modern equipment, has a capacity of 1,300 seats. The adjoining community center contains a large assembly hall, ten classrooms, a directors' room, and the rabbi's study.

The congregation Anshe Emes, now located in Gary place, near Broadway, will take possession of its new quarters on or about July 1, 1926. The congregation Anshe Emes is known as one of the oldest conservative congregations in the city. Its numbers include many of the city's foremost Jewish citizens.

List of Officers.

Attorney Ira Lasker represented the congregation Anshe Emes in the deal. The officers of the congregation include Philip A. Langh, rabbi; Jacob Lasker, president; Isadore Cohen, vice president; Max Provus, vice president; M. H. Cohn, recording secretary; Simon Katz, financial secretary, and Ralph Simon, treasurer.

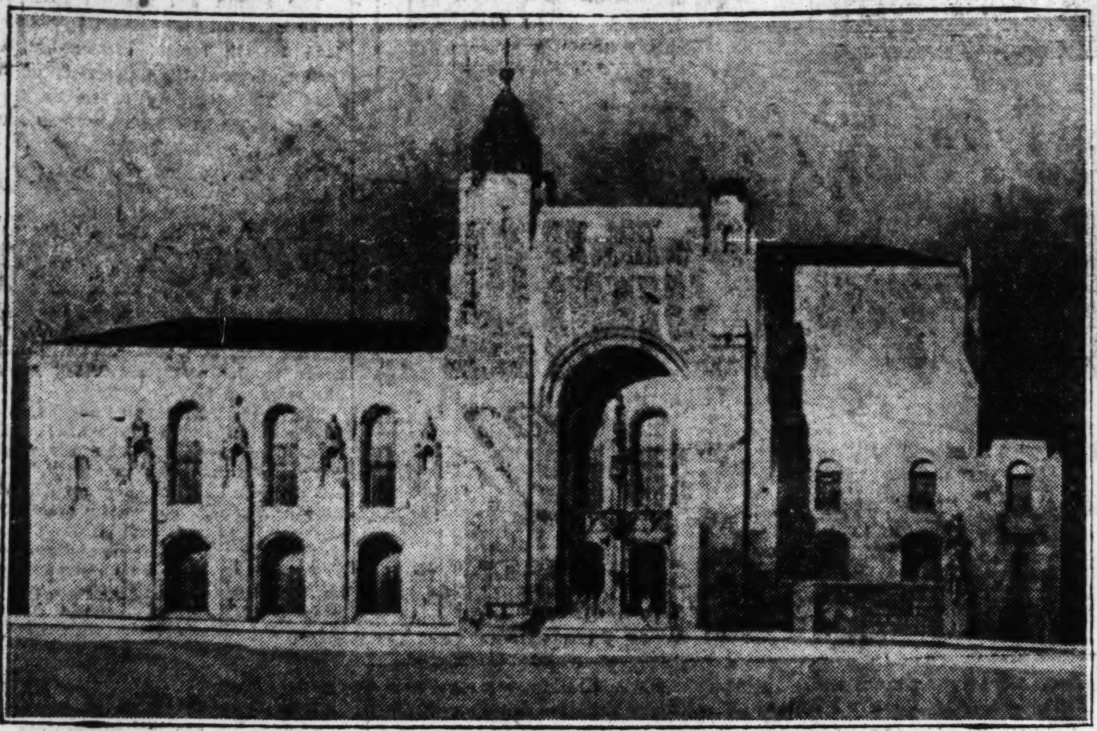
The Norton Lasier company, makers of hardware specialties, has bought 25,000 square feet of vacant on Rockwell street, east front, and 240 feet north of Irving Park boulevard, for $13,300, from Austin Cole, and will erect a one story factory building to cost in the neighborhood of $60,000. J. H. Van Vlissingen & Co. were brokers.

Tribune Tower Architect Wins Competition



Raymond M. Hood, one of The Tribune tower architects, is winner in the nation-wide architectural competition for the proposed $2,000,000 Masonic temple and Scottish Rite cathedral, to be erected in Scranton, Pa. Paul Cret of Philadelphia won second prize and Carrere & Hastings of New York city won third. Helmle & Corbett of New York, Davis & Lewis of Scranton, Edward Langley, Kenneth Murchison-associated, and others entered the contest. The first floor plan of Mr. Hood's design is unusual, in that the auditorium, stage, and banquet hall can all be converted into one great assembly hall, capable of accommodating several thousands.

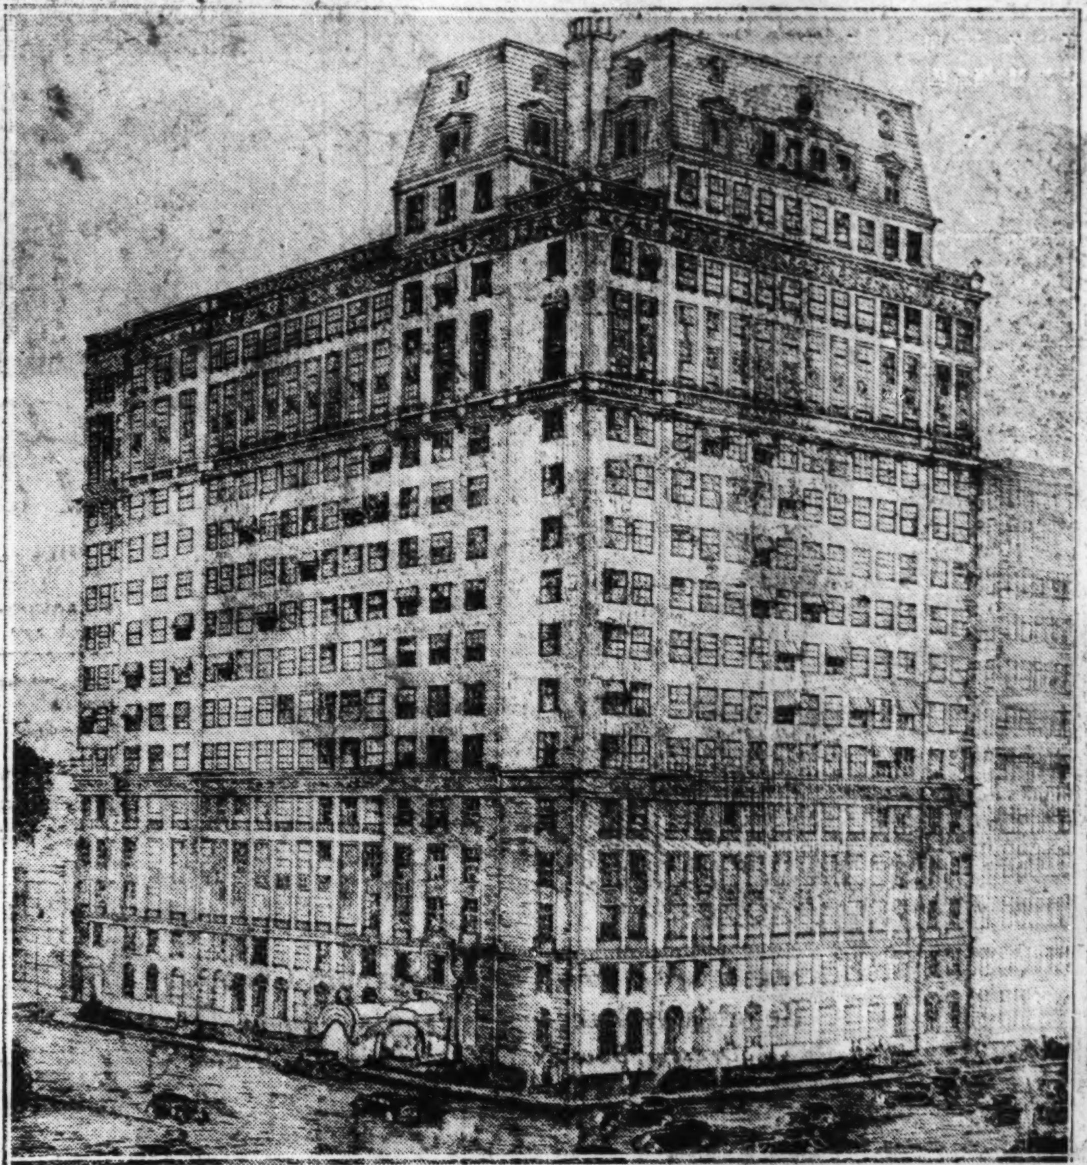
APARTMENTS IN NAPOLEONIC DESIGN



If the Little Corporal were to take a jaunt down Sheridan road in about a year he might remark, "Ha, the top of that building looks familiar." Anyhow, the architect says that the $2,575,000 apartment building now being erected at the northwest corner of Sheridan road and Cornelia avenue is to be in the empire style of the Napoleonic period. The main structure of the Sheridan-Cornelia apartments is to be fifteen stories in height, and the building will contain sixty-two apartments of from four to nine rooms each. S. W. Straus & Co. have underwritten a first mortgage bond issue of $1,725,000. Robert S. DeGolyer is the architect, and Collins, Murphy & Jackson, Inc., are the builders and managers.

WORK BEGINS ON WEST SIDE'S BIG ATHLETIC CLUB

"Midwest" Will Be Ready Christmas.

BY AL CHASE.
[Real Estate Editor.]

HOMER D. JONES

Chicago's great west side, at present clubless so far as the modern skyscraping type is concerned, is to have one of the finest and most modern athletic clubs in the world tucked in its stocking next Christmas, according to Homer D. Jones president of the Western Fuel company. Mr. Jones is also head of the Midwest Athletic club, which the organization has been christened.

Excavators started work last week getting the site at the northwest corner of West Madison street and Hamlin avenue ready for the foundations. According to a statement made last night by President Jones, workmen will begin erecting steel within sixty days. It is estimated that the club can be made ready for its members by next Christmas.

Entrance on Hamlin Avenue.

Plans for the clubhouse have been prepared by Michaelsen & Rognstad, architects, and Hooper & Janusch will act as engineers in charge of construction.

The club will have 200 guest sleeping rooms, every one with bath. The entrance to the club will be on Hamlin avenue, soon to be widened. There'll be seven shops on the Madison street side.

All the usual departments of the regulation athletic club will be in the new Midwest. In addition to a large gymnasium there'll be a swimming pool, Pompeiian in design, with a balcony for spectators.

commodations for other sports. The locker room will have direct connection with all athletic departments by a separate set of stairs and by elevator. There will be a separate floor with full athletic equipment for ladies.

There'll be private dining rooms and card rooms for parties and banquets. The main dining room will overlook Garfield park. The ballroom, French in design, will be on the top floor and will open into an outdoor roof garden.

In addition to a large resident membership the club intends having an out of town or nonresident roster of 1,000. The club is expected to appeal as much to the business man of Oak Park and other western suburbs as to the west sider.

Total Valuation of $2,375,000.

The land and building will represent a valuation of $2,375,000, it is claimed. The site was bought in April, 1924, and is now appraised at $275,000. George M. Forman & Co. have underwritten a $1,200,000 first mortgage bond issue. Thomas A. Munro, of the Munro Bond and Mortgage company, represented all parties in the negotiation of the loan.

In addition to Mr. Jones as president, the club's officials are: First vice president, Mark Shanks; second vice president, B. J. Boehm; treasurer, A. H. Smith, president of the Madison-Kedzie State bank; secretary, John C. Meyer. The foregoing and Frank L. Kohlhase and A. G. Gulbransen compose the board of directors.

On the board of governors are: J. W. Sixeas, chairman; Ray F. Mudd, E. B. Doty, George J. Dehn, Charles J. Dempsey, William Schukraft, Leroy F. Sullivan, Otto J. Pelikan, Joseph Mills, W. D. Bostelmann, George E. Hart, Elmer DeHaven, Robert A. Gardiner, Lewis O. Runner, John F. Diffenderffer, Sol Westerfeld, Adolph Radnitzer, K. K. Bell, James M. Loughlin, and Frank A. Alden. The club's organization office is at 6 South Kedzie avenue.

PAYS $160,000 FOR 112 ACRES IN FLOSSMOOR AREA

An important acreage deal was consumated last week with the sale of 112 acres in the Flossmoor district by A. R. and Vincent Shekleton to the Foreman Trust and Savings bank which took title for an undisclosed syndicate. The property is bounded by South Central Park avenue, South Kedzie avenue, the Public Service company's right of way and the Sauk trail. The reported price of the property was $160,000 subject to $67,000. C. A. Fieldcamp was the broker.

The Illinois Brick company has sold approximately thirteen acres, bounded by 16th and 18th streets and Tripp and Kostner avenues, for a reported $125,000 to a syndicate formed by Joseph B. Ford and company. Joseph B. Ford and William J. Benn will act as trustees for the syndicate.

The property will be subdivided into twenty-five foot business lots and thirty foot residence lots. It is two blocks from the Kostner avenue station of the Douglas Park elevated. Joseph B. Ford & Co. were brokers.

John Ruettinger has purchased from the heirs of Hinrich Holm Hinrichs the forty acres at the southeast corner of 154th street and Dixie highway for an indicated $63,500. The property, which is on the west of Harvey, is capable of subdivision, although Mr. Ruettinger has no immediate plans. Campbell and Fischer, attorneys, represented the buyer.

The eighty acres between 131st and 135th avenues, on the west side of Harlem avenue, have been sold by Albert F. Marthe to Arthur Ahern for an indicated $46,500 subject to $9,500. The property lies east of the Oak Hills Golf club.

Plan 31 Flat Building at Marquette and Indiana

The Marquette Court Building corporation has bought the southwest corner of Marquette road and Indiana avenue, 159x100, from J. O. Wilson for an indicated $32,000 and will erect a thirty-one flat building, designed by the Carnegie company, to cost $182,000. Bristol & Co. have underwritten a bond issue.

L. M. WILLIS LEAVES COMPANY HE HELPED FOUND 35 YEARS AGO

Willis has withdrawn from the firm of Willis & Frankenstein, with which he has been associated as founder and partner for thirty-five years, and will maintain an office in the Westminster building, 110 South Dearborn street, where he will specialize in central business property. Mr. Willis for five years was associated with H. O. Stone & Co. prior to going into partnership with W. B. Frankenstein. Mr. Frankenstein retired in 1922.

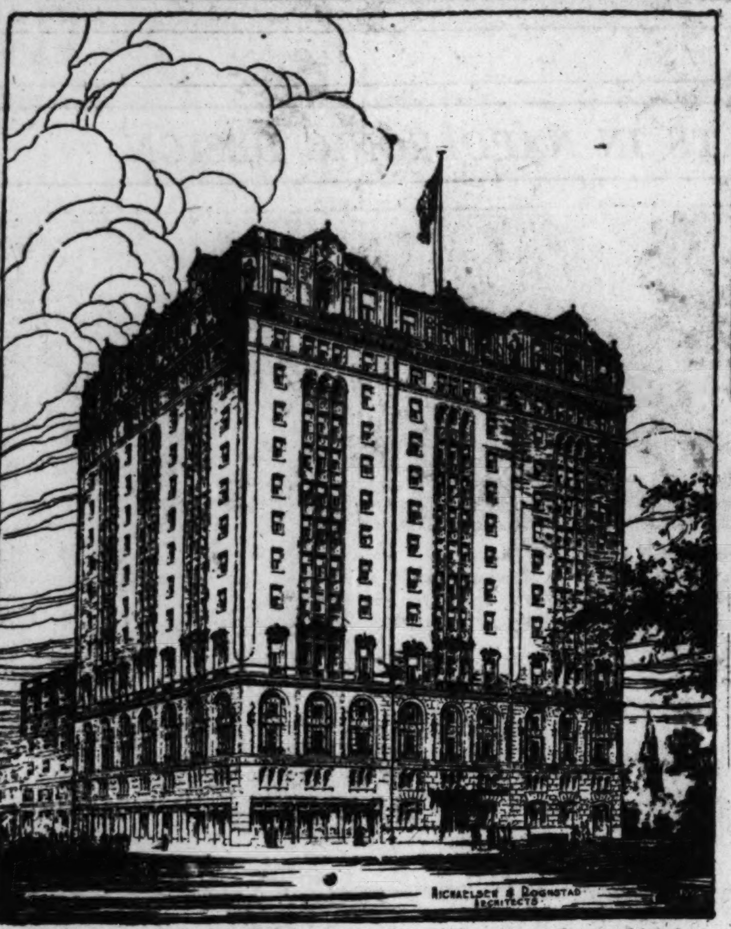
Midwest Athletic Club

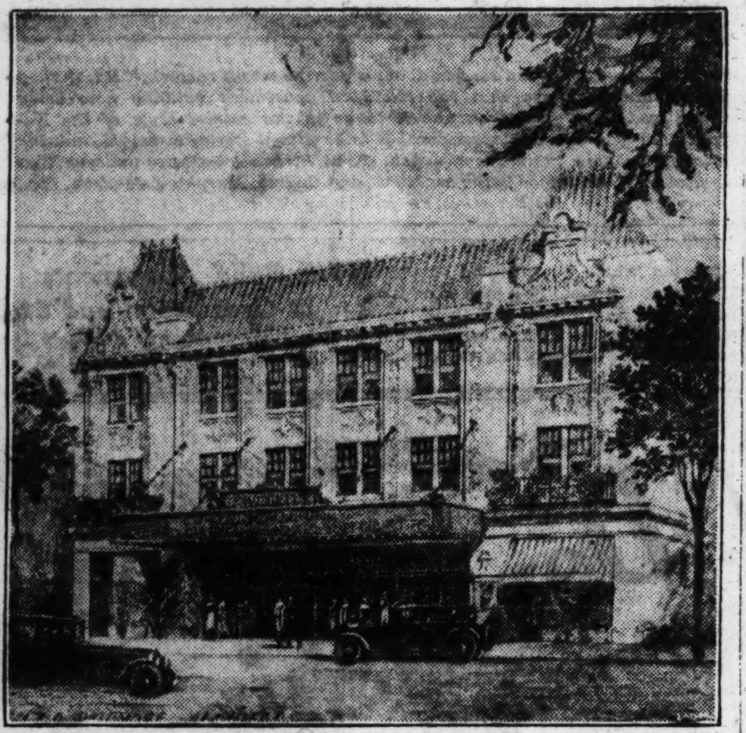


This is the west side's first big club—the Midwest—work on which has just started at the northwest corner of Madison and Hamlin, overlooking Garfield park. Michaelsen & Rognstad are architects and Hooper & Janusch engineers.

Although preliminary plans call for a "shirt front" type of building, it is understood that in view of the fact that the north and west walls of the club will be as conspicuous as those fronting on Madison and Hamlin, and taking into account the probability that no building as tall as this will be erected either west or north for many years, the same kind of materials may be used on all four sides.

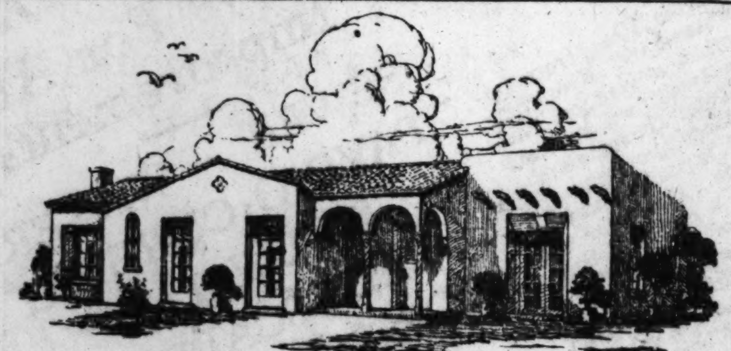
There will be no roof tanks or other aerial monstrosities on the top of the club; these will all be covered over and cared for with a development of the general architectural scheme.

Evanston to Have Another Movie



J. E. O. Pridmore has designed a $300,000 moving picture building, which will be erected on the west side of Sherman avenue, eighty feet north of Church street. The structure is to be of chateau effect and will have a green tile mansard roof. The exterior is to be of polychrome terra cotta. Besides the 2,000 seat auditorium there are to be a dance floor on the third floor, offices on the second, and stores on the first. The building will be owned by the University Theater company, of which Clyde E. Elliott is the president and Ralph Obenchain is secretary. The opening is scheduled for Thanksgiving day.

A Loop Bungalow



The George F. Nixon company is having built in the real estate department of the Fair a full sized Spanish-type bungalow. The building is to be ase complete as if they had built for a couple of newlyweds in a suburb, and, in fact, it was necessary to get a city permit for its construction. There are five rooms, in one of which will be a wood burning fireplace, and the other details such as one finds in a Spanish bungalow built in America will be there. The construction is to be of hollow tile, with rough stucco finish on the outside and rough plaster finish on the inside. C. W. Lampe & Co. are architects.

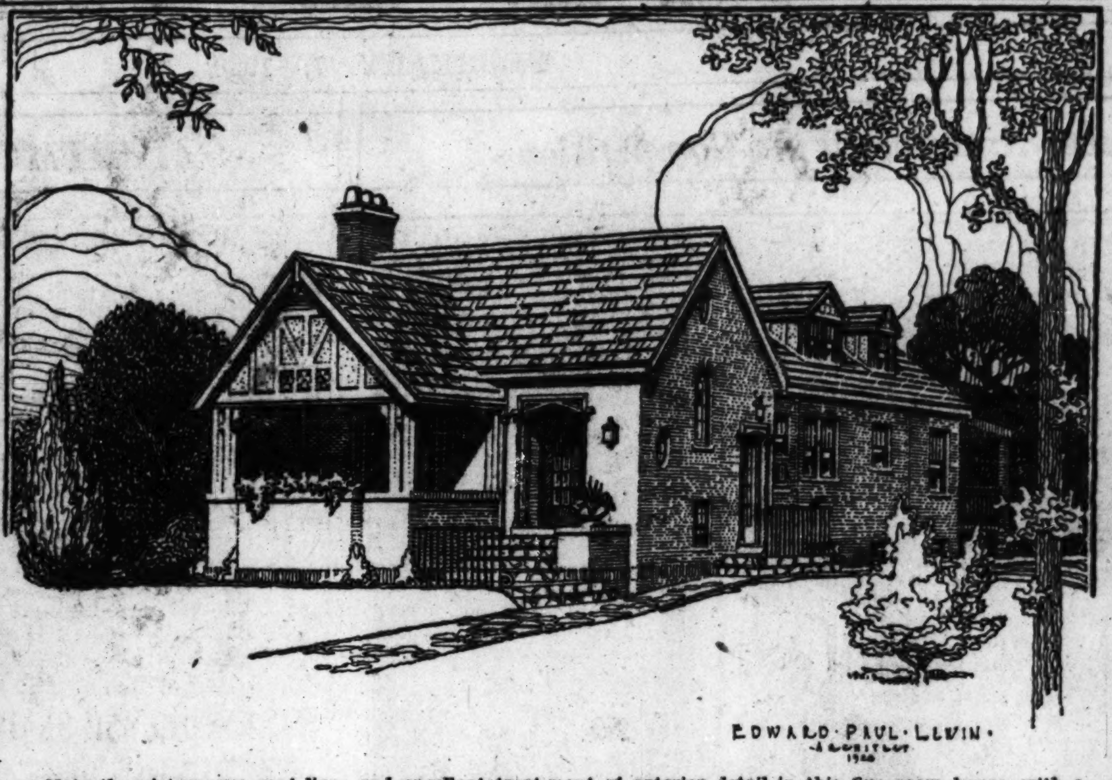
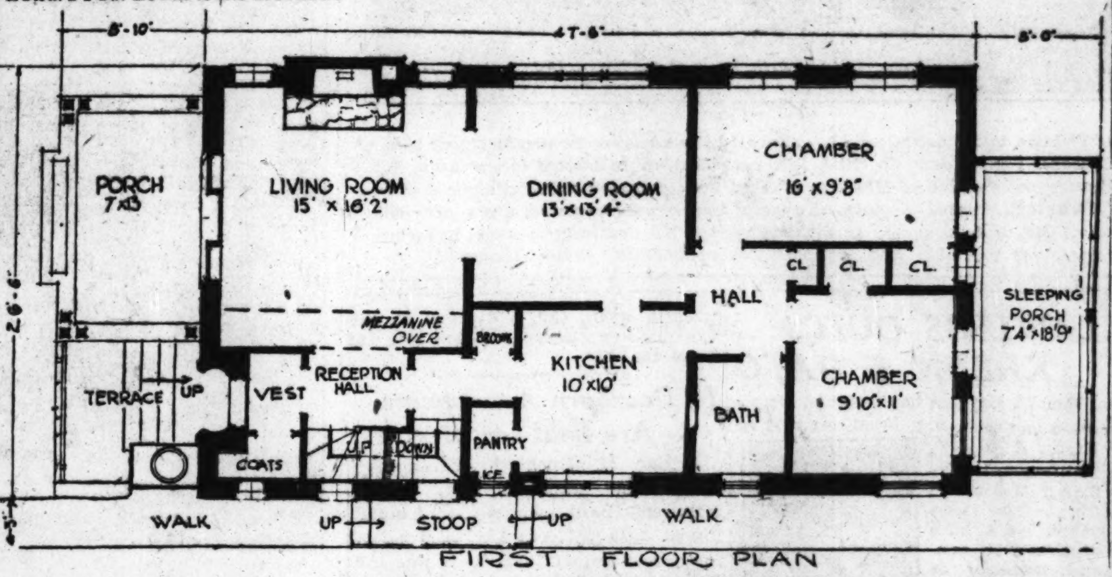
Small in Size, Large in Convenience



Note the picturesque roof lines and excellent treatment of exterior detail in this five room house, with a story and a half living room and mezzanine. As it stands, this house can be built for about $10,000 to $11,000. Edward Paul Lewin is the architect.



HOUSE SHOWS DISTINCTION ISN'T ALWAYS COSTLY

BY LOUISE BARGELT.

THERE are still many people who are of the opinion that a house cannot be built for a small sum, and possess at the same time the distinction and charm of the more expensive home.

Edward Paul Lewin, architect, 310 South Michigan avenue, Chicago, in designing this small English home for city or suburb, has given a striking example of attractive originality on a thirty-five foot lot.

While the exterior and the living room have a vivid touch of old England to them, the plans and details of the house are out and out American, from every angle of serviceability you approach them.

The price quoted, $10,000 to $11,000 is for the first floor and mezzanine only. The second floor or attic has not been finished off, but such an addition is possible by taking advantage of the characteristic steep English roof slopes, and by the use of dormers.

Enlargement Is Possible.

The attic plan suggests three bedrooms and bath, together with a playroom for children.

The exterior of the house is of dark red or dark brown brick. Stucco on tile could be used at less cost. Stone trim is at the entrance and sills, and stucco is employed wherever half timber work is shown. The roof is of asphalt shingles.

Many times a house gains its picturesqueness at the expense of the interior arrangement, but this cannot be said to be true, here. The interior arrangement has been thoughtfully and economically planned, with every possible convenience afforded.

The approach to the house is by means of a slate or a cement walk, across a slate or cement terrace and into a vestibule. A deep reveal at the entrance provides protection against the elements for the waiting guest.

An Unusual Living Room.

The living room is a story and a half high, giving a distinctive, old English appearance to the room. The rafters are of hewn oak, and the massive old English fireplace has an irregular slate outer hearth.

A stairway leads to the mezzanine, which, on the attic level, is edged with a wrought iron railing.

The kitchen, in the center of the house, has been so placed as to allow the two bedrooms to occupy the rear corners of the house, where they are given cross ventilation. The kitchen entrance is from the side, cutting it off from the rest of the house, and with inside stairs leading to the basement.

The economy in the arrangement of the plumbing features should be noted. All bathroom fixtures, kitchen sink, basement laundry trays are connected on one stack. The attic bath, as well, could be roughed in for the present.

Plenty of Closet Space.

Another feature to observe is the abundance of closet space in the house. Besides the closets in the chambers there is a good sized coat closet off the vestibule and both a broom and a linen closet.

The floors of the living room, dining room, and chambers are of oak. The kitchen has a maple floor, and the rear entry is of pine. The trim throughout the house is of birch.

In the living room are casement windows, while those of the rest of the house are double hung.

Cutting Expenses.

Throughout, this design is straightforward, balanced, and dignified. Much of the expense in building can be cut down by the use of stock moldings, kitchen cabinets, doors, and sash. Special mill work always costs more.

Enameled iron has been used for most of the plumbing fixtures. It is less expensive than solid porcelain and it is durable.

The bathroom has a tile floor, but the walls are painted, and there is a simple leg tub instead of a recessed tub.

Large in Comfort.

This is what is commonly known as a small house. But it is a large one in the comforts and conveniences it affords. By careful selection and purchase of the materials which go into its building it can be built approximately for $10,000 to $11,000, as was stated. With building prices different in different localities, it is impossible to set any sum which would be applicable in every territory.

If the roof were of mottled slate and the walks and terrace of slate, the effect would be more picturesque, but the cost of the house would be increased about $1,000.

The floor space is 47.6x26.6.

"FRAT" BUILDING $90,000 HOME AT CHAMPAIGN

The Sigma Phi Epsilon fraternity is now erecting an attractive home at 1105 Fourth street, Champaign, for its members at the University of Illinois. The building is to be three stories in height with a basement, and will cost about $90,000.

The home, which was designed by George Ramey, a Champaign architect, is to be of Georgian colonial architecture. It will be of red brick with white stone trim.

In the basement will be located the kitchen, the serving room, the dining room, the chapter room, and the boiler room. The first floor will contain a living room, sun parlor, library, card room, trophy room, servant quarters, and a guest room.

The second floor will contain study rooms and a sick room, while on the third floor there will be study rooms and a north and south dormitory. There are going to be eight shower baths and nine lavatories, so as to make the shavers' lines in the morning as short as possible.

The project is to be financed solely by the Sigma Phi Epsilon national fraternity. The alumni of the chapter are incorporated in the state of Illinois and actually operate the house throughout the school year. T. E. Lowery of Springfield is president of the alumni organization. King and Petry of Champaign are the contractors.

Classic SINK FIXTURE
A Man's Idea and a Woman's Idea
The ordinary kitchen faucet is a man's idea of what a kitchen faucet should be.
The Classic represents what the woman thinks about it. It is made up entirely of women's ideas. Sound and practical.
Women wanted a mixing faucet, not two separate streams—one hot, one cold. Water nicely tempered saves their hands. It saves glassware.
They wanted a swinging spout that would clear the dishpan's rim. They wanted a self-draining soap dish—one large enough to hold the big bar. They wanted the splash-free, dripless nozzle. They wanted the hose-and-spray attachment.
They told us what they wanted and we put all their suggestions together into one beautiful Sink Fixture and called it the Classic.
Your plumber has one for you, or he can get one for you in an hour or so. Price $15.00.

CHICAGO TO GET 3 NEW BRANCH POSTOFFICES

Each Will Have Clubroom for Men.

So many people are receiving and sending mail in three sections of Chicago that Uncle Sam has been forced to find larger quarters to handle his business.

There is to be a branch postoffice in Lawrence avenue, near Magnolia. This station will handle the business for the busy section near Broadway and Lawrence. It is known as the Edgewater station. The second, the Chicago Lawn station, will be built at 63d street and Albany avenue. The third, the Cragin station, will be at Armitage and Lawndale avenues. The latter two stations will be finished in about one month and the Edgewater in five months.

All three buildings are to be of one general type. They will have the very latest equipment and are expected to be models for future branch offices. Among the new features is a provision on the second floors for a clubroom for the employés.

The stations are to be of face brick and terra cotta trim. There are to be terrazzo floors in the public spaces and wood block floors in the working sections. All the buildings will be equipped with oil burners. The cost is estimated at $75,000 apiece.

I. C. Electrification Helps Building Boom in Suburbs

Electrification of the Illinois Central's suburban service is making towns along the line close to Chicago undesirable places of residence for Old Rip Van Winkles. Take Matteson, where many of the store buildings were put up in the eighties. There the new boom will see the construction of a $100,000 store and office building at the northwest corner of Main and 5th avenue, facing the newly laid out park at the station. George Walker is the owner and McNally and Quinn are the architects. Richton, too, is being helped by the prospect of better service.

LOOKING BACKWARD

To February 7, 1916; 10 Years Ago Today

The old Nelson Morris homestead at the northeast corner of 25th street and Indiana avenue, 80x180, has been sold by Mrs. Maud Morris Schwab, a daughter of Mr. Morris, to Robert M. Fair for $40,000, or at the rate of $500 a front foot. Mr. Fair will erect an $85,000 three story concrete building, to be leased to the Louis Geyler company, agents for the Hudson automobile, for twenty years at an annual rental based on 6 per cent of the purchase price for the land and 8 per cent on the cost of the building. This would approximate $9,200 per annum or $184,000 for the term. Charles O. Goss of E. A. Cummings & Co. negotiated the transaction. The seller was represented by Ira B. Riford of Albert H. Wetten & Co.

MRS. MAUD MORRIS SCHWAB

The largest deal in residence property for several years was the sale closed yesterday whereby Mrs. Pauline C. Hewitt, wife of Charles M. Hewitt, president of the Hewitt Manufacturing company, sold the eighteen room, three story stone residence at the southeast corner of North State parkway and Burton place, to Mrs. Clara Bartholomay, wife of Henry B. Bartholomay, an attorney. The price was $150,000 cash. The lot is 105x130. Paul Steinbrecher & Co. were brokers. It was originally the Stanley homestead and was bought eight years ago by Mr. Hewitt, who spent $60,000 in remodeling.

MRS. CHARLES M. HEWITT.

Frederick H. Bartlett & Co. have bought 165 acres from Henry C. Lytton and others of the Lytton Realty Indenture, directly opposite the Ravinia station, at $1,000 an acre. It is bounded on the west by Green Bay road. Roger Williams avenue runs through the property. Albert H. Wetten & Co. represented the Lyttons and John B. Ackerman and Raymond Herman represented the buyers.

To February 7, 1896; 30 Years Ago Today

Architect H. B. Wheelock has completed plans for a four story apartment house to be erected at 3547-51 Ellis avenue by C. H. Nichols at a cost of $30,000. It will be have sixteen apartments of six rooms each and will be finished in oak and heated by steam. The exterior will be of stone, pressed brick and terra cotta. The building will be 66x83. Work is expected to start May 1.

H. B. WHEELOCK.

Negotiations which have been so long pending are formally closed and it is now a settled fact that the retail clothing store of Browning, King & Co., will be located at the northeast corner of Madison and Wabash in the building now occupied by C. H. Slack. The lease is for ten years from May 1, 1896, at a term rental of $300,000. It was negotiated by R. E. Ismond for the Mark Skinner estate. The building is five stories, 58x163.

This important move is only one indication of what may be looked for in the near future for Wabash avenue. Browning, King & Co. are now on the southwest corner of Clark and Madison, where they have been for nearly a quarter of a century.

Plans have been prepared for an addition to the Ashland block to cost $150,000. It will front forty feet on Clark street, extending the building through to Couch place. It will be eighty feet deep. This will give an imposing entrance to the Olympic theater in the rear. The site for the annex was bought last year by A. J. Alexander from the Kingsbury estate. John Arthur Rogers is the architect for the addition.

NEW SYNAGOGUE WILL EMPHASIZE ITS SOCIAL LIFE

$300,000 Building Rising in Albany Park.

A synagogue in the Byzantine style is being erected by the congregation of the Beth Amedrish Hagodeil at the northeast corner of Lawndale and Wilson avenues, Albany Park. The building when completed, together with the furnishings, will represent an investment of about $300,000.

The structure is to be 65x115, and it will be the equivalent of six stories in height. It is to be of brick with a terra cotta trimming that will present a finish similar in appearance to tarnished copper.

Maurice L. Bein designed the building, which will be fireproof. The structure will contain the necessary facilities for a social center in addition to its primary objects—worship and education.

To Have Four Schoolrooms.

The ground floor will contain a large social hall and a stage, with a large, well equipped kitchen in connection. There are to be four large schoolrooms with a separate entrance on Wilson avenue, so that the school section may be used without interference with the activities in the other part of the building.

The main auditorium will be forty-five feet in height and will contain a horseshoe balcony. The seating capacity will be 3,000. The auditorium will be mechanically ventilated.

Does Away with Waste.

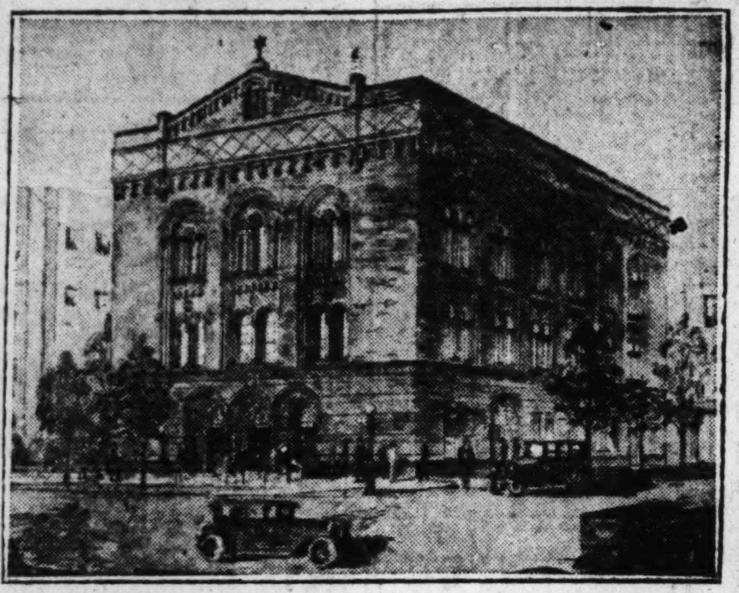
The architect has taken advantage of the dead roof space over the main lobby and has planned for that space a large room that will be used for directors' meetings and the offices of the congregation.

The congregation is of the modern school. It plans to have lectures by prominent speakers each week. That the building may be of the greatest service, the congregation intends to permit the auditorium to be used free by organizations of the Jewish faith.

Will Build $180,000 Flats on Franklin Blvd. Corner

Barnet Kreiman and Mandel Benson will erect a $180,000 thirty-six flat building containing four and five room suites on the 80x150 corner of Franklin boulevard and St. Louis avenue, which they purchased from James Stella. James D. Worth of Magee & Worth represented all parties and the firm will manage the building.

New Building for Albany Park



The Beth Amedrish Hagodell congregation is building a $300,000 synagogue at the northeast corner of Lawndale and Wilson avenues in Albany Park. The building, designed by Maurice L. Bein, will be of Byzantine architecture, and it has been especially planned to care for the social activities of the congregation. It will contain a 3,000 seat auditorium and will have four large schoolrooms with a separate entrance on Wilson avenue. And there is to be a well equipped kitchen to appease the appetites of the worshipers.

CALUMET ZONING PLAN ENVISAGES 100 FOOT ROADS

Will Adopt Methods of Illinois Counties.

Especial emphasis on wide roads and streets is being made in the deliberations of the rapidly growing Calumet industrial district, which in coöperation with the Regional Planning association is devising a set of subdivision regulations in accord with the Indiana state laws that will coincide closely to the regulations of Cook, Du Page, and Kane counties.

In a recent meeting in Hammond the mayors of Hammond, Whiting, and East Chicago, sitting with members of the board of works of those cities, and in addition those of Gary and Calumet City, agreed to study the regulations proposed by the Regional Planning association and put into effect in their areas some similar regulations.

Tells Illinois Methods.

This determination followed talks by Chairman Frederick W. Penfield of the Regional Planning association committee on subdivision plats and zoning, and by Robert Kingery, secretary of the association. Mr. Penfield, who is also a Cook county commissioner, described for the Indiana officials the method followed in compiling these regulations. He told them that the real estate operators themselves, together with the surveyors, county map and highway officers, representatives of the state highway department of Illinois, and city plan officers of similar cities and villages all coöperated in drafting rules which were to control each one to a certain degree. Mr. Penfield continued by saying that in Cook county alone in five months almost fifty miles of 100 feet wide right of way had been provided by delication of land on the part of the subdividers.

Plan Wide Streets.

The principal features of these regulations are that on main state, county, and section line roads the right of way is to be not less than 100 feet wide, on the half mile roads not less than 80 wide, and on other streets not less than 66 feet wide. All alleys, if alleys are laid out, are to be no less than 20 feet wide, and no street is allowed to be planned unless it connects without a jog with the streets already recorded and in use in the adjacent property.

The idea is spreading to other counties in the Illinois side of the region, and several cities and villages throughout the area from Kenosha to Kankakee, and from Aurora to Michigan City have either adopted or are planning to adopt similar subdivision control.

DON'T PAY RENT

An Editorial by S. Quincy Goldman

This new idea of building homes without a down payment on the house, and before your lot is fully paid for, is due to the fact that I own Hinsdale Terrace outright. The location of my property is such that I have no doubt it will enhance in value from 200 to 300 per cent as an investment.

Past performance is my best guarantee for the future. I have spent 20 years throughout a number of countries, selling millions of dollars of merchandise, talking a dozen languages. This has taught me to work with and for the public. I have won the respect and good will of the people, making an ever growing circle of friends and customers. In my many years in Chicago I have made 100 to 1,000 per cent for my customers through real estate. I recommend my offerings as A1 investments.

I invite you to call at my office, examine my customers' ledger and write or phone them as to what they think of my dealings and the property bought from me.

I extend to prospective buyers a cordial invitation to make my office their downtown headquarters, with phone, stenographic service, and real estate advice—all free.

An Editorial by
S. Quincy Goldman

This new idea of building homes without a down payment on the house, and before your lot is fully paid for, is due to the fact that I own Hinsdale Terrace outright. The location of my property is such that I have no doubt it will enhance in value from 200 to 300 per cent as an investment.

Past performance is my best guarantee for the future. I have spent 20 years throughout a number of countries, selling millions of dollars of merchandise, talking a dozen languages. This has taught me to work with and for the public. I have won the respect and good will of the people, making an ever growing circle of friends and customers. In my many years in Chicago I have made 100 to 1,000 per cent for my customers through real estate. I recommend my offerings as A1 investments.

I invite you to call at my office, examine my customers ledger and write or phone them as to what they think of my dealings and the property bought from me.

I extend to prospective buyers a cordial invitation to make my office their downtown headquarters, with phone, stenographic service, and real estate advice—all free.

ZONE PLAN FOR RADIO CONTROL IN WHITE BILL?

Embodied in Proposed Amendment.

Washington, D. C., Feb. 6.—[Special.]—If an amendment presented by the house subcommittee on radio considering the White bill prevails the United States may be divided into five zones, or radio districts. One commissioner would be appointed by the President, by and with the advice and consent of the senate, from each of these zones. Not more than three commissioners would be of the same political party.

Urge Five Commissioners.

Under the terms of the amendment, which was introduced by Representative William W. Larsen, a Democrat, of Georgia, the first commissioners would be appointed for terms of three, four, five, six, and seven years respectively, terms of each to be designated by the President. Successors would be appointed for terms of seven years.

The Larsen amendment, providing for five members, would reduce the cost of operation by the commission, it is said, about forty per cent.

Although as yet moving pictures by radio are nonexistent and the question was raised as to the advisability of endeavoring to regulate something that does not exist, it is understood that the subcommittee allowed this clause to stand.

Talk of Radio Movies.

The argument of the committee members is said to have been that if radio movies were not provided for and they eventually came into being, there would be no place for them on the air. The same argument was said to have been advanced with regard to transmission of power by radio, another thing which has not as yet come to pass. It therefore appears that if moving pictures or power are broad-

HACKETT, NOTED TENOR, AS W-G-N STAR TONIGHT

He Will Dominate Atwater Kent Hour.

Charles Hackett, leading tenor of the Chicago Civic Opera company, will sing to his largest audience tonight at 8:15 when as one of the Atwater Kent artists he will broadcast from station W-G-N on the Drake hotel.

The noted tenor has always sung. His mother has said that he sang as a baby instead of squalling, and insisted upon being sung to. He was early alto singer in a boys' choir. He made his first public appearance as a member of the Worcester high school glee club. It was then discovered that he had a voice.

Begins His Career.

Marion Crawford's book, "Roman Singer," fired his ambition for a musical career. A Worcester architect fired him from his office, where he had begun the study of architecture. "I am really doing you a favor," said the employer who had recognized his remarkable gift. Thus was Hackett launched upon his career.

He obtained a position as soloist in a Boston church choir, and in 1911 sang in St. Thomas's church, New York. In 1912 he went to Italy and began to study opera scores. He made his operatic debut in Genoa in 1917, and continued singing, in Italy in winter and in South America in summer.

His Success Notable.

His European successes were notable. He has the honor of being the first American tenor to sing at the Grand Opera in Paris, La Scala in Milan, the Constanzi in Rome, the Lieco in Barcelona, the opera in Monte Carlo, as well as the Municipale in Rio de Janeiro. He has sung in opera in Vienna, Berlin and other European and South American capitals.

He sang to a great triumph in "The Barber of Seville," when he made his American debut at the Metropolitan opera, New York, in 1919. He later became the premiere tenor at the Chicago Civic Opera company, where he will sing the season of 1926-'27.

RADIO COMPASS LEADS U. S. SHIP TO BRITISH CRAFT

President and King Join in Praise of Heroes.

BY FRANK HINMAN.
[Radio Editor.]

Radio has again been written in bold letters in the history of heroism at sea, for it was radio, combined with American pluck and determination, which made possible the most thrilling of recent year rescues on the Atlantic. This rescue occurred a week ago when the crew of the American liner President Roosevelt saved the lives of twenty-five officers and men from the sinking British Antinoe after a four day fight which cost the lives of two of the President Roosevelt's crew.

Radio Compass Evolved.

Wireless has played important parts in hundreds of rescues at sea, and from the time that Jack Binns sat in his radio room in the White Star liner Republic in 1909 and saved hundreds of lives by continually sending out his distress signals until the advent of present day broadcasting a few years ago, an S. O. S. at sea was always a front page story. Since broadcasting on land has become so popular, however, wireless work at sea has been lost sight of as far as the inland citizen is concerned, but this hasn't prevented radio experts from improving the equipment of ocean going vessels.

As a result ships of today are much better than the ships of Jack Binns' time. One of the improvements, the radio compass, which came into prominence during the war, made it possible for Capt. George Fried, commander of the President Roosevelt, to locate the sinking Antinoe. During the war the radio compass was used to locate German submarines.

Novel Direction Finder.

The radio compass is really nothing but a large loop aerial which is used as a direction finder. Set owners whose receivers operate from loop aerials know how directional they are and how signals from a station can be increased or lowered by simply swinging the aerial from side to side. That is how the radio compass works. Primarily, it is used by skippers to discover their position at sea through the aid of signals from shore stations, but in the case of the Antinoe it was used to locate the sinking vessel.

WIRELESS AIDS IN THRILLING RESCUE AT SEA

Sinking Ships Located by Compass.

The operator on the President Roosevelt simply tuned in on the Antinoe's signal, swung his radio compass till the signal was the loudest, and then the ship sailed in that direction. The Antinoe was located 7 hours later, 100 miles from the charted position given by the Antinoe operator. Without the radio compass this discrepancy would have resulted in many hours' delay in finding the vessel.

Roosevelt's Heroic Act.

How the President Roosevelt stood by for four days making numerous unsuccessful attempts to take off the crew of the Antinoe and losing two of its own crew before it succeeded is too well known to repeat here. It might be well to add, however, that after the rescue had been accomplished it was radio that brought the news of the heroic feat to the waiting public of two nations and resulted in President Coolidge and King George of England joining in praise of Capt. Fried and his men.

Several days ago, after the President Roosevelt had landed the rescued seamen in England, both Capt. Fried, the American, and Capt. Torse, skipper of the English boat, spoke before the microphone of the British Broadcasting company in London, telling the English fans of the rescue.

BOY SCOUTS TO USE RADIO IN DRIVE FOR FUNDS

The Chicago council of Boy Scouts, 37 South Wabash avenue, has made extensive plans to let Chicago people hear about the Boy Scouts by radio in connection with the approaching financial campaign for $200,000 which starts Feb. 10.

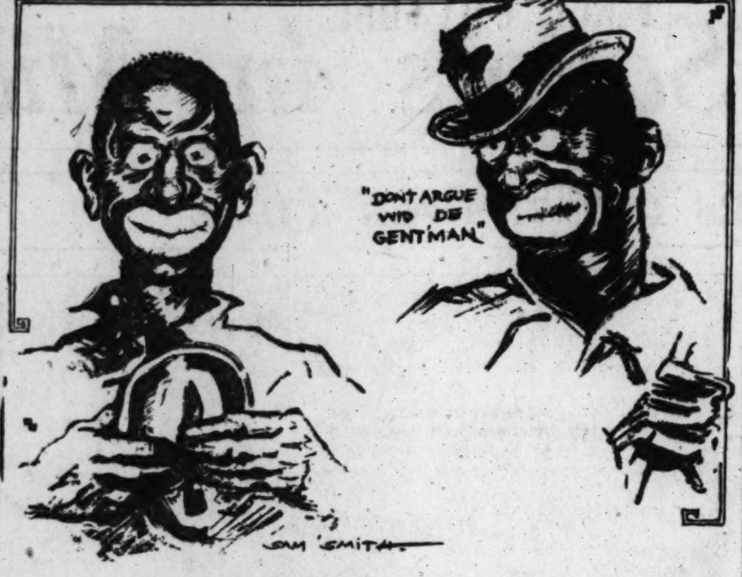
Most of the local radio stations have offered the Scouts places on their programs throughout the week of the campaign, and it is planned to have well known men, including Judge Victor P. Arnold of Cook County Juvenile court, and Gen. Le Roy T. Steward, Scout commissioner, give short talks on the work of the Boy Scouts. The program in detail will be announced later.

The Boy Scout financial campaign this year comes at approximately the same time as the national celebration of the 16th anniversary of the establishment of scouting in this country. One of the principal features of the national anniversary celebration will be a thirty minute Scout radio program in which leading artists will take part, to be broadcast tomorrow night, 7 to 7:30 p. m., central time, from station WEAF, New York.

Apollo Club Radio Concerts Prove Popular

The "radio divisions" of the Apollo club are gaining popularity in the programs being broadcast by WLS. Each Tuesday evening a part of the club, under the direction of Mrs. Maude Rae, sing from WLS. This week a mixed quartet of the Apollo club will be heard. In addition there will be solo and duet numbers.

Sam 'n' Henry, W-G-N's Comic Story Makes Hit with Fans



"DON'T ARGUE WID DE GENT'MAN"
SAM SMITH

Discovering the actual identity of "Sam 'n' Henry," the radio comic strip heard each evening at 10 o'clock over W-G-N, THE CHICAGO TRIBUNE station on the Drake hotel, is rapidly becoming the favorite sport of radio fans everywhere. Every mail bulges with inquiries regarding the two colored boys, and at the close of each evening's adventure, the W-G-N telephone operator prepares for a flock of calls concerning their real character.

Who Are They?

All manner of wild guesses are coming to W-G-N, and some fans are even submitting sketches of the pair. The accompanying one is the work of Sam J. Smith, 1301 South Lawndale avenue. "Sam" in the comic strip also boasts of "Smith" as a surname. In a brief note with the drawing Mr. Smith writes: "To Henry Johnson and Sam Smith, in appreciation of many enjoyable evenings afforded by them through W-G-N."

"Sam 'n' Henry" made their radio debut just three weeks ago, when they were discovered trundling along a rough Alabama road in a rattling buckboard, bound for the roalroad station where they were to take the train for Chicago. A series of homely, human and humorous adventures have been their lot since then. Arriving in Chicago they found a job awaiting for them on a rising skyscraper and their doings have been a continual round of laugh-provoking situations. Sam is the impulsive, luckless member of the two whose radio life is one scrape after another, while Henry is slower, more cautious, and stingy. Henry recently appointed himself Sam's "manager," and together they are seeking a job.

Some of their recent adventures included Sam's night in the jailhouse for playing "African dominoes"; his toothache and the tooth's consequent extraction amid groans and lamentations by the luckless colored boy and Henry's attempt to get Sam a job in a shooting gallery where he was to pose courageously while clay pipes were shot out of his mouth. Sam is usually the "goat," while Henry hovers around his friend, always avoiding accidents himself, but acting as guide, counselor and "manager."

Listeners are having a great time attempting to discover their identity. One fan said that if it were not for the fact that Bert Williams was dead, he would swear the old favorite of the music halls was taking the part of "Henry."

The funny pair also appeal to the ladies. One fan wrote in that he could no longer enjoy a motion picture show in peace, since his wife was insistent that they reach home at 10 o'clock in time to hear "Sam 'n' Henry." "Please continue your comic strip," whites another woman listener, Mrs. A. H. Scott, 237 North Menard avenue, Chicago. "'Sam 'n' Henry' are the end of our 'perfect' and other days, and we would miss them. The children expect to hear all about them each morning."

Lawyer Offers Aid.

Following the adventure which resulted in a trip to jail for both boys, J. S. Samuels, a lawyer, 6242 South Park avenue, Chicago, wrote as follows: "'Sam 'n' Henry' are now on their way to the police station. Can not help but offer my services and if Henry doesn't put up some of his cash for bail, we'll see what I can do for Sam."

Harriet Reed, also of Chicago, explains the general attitude of listeners with the following excerpt from one of her letters: "You've started something there that it will be hard to stop. Sam 'n' Henry are to W-G-N what Andy Gump is to THE TRIBUNE."

YOUNG VOICES ON LITTLE BROWN CHURCH PROGRAM

The Children's chorus from the Community church, Park Ridge, Ill., will make its initial appearance over the radio as a feature of the musical program of the Sunday evening service of the Little Brown church in the Vale, over WLS, tonight.

The Children's chorus is a choir of thirty-five youngsters, all between ten and thirteen years. It was organized a year ago by Elmer J. Crabbs and under his direction has taken part in the musical services of the Park Ridge Community church at least once a month.

The sermon will be upon "Jesus the Master," the last of a series of five which have been given by Samuel R. Guard, lay pastor of the Little Brown church, based upon Bruce Barton's Discovery of Jesus in his book, "The Man Nobody Knows."

Canada Leads in Radio Exports from U. S.

The total radio apparatus exported from the United States to foreign countries during the past fiscal month was $1,277,000. Of this sum, Canada lead with $810,631. That interest in this form of entertainment is still mounting in Japan is evidenced by total purchases of $100,850. Australia was third with $71,580, the United Kingdom fourth with $62,974, and Czechoslovakia fifth with $56,091.

Radio Aids in Tribute to Dawes at Tech Dinner

Maj. Gen. James G. Harbord, at the recent "phantom radio dinner," asked graduates of the Massachusetts Institute of Technology in 67 cities to stand as a tribute to Vice President Dawes. It is, of course, quite customary to do this at an ordinary dinner, but it has probably never been undertaken on a country-wide scale via radio before.

SOVIET RUSSIA CLAIMS A MILLION RADIO LISTENERS

Government Stations on Air Daily.

Washington, D. C., Feb. 6.—[Special.]—Over a million radio fans in the soviet union listen in on the programs of the government stations every day, according to a report of the soviet radio industry received by the Russian information bureau here. The number is increasing by scores of thousands each week. Village libraries in 400 villages in Moscow and Leningrad provinces have been equipped with powerful receiving sets and loud speakers, and 300 workers' clubs in the two cities have been similarly fitted out. The hospitals and the larger hotels are rapidly being supplied with radio apparatus, and the demand for sets from the numerous coöperative apartment houses grows rapidly.

The big transmitting stations at Moscow and Leningrad are wired to all the principal theaters, concert halls, public meeting places, and lecture halls. The stations at the principal cities in European Russia have recently been hooked up for furnishing simultaneous programs.

When the radio amateur in the soviet union wants to hear a bit of foreign transmission by way of variety, he tunes in on one of the big stations in Germany, England, or Denmark, and he can even get Paris. Similarly the larger soviet stations have been getting appreciative letters from fans who have enjoyed their programs in England, Germany, Czecho-Slovakia, and the Scandinavian countries.

In addition to the stations in Moscow and Leningrad, powerful transmitting plans are now operating at Kharkov, Ivanovo, Bogorodsk, Kiev, Nijni-Novgorod, Minsk, Voronesh, Tiflis, Baku, and other cities.

TO GIVE CONCERTS

JACQUES GORDON.

The name of Jacques Gordon heads the list of musical features that are to make the month of February interesting to listeners who tune regularly at 302.8 meters for W-G-N, THE CHICAGO TRIBUNE station on the Drake hotel. Mr. Gordon, internationally famous violinist and concert master of the Chicago Symphony orchestra, is to offer a series of four concerts over W-G-N, the first of these occurring Wednesday evening at 8 o'clock.

The excellent technique and magnificent ability of Jacques Gordon are known wherever musicians and music lovers foregather, and W-G-N compliments itself on being the first station in the country to secure him for radio listeners. He has entered with enthusiasm into the plans for his initial broadcast, and, in conjunction with Henry Selinger, musical director of W-G-N, is busy preparing a program that should win him many followers among set owners.

Mr. Gordon brings to the radio years of experience and study abroad, as well as in America. He is one of the best known students of Franz Kneisel, who, with Leopold Auer, ranks first among the world's violin pedagogues. He attracted attention in the east with the New York Symphony orchestra, and later as a member of the Berkshire string quartet, he toured the country, earning a national reputation.

Mr. Gordon's other appearances over W-G-N have been tentatively fixed for Feb. 16, Feb. 23, and March 2.

LONDON REPORT OF WAVE LENGTH CHANGES FALSE

Denial Calms Panic Among Set Owners.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

LONDON, Feb. 6.—The British Broadcasting company, which rules the British wireless world by a monopoly, has issued a denial to calm the panic of radio enthusiasts who have believed the report that all present wireless sets will be obsolete within six months. The report that all sets now in use would have to be scrapped was based on rumors that there would be a sudden sweeping change of wave lengths of all British stations down to 100 and 200 meters.

Belief that there would be radical changes in the present wave lengths became so general that the sale of receiving sets was seriously affected, but the official denial has revived confidence. It is now definitely stated that no material changes in wave lengths will take place for at least a year.

Little Chance of Short Wave.

Capt. Eckersley, noted British radio engineer and chief expert of the British Broadcasting company, has stated that there is no likelihood that the B. B. C. will adopt a wave length so short as to necessitate the use of the unstable short wave receivers with their difficult operation and delicate tuning circuits.

The International Radiophone bureau, which was set up in Geneva last April and is now continuing its meetings in Brussels, has so far been unsuccessful in finding a solution for the problem of broadcasting interference, and it is possible that the bureau may be given authority to limit the number of broadcasting stations in Europe.

The bureau has already done very valuable work in reducing the amount of interference between one station and another, but if the growth in the number of stations is not restricted the European broadcasting situation will become more and more complicated.

Want 250 to 600 Meters.

It has been suggested that a new wave length of about 250 to 600 meters should be used by broadcasting stations in Europe, the more extreme of these lengths being allocated to new broadcasting stations.

The combined phonograph and loud speaking wireless set, which has become popular in America, is now enjoying a vogue in England. There is a definite market open for a phonograph which would include a simple loud speaking set as well as the usual phonograph mechanism.

Inspectors are busy tracking down "radio pirates" or fans using unlicensed sets. Raids have been staged or are planned in many large cities, with attention at the moment centered on Dundee and Birmingham.

DR. ROBERT SPEER TO BE SPEAKER BEFORE SUNDAY EVENING CLUB

DR. ROBERT E. SPEER.

Music by the Lake Forest College Glee club will be broadcast by KYW from the 7 o'clock preliminary service of the Sunday Evening club tonight in Orchestra hall. It will be followed by the continuation of the series of talks on "Some Old Letters" by Clifford W. Barnes, president of the club, dealing this week with the second epistle to the Thessalonians. This will be Mr. Bernes' last talk for several weeks.

Dr. Robert Speer, secretary of the board of foreign missions of the Presbyterian church for the last 35 years and former president of the Federal Council of Churches of Christ in America, will deliver the address at the 8 o'clock meeting on "Can Christ Really Help Men?" which will be broadcast.

cast, their control will be anticipated by the pending legislation.

Expect Speedy Action.

It is believed there will be comparatively few changes in the White bill as considered recently by the committee, but this, of course, will be threshed out in subsequent meetings. There is every indication that the White bill committee consideration is being expedited and it is very likely that the report will be submitted to congress within the next two weeks, if not sooner.

OREGON POWER COMPANY TOLD TO FIX WIRES

Considerable attention has been attracted to the order of the public service commission of Oregon directing the Skamania Light and Power company to repair leaky power lines that were said to have been causing radio interference. This company, it is said, took over the lines of an older concern equipped with insulators having a voltage of 2,300 volts. According to the allegation, the Skamania company began using 6,000 volts and refused to install larger insulators. The complaint was filed by KGW, the Portland Oregonian station, backing up a number of radio owners.

BABY SHORT WAVE TRANSMITTER.

British experimenters in short waves report a new 5 meter baby transmitter which is so small that it can be held in both hands. It operates on a power of 50 watts.

Investigate UNIPOWER

find out why this new Radio "A" Power costs less . . . yet gives better reception

THE chief cause of poor radio reception, say experts, is "A" power that varies. It is radio's worst enemy.

But you can now banish this annoying factor easily—and economically. With Unipower on your set you are certain of quiet, unfailing "A" power. Always of the highest quality. Always at full voltage.

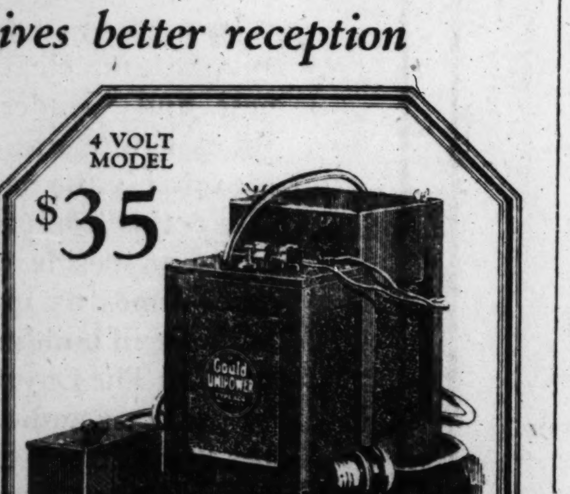
You will find, as thousands already have, that Unipower is the greatest single improvement you can make in your radio set. Not only is "A" battery failure swept aside permanently, but your "A" power cost is less.

Unipower is a single compact unit, quickly and easily installed. Just connect two wires to your set, plug in on your light current and the job's done! Unipower then requires absolutely no attention except the occasional addition of water.

You get more years of service at less cost per year with Unipower then with any other form of "A" power because Unipower contains no tubes, bulbs, lamps—nor any working parts that require frequent and expensive replacement. The first cost is the last.

See Unipower at your dealer's

Remember, with Unipower you get continuous, quiet reception—no hum—no noise—no fading due to lower power. It ends all the old bother and expense of continually buying dry batteries or charging storage batteries. Your dealer will gladly show you Unipower.



Unipower contains a Balkite charging unit of special design.

RUSSELL BURNS
4549 Magnolia Avenue, Chicago
Nearly everybody in Edgewater and the Wilson Avenue district knows Russell Burns. Radio fans who have had trouble with their sets count him as a friend indeed, for he knows how to get reception out of almost anything.

By RUSSELL BURNS

"The owner of a neutrodyne recently called me in because he was getting a lot of noise in his radio and not getting any of the overtones or musical qualities which he felt his set ought to deliver him.

"He was using wet B batteries. I put in Ray-O-Vac B's instead. The noises have now disappeared and he gets signals absolutely free from distortion. That is because Ray-O-Vac batteries have lower internal resistance. It never amounts to more than 13 ohms on 22½ volts.

"Another customer has Ray-O-Vacs on a super-het. He gets California two and three times a week regularly, when others are having trouble getting anything. Why? Because the low internal resistance in his Ray-O-Vacs enables the weak DX signals to be amplified without distortion.

"To me quality of reception is the most desirable thing about a radio. I would have Ray-O-Vacs for that reason alone if they cost twice as much as they do. But they cost no more than other batteries to begin with and often last twice as long. Their staying power is remarkable."

Mr. Burns gets his Ray-O-Vac batteries from the Milligan Music Shop, 1040 Wilson Ave. There are Ray-O-Vac dealers everywhere. They also sell Ray-O-Lite flashlights and batteries. But if you have trouble finding a Ray-O-Vac dealer, phone or write us for the name of the nearest dealer or jobber who can supply you.

cast, their control will be anticipated by the pending legislation.

Expect Speedy Action.

It is believed there will be comparatively few changes in the White bill as considered recently by the committee, but this, of course, will be threshed out in subsequent meetings. There is every indication that the White bill committee consideration is being expedited and it is very likely that the report will be submitted to congress within the next two weeks, if not sooner.

OREGON POWER COMPANY TOLD TO FIX WIRES

Considerable attention has been attracted to the order of the public service commission of Oregon directing the Skamania Light and Power company to repair leaky power lines that were said to have been causing radio interference. This company, it is said, took over the lines of an older concern equipped with insulators having a voltage of 2,300 volts. According to the allegation, the Skamania company began using 6,000 volts and refused to install larger insulators. The complaint was filed by KGW, the Portland Oregonian station, backing up a number of radio owners.

AMATEURS ADD TO LAURELS IN DISTANCE WORK

Relay Messages Nearly Around World.

New York, Feb. 6.—[Special.]—Radio amateurs who are out this winter to better the record made by the fraternity during the polar communications work last summer, are adding to their laurels with "DX" or distance work, and in many notable instances are giving demonstrations of speed that might engender pride in a purely commercial venture where speed meant financial profits.

Perhaps the outstanding pair of events were staged with the joint assistance of the Orient and Occident.

From Manila to New York.

The first relay was started from the station of Lieut. H. P. Roberts at Fort McKinley, Rizal, Philippine Islands. This station, Pi-1HR, turned the relay over to station 6BUC, the Radio club of Hawaii station at Honolulu. The Hawaiians, in turn, passed the message to station 5LI, owned and operated by Max Patton Jr. of Greenville, Tex. The message completed its travels when the Texan established communication with John Mulvihill, owner of amateur station 2BN. The entire transaction was completed in 18 hours and 9 minutes, from Manila to New York.

Another of the successful relays originated in station Fi-8LBT, Saigon, French-Indo-China. It was relayed from there to Lieut. Roberts at station Pi-1HR, Rizal, Philippine Islands. The next jump, the longest in the relay, carried the message to station g-2LZ, owned and operated by Mr. Mayer in England.

Relayed to Brazil.

While the message was destined for Brazil, the English station was not in touch with South America. Instead of sending the message directly, Mr. Mayer relayed it to J. S. Streeter, owner and operator of station A4Z of Cape Town, South Africa, who in turn passed the message on to R. Oxenham, also of Cape Town.

This latter South African was able to give the message to station BZ-1AF, owned and operated by C. Almeida of Rio de Janeiro, Brazil, who acted as the delivering agent.

The message was consigned to station Bz-5AB, a station that had been putting its signals into French-Indo-Chino with perfect regularity, according to the Saigon amateur.

BOLIVIA WILL EXPAND IN RADIO FIELD PRESENTLY

With a view of installing a radio broadcasting station in La Paz and otherwise developing and expanding the radio throughout Bolivia, El Radio Club Boliviano has been organized by a number of Pacenos, according to state consular advices to the United States department of commerce.

Plans are being formulated as to the capital stock and other features of a more perfect organization. The club already has two powerful radio instruments and frequently tune in on Pittsburgh and other stations in the United States, so the members state, and declare that the concerts and other radio features broadcast from Buenos Aires and Santiago are perfectly audible.

Bolivia has adopted, by supreme decree, very liberal rules and regulations as to the radio, such being formulated much after those of the republic of the Argentine.

U. OF C. CHOIR WILL PRESENT SLAVIC PROGRAM

Choral music which, full of the fire and dramatic intensity of the Slav temperament, will be heard from WLS Wednesday night, when the University of Chicago choir, directed by Mack Evans, goes on the air with a program of Russian anthems.

Maud Bouslough, soprano soloist, will sing with the choir.

Russian choral singing is unique, according to Director Evans, because the Russian orthodox church permits the use of no musical instruments for accompaniment. Other peculiarities are the number of parts, varying from four to eight, and the employment of a very low bass.

Compositions by Tschaikowsky, Kastalsky, Ippolitof-Ivanov, and Gretchaninoff are included in the program.

Roumania Begins to Wake Up to Radio

Based upon the psychology that they are more inclined to congregate indoors than outside for amusement, Roumania is pointed to as a promising field for radio. Private individuals may now own and operate radio receiving sets in Roumania, and evidences of increasing interest are constantly being manifested. Attractive window displays of radio apparatus are also beginning to make their appearance.

Cincinnati Station Claims Record That Beats KFI's

KFI, Los Angeles, recently claimed a radio record when a letter addressed merely to KFI was delivered promptly to the west coast station. Now WSAI of Cincinnati makes a counter claim. A letter addressed "Announcer Greene," and mailed from Atlanta, Ga., by a radio friend of Paul A. Greene, manager of WSAI, reached Greene two days later.

British Demand for U. S. Radio Parts Grow

The sale of high grade radio parts of American manufacture has increased considerably in England and there is a growing desire among British electrical dealers to become agents for American radio manufacturers, H. D. Butler, acting United States commercial attaché, London, cables the department of commerce.

FLOOR PLANS ARE NOW READY for the Third Radio World's Fair, New Madison Square Garden, New York City, September 13th to 18th, 1926, and may be secured by addressing Radio Manufacturers' Show Association, 127 North Dearborn Street, Chicago, Ill.

ON W-G-N PROGRAMS TODAY

VICTOR FOMEEN.

Topping the day's program from W-G-N, The Chicago Tribune station on the Drake hotel, is Charles K. Hackett, tenor, who will be heard during this evening's Atwater Kent concert, which starts at 8:15 and continues for one hour. Mr. Hackett is well known to Chicago listeners for his work during the season just closed with the Chicago Civic opera, and he is a concert favorite throughout the country.

The Atwater Kent concert is but one of the many musical features from W-G-N today. Following Uncle Walt's reading of the eight pages of Tribune comics, 10:45 to 11:45 a. m., listeners are switched down to the Chicago theater for the Sunday Noon Musical hour, which features the Chicago Theater Concert ensemble. Arsene F. Siegel is the solo organist who will be heard during this hour. The ensemble is to offer the following selections;

Overture to "Oberon"	Weber
Grand Fantasie from "Cavalleria Rusticana"	Mascagni
Under the Elms	Thome
Badinage	Herbert
Prelude to the "Le Deluge"	Saint Saens
In the Garden, from "Rustic Wedding Symphony"	Goldmark
Serenade	Schubert
Liebesfreud	Kreisler
Popular medley
March and Procession	Delibes

Immediately following the musical hour the broadcast of a complete performance begins. The chief offering of this week's show at the Chicago is John Murray Anderson's stage production, "The Melting Pot." Featured in this production are the Royal Accordion orchestra, directed by Victor Fomeen; Floyd Carter, baritone; Clay Inman, Bessie Patters, and Enid Watson. Mr. Anderson has acquired note as the producer of musical revues, and "The Melting Pot" is the first of a series of super-stage features which will be broadcast from the Chicago theater.

Edwin Stanley Seder's organ recital from the Lyon & Healy studio of W-G-N starts at 2 o'clock. His program is as follows:

Intersting selections are contained in today's program by the Chicago Philharmonic orchestra whose program is broadcast from the North Side Turner hall where it is presented under the auspices of the Chicago Turngemeinde. It starts at 3 o'clock. Directar Joseph Schwickerath has arranged a remarkable list of offerings of classic nature, that are splendidly relieved by selection from Strauss' "The Chocolate Soldier." Richard Czerwonky is the conductor of the Philharmonic. The soloist is Howard Preston, baritone. Here is the program:

March, "Joyeuse"	Chabrier
Overture, "Orpheus in the Under World"	Offenbach
Chicago Philharmonic orchestra.
Aria, "Vision Fugitive"	Massenet
Howard Preston, baritone.
Angelus	Hadley
Fantasie, "Cavalliera Rusticana"	Mascagni
Selections from "The Chocolate Soldier"	Strauss
Chicago Philharmonic orchestra.

In response to numerous requests, "Sam 'n' Henry," W-G-N's popular radio "comic strip," has been assigned a Sunday time, and listeners will hear the two happy go lucky colored boys at 10 o'clock this evening. Henry recently appointed himself Sam's "manager," and together they are looking for a job for Sam. Don't forget to tune in at 10!

SOLDERING EASY BUT WATCH THE FLUX YOU USE

Why Molten Metal Sticks to Wire.

The function of the brown jellylike paste which must be smeared on wires before they can be successfully soldered is something of a mystery to the great majority of radio fans. They all know from experience that the molten solder will stubbornly roll oc the wires unless some paste is employed, but as a general rule they possess not the slightest inkling of the real action the paste or "flux" performs.

The paste itself does not make the solder adhere, but it does remove a little known agent which otherwise would prevent the soft metal from doing so, according to F. A. Klingenschmitt, an eastern radio expert. This agent is a thin film of a chemical compound formed on the surface of the metal when the hot soldering iron is applied to it. The metal, under the influence of the iron's great heat, combines with the oxygen that forms part of the air, and its exposed surface becomes coated with an invisible layer of the new material, which is known chemically as an "oxide."

Purpose of Soldering Flux.

This newly created film effectively prevents the liquid solder from reaching the actual surface of the wires being connected. Unless it is removed the solder will not stick, regardless of the heat of the iron or the quantity of solder applied. The hotter the iron, in fact, the more oxide is there formed.

The specific purpose of the soldering "flux" is to absorb the film of oxide as quickly as it is generated. That's all there is to the whole affair, according to Mr. Klingenschmitt. The paste simply combines with the film, the chemical reaction producing harmless substances which do not affect the soldering operation.

Ordinary Rosin Good.

Soldering fluxes take the forms of solids and liquids. Muriatic acid in which pieces of zinc have been dissolved is a common liquid flux, but it is highly undesirable for fine radio connections because it is strongly corrosive. Ordinary rosin is the best flux for radio work because it does not corrode metal work and causes no electrical leakage troubles.

One interesting thing Mr. Klingenschmitt explains is that aluminum cannot be soldered by ordinary means because it possesses a natural film of oxide which standard fluxes cannot dissolve. Special chemicals and solders must be used on this particular metal.

RADIO WEAVES ITS WAVE NET ROUND OLD EARTH

Washington, D. C., Feb. 6.—[Special.]—That the vast expenses of the Pacific ocean and other parts of the world will be spanned at an early date by American wireless was indicated by the testimony of William Brown of the Radio Corporation of America, appearing before the merchant marine and fisheries committee of the house of representatives at Washington.

Mr. Brown, in answer to a question as to his company's foreign expansion, said that the R. C. A. was now building stations in the Philippines and Japan for communication with the Pacific coast, and, with the Federal Telegraph company, have negotiations under way with China for station there.

In addition to this, Mr. Brown indicated that a comprehensive plan of communication was under way with South America. While commercial radio service had not yet begun there, he said that a station in Argentina had already been erected and experimental messages were now being sent.

CANADIAN MARKET GROWS.

Canadian farmers are expected to increase their purchase of radio apparatus during 1926, according to the department of commerce.

KOA LISTENERS GET LESSONS IN VOICE CULTURE

Rocky Mountain Station Starts Course.

Denver, Colo., Feb. 6.—[Special.]—What is believed to be America's first radio course in voice culture was launched here last Monday by KOA of the General Electric broadcasting chain.

Thousands of radio listeners, especially voice teachers and pupils in small centers of population, will seize upon this opportunity to learn more concerning the principles of voice training, it is predicted. Lessons are slated during the Monday evening educational program at the Denver station, and are intended primarily as a supplement to personal instruction by resident teachers.

Fundamentals Covered.

Breathing, resonance and correct diction are some of the fundamentals covered, it is said. John C. Wilcox, widely recognized music master and authority in the field of vocal pedagogy, is conducting the study.

"KOA'S course, which embraces ten lectures, should encourage voice culture generally and undoubtedly will be an added means of creating a better understanding of singing," he said.

"It is not intended that these radio lessons shall supersede personal instruction for vocal students who already are enrolled with resident teachers, nor to deter others from taking advantage of such instruction."

Modern Methods Used.

"Almost every vocal student presents some individual problem which may be solved by the teacher only through personal diagnosis. Nevertheless, there are fundamental problems which are common to all vocal students, and these, I shall endeavor to discuss, analyze, and illustrate in such a way as will interest and benefit everyone who is honestly searching for vocal truth, be he layman, student, or teacher.

"The principles of vocal education which I shall present are in accord with the best thought of the day. Such exercises as I shall offer have been used successfully over a period of years with hundreds of pupils. Those who have received vocal instruction which is fundamentally sound should find no contradiction in what I offer, even though there be a divergence in the way of presenting the subject. A truth may be reached by various avenues of approach."

COASTAL RADIO SHEET READY.

The coastal radio and land line rate sheet for 1926 is about ready for distribution.

MEXICO DEVELOPS HONEST TO GOODNESS RADIO ANNOUNCER

Because of the atmospheric and other conditions, International Radio Week was disappointing. Nevertheless, it served to introduce to the American public the radio announcer at CZE, Mexico City. If listeners didn't recognize this station, it surely wasn't his fault, for setting a conspicuous example to some of our own announcers, so careless about call letters, the Mexican not only gave his call letter repeatedly but also the city and country.

He spoke in English, almost invariably pronouncing the "Z" "Zet," thus: "CZE, Mexico City! CZE, Mexico City! Mexico City! This is Mexico City, Mexico!" and so on. This individual not only proved himself the life of the party but a bully good advertisement for his country.

To Mexico went the honor of closing the week, for exactly at the hour of midnight its band was playing, as only a Mexican band can play it, "La Paloma." This was distinctly heard in various parts of the country, including the capital at Washington.

Another hardworking announcer was the man who so conscientiously announced the call letters of PWX at Havana. It would seem that North American announcers would do well to study the style of our friends to the south.

FIND 'B' BATTERY COST 1 TO 3 CENTS AN HOUR

Although it appears to be an exceedingly difficult figure to ar[illegible]t, the calculation based upon information given by one of the outstanding concerns of the country leads to the conclusion that the "B" battery current for the operation for a radio set costs only from two to three cents an hour. Dry cell "B" batteries were used exclusively in these tests.

Down to One Cent.

The opinion has been hazarded that on a three tube receiver operated without a "C" battery the "B" battery upkeep will be approximately two cents an hour. On the same receiver but using a "C" battery, the combined "B" and "C" batteries upkeep expense, it is said, would be less than one cent an hour.

On a five tube receiver using the larger "B" battery the upkeep expense would be approximately three cents an hour. Using the same set, but combining the "B" and "C" batteries, the expense would be approximately two cents an hour.

"A" Cost Less Than "B."

The "A" battery operating cost, be it dry cells or storage battery, is usually somewhat less than the "B" battery cost on the same receiver.

These approximations are based upon the assumption that the receiving set is in use for an average of two hours a day and that each "B" battery is maintained in service until each 45 volt unit falls to 34 volts.

NOT GUILTY!

The correct pronunciation of the name of Benjamin Gigle, the famous Italian tenor, recently heard on the air is "Geel-yee."

Now it is the Woman who selects the Radio

She wants something SIMPLE to operate, of BEAUTIFUL tone and GRACEFUL appearance

NOW that radio is becoming a musical instrument for the whole family to use and enjoy, it is the woman of the house who selects it. She is not a "fan;" has no technical interest in radio; dislikes to tinker.

For a Woman s Use

Radio must be simple and trouble-proof. She does not like groping around adjusting several dials to get a station. She wants to find out quickly what is on the air and turn immediately to the wave length desired. That means single-dial control.

The Pfanstiehl single-dial tunes perfectly, without the aid of verniers or auxiliary adjusters. It is really SINGLE.

Women Love Good Music

They want a radio to have tone quality, one which will reproduce the full charm of a great singer or a fine musician.

In the Pfanstiehl you get the full, clear resonance of a true "Overtone" receiver. The overtones are perfectly reproduced. They are the heart and soul of all singing or instrumental music. The Pfanstiehl protects the overtones by protecting the delicate vibrations which make them.

Women Like a Beautiful Cabinet

To be beautiful it must be simple. The fewer knobs and dials on the tuning panel, the more graceful looking it can be made.

The Pfanstiehl is unique in this respect. It has nothing on the panel but an illuminated wave length window, one dial, a volume control and a switch for "on" and "off."

For these three reasons the Pfanstiehl is pre-eminently the Radio for the Home

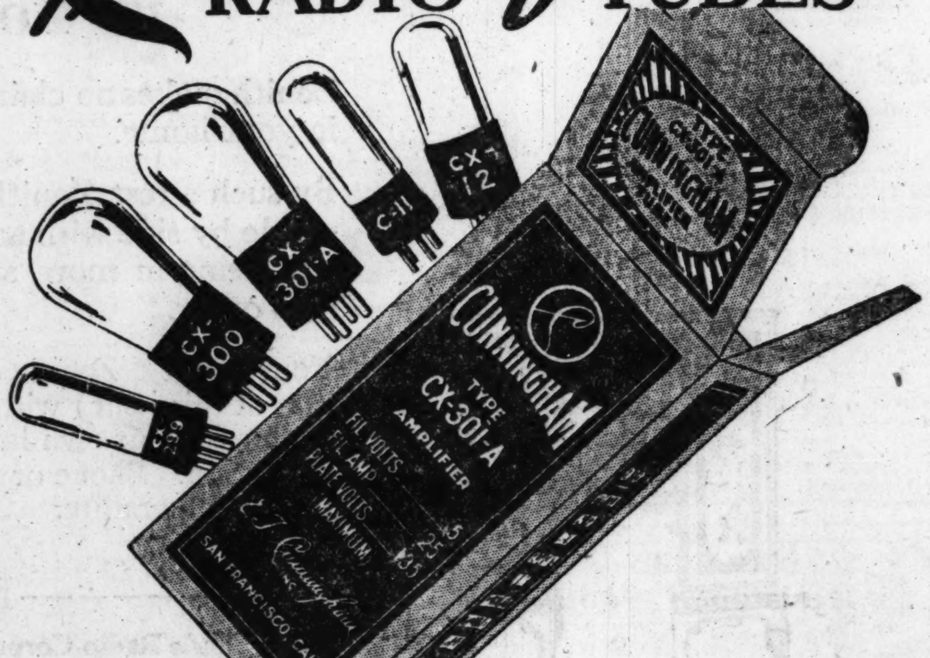
Cunningham RADIO TUBES



Invisible Integrity

—is the firm foundation for the faith and confidence of millions of Americans in Cunningham Radio Tubes

ALL radio tubes do look very much alike, but skin-deep similarity is not the test, nor the proof, of hidden quality. And hidden quality is of the utmost importance when electrons in flight make or mar the success of your radio reception.

Since there is no outward and visible test of tube quality, of tube endurance, the radio enthusiast pins his faith on a name, places his confidence in a trade-mark. He seeks—and finds—Invisible Integrity in-built into every Cunningham Radio Tube—since 1915.

FORECASTING OF STATIC O. K., BUT U. S. LACKS CASH

Weather Bureau Says It Is Feasible.

Washington, D. C., Feb. 6.—Already several newspapers of the country are anticipating the government by forecasting to their readers whether it is likely static conditions would prevail that night.

The United States weather bureau has been asked to undertake forecasts of radio reception a night or two in advance; that is, whether the reception will likely be poor, fair, good, or excellent. The bureau states, however, that the relation between the reception of radio signals and meteorological conditions is too indefinitely established and too many other factors are probably involved to justify an uncertain program of service of this sort.

Would Be Popular.

That necessity for a thorough study of the problem and the large cost are the big things standing in the way of progress along this line was indicated by the reply of Prof. C. F. Marvin, chief of the United States weather bureau, when asked why it was the government could not issue daily radio forecast bulletins, the same as the weather predictions.

"The weather bureau has received numerous requests of this character," Prof. Marvin replied. "We fully appreciate that such forecasts would be popular and well received by large numbers of people who are interested in radio programs, but because of limited funds and facilities the weather bureau has not been able to make any serious studies along these lines.

"Some of our people who are interested in radio in a personal way have made notes regarding the character of signals under varying weather conditions, and some of them believe that fairly accurate forecasts for possibly a day or two in advance might be practicable.

Many Factors Involved.

"However, I feel that it would be unwise for the weather bureau to attempt a new work of this sort in a hit-and-miss way, and that we should not do so until the subject has been investigated thoroughly and systematically and we are convinced that worth while service can be given.

"The difficulty is that we have no funds that can be applied to the providing of facilities and personnel for the conduct of the investigation. There are so many factors involved and so little definite data available that it would require an extensive program of collecting and compiling data before a serious study of the problem could be made."

Morning Concerts for Children Suggested

Further utilization of day time radio periods was suggested by a morning children's concert, which a great symphony orchestra broadcast recently from New York.

INSIDE THE LOUD SPEAKER

By Quin A. Ryan, W-G-N Announcer

International radio test week has come and gone once more. Its triumphal progress was again akin to an egg slipping down an elevator shaft.

Although statistics show that pillows are softer, blankets warmer, and mattresses comfier than ever before in bedtime annals, thousands of good citizens were asked to stick around and listen to the annual unfinished symphony of sealions, wheat pits, bloop-the-bloops, and hardy steam riveters calling to their mates.

International test week comes but once a year, and when it comes it brings good cheer to the aspirin tablet magnates.

Nobody but Houdini could get out of Chicago last week. The only folks who heard Europe in this city were Burton Holmes' audience.

It's as hard for us to get anything out of Europe as it is for Sec. Mellon.

The general flop of the international tests is blamed on the aurora borealis, sun spots, static, S O S calls, storms at sea, the Democratic party, electricity in the hair, and the rotation of crops.

One man was sure he could hear a bullfight from Spain, but it was only the family across the hall.

It was a great week's show. Seven full hours of banshees and busy signals.

Squawks and wails and puppy dogs' tails; and that's what international tests are made of!

Several W-G-N listeners suspected they were actually in resonance with Berlin, but it turned out to be the North Side Turner hall.

Some of the KYW fans thought they had Hamburg, but it was only Mrs. Schlagenauer.

Even as early as sundown the bloopers began to darken the sky in great flocks, flapping their wings ghoulishly and uttering unutterable howls.

Seven of them are known to have bitten south side residents, and one chased a radio set owner three blocks up an alley until he took refuge in a delicatessen.

"Bloopers," the experts tell us, are the howls, squeals, and whistles caused by radiating receivers acting as miniature transmitters. In other words, radio sets talking back. Four out of every five have them. It used to be called colic.

It was international test week, so congress took out a subscription to the world court.

Well, we've interviewed Valentino on the radio. Rudy, in the city last Monday en route from detaching a wife abroad, refused to make a personal theater appearance last Monday, but was willing to answer questions before the microphone.

We had advertised Rudy's interview for 6:30. He arrived at six o'clock, and there were three hundred and forty-two gals already waiting in the studio. So we spirited him downstairs to the photographer's studio to sit and smoke while waiting.

Rudy will never be a knockout on the radio. His speech leans toward the foreign accent; his voice is not full enough, and his manner is too snappy and staccato.

The verdict from all the hands on Rudolfo was that he is shorter than they had thought, just a wee bit not so handsome as in the pictures, but quite regular all through. He wears a slave chain around his right wrist and gives you one of those almighty handshakes. But a good gent!

"HAMS" TO HELP RAILROADS WHEN TELEGRAPH FAILS

Fearful of a breakdown of telegraphic communications, two railway systems have appealed to the amateur radio operators of the country to organize and stand by to help them in case of emergency. The two roads are the Pennsylvania and the Chicago, Milwaukee and St. Paul.

Two years ago, during the winter storms, wire communications were snarled by snow and ice and the broadcasting stations and amateurs volunteered to go on a hunt for lost trains and to handle railway traffic messages. Recent rulings by the department of commerce, however, have eliminated the broadcasting stations from the field, leaving only the amateurs to help the roads in such emergencies.

This year, should the call come, the railroad traffic will be handled almost entirely on high frequencies, the amateurs using 40 meter and 80 meter wave bands.

The traffic in the middle west will be handled through Frederick Hinds, 9-APY; Ed Ohrenstein, 9-DWH; Frederick J. Marco, 9-ZA, and Raymond J. Prazak, 9-QD, of Chicago. These amateurs will keep in constant touch with other stations in St. Louis, Louisville, Ky.; Grand Rapids, Mich.; Indianapolis, Ind.; Logansport, Ind.; Richmond, Ind.; Fort Wayne, Ind.; Terre Haute, Ind.; Toledo, O.; Columbus, O., and Cincinnati, O. These stations in turn will keep in touch with other amateurs farther east, west, north, and south of Chicago until a perfect network of reliable radio traffic posts has been established throughout the United States.

RADIO SERVICES AFTER SHARE OF CABLE BUSINESS

Several Beam Systems Nearly Ready.

By way of giving the cables additional competition, several wireless companies are about to inaugurate services between important countries, or have such plans. Australia's beam wireless stations will be ready for service presently, and with the completion of the reciprocating stations in England in May direct communication should be possible in June, Assistant Trade Commissioner Elmer G. Pauly, Melbourne, reports to the department of commerce.

A report from Canada states that stations at Montreal are progressing, and it is hoped that the service between Australia and Canada will be commenced at an early date. It is also expected that direct high speed wireless services between Australia and other countries may be a reality before long.

Following the discovery that the powerful Swedish commercial station at Grimeton has a greater range than was first calculated, and that its messages were clearly received in Japan, it is now proposed that the Swedish station be improved in order to establish direct traffic with Japan.

Advices from the far east say that it is probable that within the space of five years India and Ceylon will be equipped with as many as ten broadcasting stations. It is said that four important English wireless companies are sponsoring the scheme.

An interesting phase in the broadcasting situation in India is the lingual conditions existing in the country. It may be necessary to translate each item broadcast in some sections into as many as thirty-two different tongues.

JANUARY'S PLACE IN RADIO HISTORY

1845. Jan. 2.—Lindsay made experiments in transmitting messages across the River Tay by means of electricity or magnetism without submerging wires, using the water as a conductor.

1880. Jan. 16.—Trowbridge found that signaling might be carried on over considerable distances by electric conduction through the earth or water between places not metallically connected.

1901. Jan. 1.—The bark Medora was reported by wireless as waterlogged on Ratel bank. Assistance was immediately sent.

1901. Jan. 19.—The Princesse Clementine ran ashore, and news of the accident was telegraphed to Ostend by wireless.

1925. Night air mail guided by radio.

BROADCASTERS OF CANADA FORM BIG ORGANIZATION

Toronto, Ont., Feb. 6.—All radio stations in Canada are represented in the Canadian Association of Broadcasters, which has been organized. The new association has obtained a charter under the companies act. The necessary formalities were concluded here at a meeting of representatives of the Canadian Broadcasting stations. The following officers have been elected: J. N. Cartier, CKAC, Montreal, president; M. Johnston, CFCA, Toronto, vice president; A. R. McEwan, Canadian National railways radio department, Montreal, secretary-treasurer; G. M. Bell, CKCK, Regina, and P. H. Combs, CFCA, Toronto, directors.

Balkite Radio Power Units

Balkite Radio Power Units give unfailing, uniform current for both circuits from the light socket. One very popular Balkite installation, especially for heavy duty sets, is with the Balkite Battery Charger and Balkite "B." Here the noiseless, high-rate Balkite Battery Charger is ideal. If your battery should be low, you merely turn on the charger and operate the set. Balkite "B" eliminates "B" batteries entirely and supplies plate current from the light socket.

Another very popular Balkite installation is with the Balkite Trickle Charger and Balkite "B." The Balkite Trickle Charger converts your "A" battery into an automatic "A" power unit that provides "A" current from the light socket. Both circuits thus operate from the lighting circuit, converting your present receiver into a light socket set.

Noiseless—No bulbs—Permanent

All Balkite Radio Power Units are permanent pieces of equipment, entirely noiseless, have no bulbs, nothing to break, replace or get out of order. The current consumption is very low. All operate from 110-120 volt AC current, with models for 50, 60 and other cycles. All are tested and listed as standard by the Underwriters' Laboratories. All are sold by leading radio dealers everywhere.

Europe Once a Year? or "Distance"— Every Night in the Week?

Really, it's not such an impossible feat to bring in Europe when America is silent. Zenith has done it repeatedly.

But—it is a most extraordinary feat for a radio instrument in Chicago—where 27 broadcasting stations are on the air—to bring in stations a thousand miles away, any night in the week—clearly, and with unmatched quality of tone.

And—Zenith does just that.

Zenith is built and tested in Chicago—the most difficult area for radio reception in the world. Any radio which cannot duplicate Zenith's selectivity will prove itself a failure in Chicago.

Prove Zenith Supremacy in Your Own Home

Zenith makes no claims except by comparison—comparison in your home.

By such a test, Zenith guarantees this: under like conditions—side by side with any other radio set in the world—Zenith will bring in more stations with finer quality of tone than any other.

Your nearest Zenith dealer (his name is listed in another section of this issue) will gladly demonstrate the model that appeals to you, in your own home—whatever evening suits you best. No obligation. Phone or write us for his name and complete descriptive literature.

HUNT TROUBLE? HERE'S RECIPE HOW TO FIND IT

Hints Given by U. S. Bureau Expert.

BY M. S. STROCK.

[United States Bureau of Standards.]

You can give home service to your radio set without having an intimate knowledge of radio or of the theory of operation of the circuit. If you do this you will not neglect the more common adjustments and repairs which are necessary for consistently satisfactory results. When trouble occurs which extends beyond your knowledge or experience you may fall back upon the service from a reliable radio shop, preferably the store where the set was purchased.

The method of diagnosis to be described will generally indicate one or more of the following conditions: 1. When the difficulties are entirely outside the receiving equipment; 2. the source of the trouble if within the receiving service; 3. when the correction of trouble is outside the scope of "home service."

Let us assume that the radio set has been giving satisfactory service for some time and then becomes noisy or insensitive. These two conditions cover a multitude of sins.

Detecting Outside Trouble.

Disconnect the antenna lead-in from the receiving set (receiving set adjusted for normal operation) and note if the disturbing noises are considerably reduced in intensity or cease altogether. If so, you may be reasonably sure that these noises are due to external causes. Their source may possibly be in your own home—electric motors or electric heating or cooking appliances.

Again, these noises may be caused by more distant electrical disturbances of many sorts, or heterodyne whistles from broadcasting stations or receiving sets. Just before disconnecting the antenna you must note very carefully the character of these noises, otherwise you may confuse them with noises originating in the receiving circuit which are caused by its being thrown into an unstable condition by the removal of the antenna lead-in.

Possibly Loose Connections.

If the test just described fails definitely to locate the source of trouble, it should be repeated by disconnecting both the antenna lead-in and the ground wire from the receiving set.

An apparently "insensitive" condition of the receiving set may be caused by a loose connection in the antenna or ground wires. It is a simple matter to examine the ground wire and determine if it is intact. This should be done while the set is tuned to the local staton, and particular attention should be given to the point of contact of the ground wire. In the event of an insecure contact a grating sound will be produced in the phones or loud speaker when the wire is shaken slightly.

Looking the Batteries Over.

Examine the wires leading from the batteries to ascertain that there are no loose connections. Be sure that the connections are not reversed. An idea of dry cell "A" battery condition may be obtained by noting the settings of the rheostats. If the signals increase in volume as the rheostats are turned around to the right the dry cells should be discarded. If the voltage of a "B" battery unit normally registening 22.5 drops below 17, the battery should be thrown away.

Overhaul Set Once a Year.

If the tubes are intact and the set is incapable of producing sounds it probably has some rather serious derangement which cannot be readily located by the home service plan.

The most common source of trouble within the radio set is in the electron tube or the sockets. Connect the phones to the set so that the minimum amount of amplication is used, then ascertain which tubes are functioning, by removing all others from the sockets.

Attention may be called to the grid lead. It should be removed to ascertain the effect upon any noises in the head phones. If dirt has accumulated between the plates of variable condensers it should be carefully removed. Loose connections to the rotating condenser plates are often a source of trouble. This will generally be made evident by rotating the condenser knobs and listening for scratchy sounds in the head phones. Every radio set should have a careful overhauling once a year.

Seven Stations in U. S. Discontinue Broadcast

The new stations clamoring for licenses, but who must wait pending a clearing up of the present congestion, were not afforded much relief this month, inasmuch as only seven stations permanently discontinued broadcasting. They were:

WGBK, Johnstown, Pa.; WDCH, Hanover, N. H.; KPGH, Stanford, Cal.; KFOJ, Moberly, Mo.; WTAC, Johnstown, Pa.; WJBN, Sycamore, Ill.; and WIBC, St. Petersburg, Fla.

Many Ships at Sea Have No Wireless

Apropos of the recent thrilling rescues at sea and the essential part taken by radio, an English newspaper makes the surprising observation that more than 700 ships are still going to sea without wireless and 50,000 lives are endangered daily as a consequence.

PROMISSORY NOTES.

It was recently announced that Miss Florence Mulholland, the radio contralto, would sing the "Bankers' International Hymn," whereupon Florence sang "O, Promise Me."

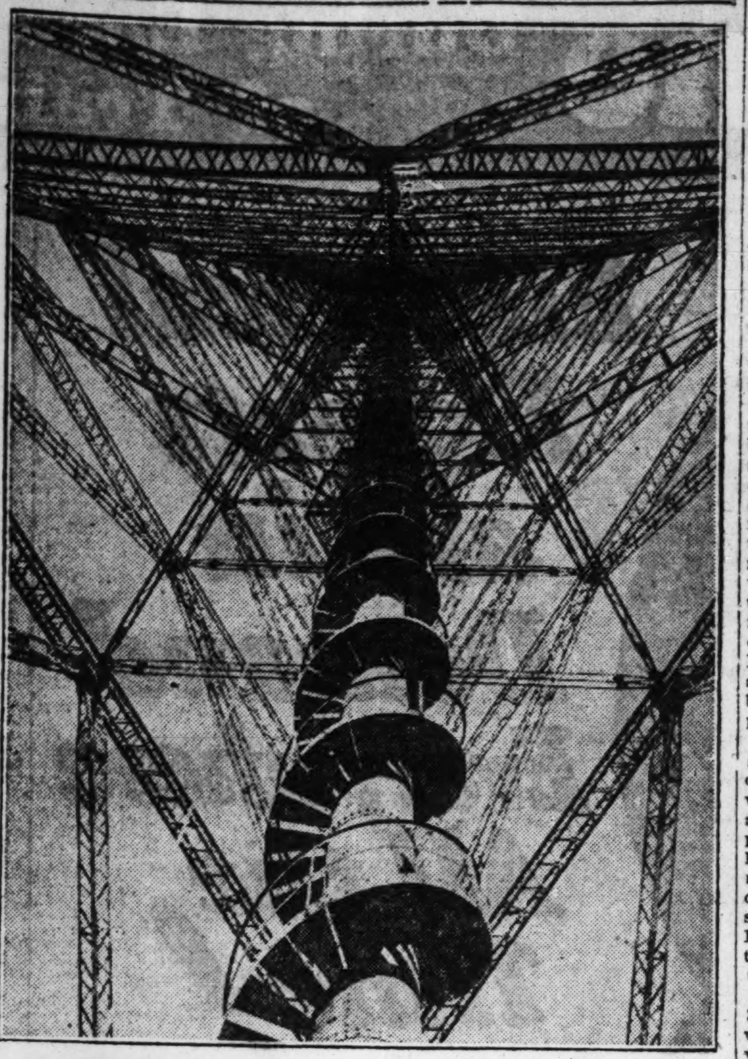
GERMAN TOWER PIERCES SKY



Germany comes forward with a radio station said to be "the world's largest." This picture shows the tower, which is only 50 feet shorter than the Eiffel in Paris. The station is being constructed at Koenigs-Wusterhausen and the materials are a combination of steel and aluminum. The pipe in the center contains an elevator which carries one man.

Broadcasters and Composers to Agree?

There seems to be an impression, although previous efforts have proved futile, that the broadcasters and composers are nearing an agreement upon the approximate royalty to be charged for broadcasting copyrighted music compositions. If so, it is said this suggested rate of payment must be included in the copyright amendment introduced by Senator Dill, a Democrat, of the state of Washington, now pending in the senate. As yet no date has been fixel for the Dill bill hearings.

U. S. Hears That Guayaquil Firm Gets Radio Concession

Washington, D. C., Feb. 6.—[Special.]—It is unofficially reported that a Guayaquil firm has been granted the exclusive right to import radio telephone apparatus for a period of 5 years, and to erect two broadcasting stations, one at Quito and one at Guayaquil, according to consular advices to the United States department of commerce. The net profits accruing are to be divided equally between the concessionnaires and the government.

THREE-FOURTHS OF BRITISH SETS OF CRYSTAL TYPE

Even though the number of listeners in the United Kingdom is now 1,570,000, as compared with 1,200,000 last spring, and the number of stations has increased to 25, including one in Dublin, the development appears not to be as rapid as might ordinarily be expected.

"The opinion is held in some quarters that a more rapid increase in the number of broadcasting stations in this country would increase the number of listeners in and thus broaden the market," Hugh D. Butler, acting United States commercial attaché in London, reports, "but crystal set users make up possibly 75 per cent of the total, and a too rapid increase in the number of stations in any one locality would immediately raise a loud protest, because it would destroy the usefulness of these sets before their owners were prepared to buy better ones. Furthermore, there are any number of stations on the continent which should be available to listeners in having high priced sets.

"British makers have not had a good season this fall. After all, an increase of 370,000 listeners in, most of whom are buying crystal sets, is not a very substantial market. One important man in the trade gives it as his opinion that the British makers made a mistake when they failed to concentrate on popular priced sets of, say, five tubes, which would cut out London and enable listeners in to get the other British as well as the Continental stations."

The London station broadcasts with 3,000 watts and has a wide wave band, which makes it difficult to cut it out with any ordinary apparatus.

Free Carfare to Coyne During Entire Per of Training

A VITAL MESSAGE TO PARENTS OF YOUNG MEN

BY H. C. LEWIS

President Coyne Electrical School

Perhaps you have a son who is leaving school or college. You have done much to help him prepare for the future activities of life. The groundwork for success and independence has been given to him. He now possesses valuable general knowledge, and perhaps plenty of it, thanks to you.

But "groundwork" alone is not quite enough. A superstructure of practical, money-making knowledge should be added to the training already provided. Don't let YOUR boy fall short of the mark when just a little more training — training along definite specialized lines—training that can be converted into cash to meet the inevitable obligations of "the butcher, the baker, the candlestick maker"—can be acquired by him in a short time for a trifling additional outlay on your part.

BACK YOUR BOY TO THE LIMIT! Do your part to keep him from being a perpetual job-hunter, a drifter, a "misunderstood" lad. Help to turn him into a steady, upstanding, responsible, self-supporting and self-respecting member of your family and of the community. Keep him from the depths by guiding him to the heights. You've gone almost the limit for him. NOW FINISH THE JOB!

The Electrical Field is rich in big money-making opportunities. It offers clean, dignified, fascinating work at good pay—everywhere—all the time! It provides wholesome, productive employment for mind and body. It satisfies all of the cravings of inventive and constructive genius. It perhaps transcends all other fields of human endeavor in providing developments that affect the welfare and activities of mankind. It is the backbone, the nerve and the sinew of thousands of other fields of endeavor. It is self-perpetuating and can never die out. It is rich and noble, and prodigious in size and importance.

YOUR BOY IS YOUR BOY! He will continue to be yours even after you have passed on and he has been left to shift for himself. Make him a credit to himself and yourself! Help to put him into a field that offers rare opportunities for service to others and rewards for himself.

CROSSED WIRES

Here's the Second Installment of a Thrilling New Serial

By John T. McCutcheon

THE STORY SO FAR:

THE scene is Paris. A mysterious French woman telephones to Pierre de Barsac, "gentleman" crook, to say it will be well worth his while to focus his attention on a wealthy American family, the Craytons. If he can win the daughter, Virginia, it will mean many American dollars. The telephone wires are crossed; the conversation, instead of reaching the ears of De Barsac, is heard by a young compatriot of the Craytons, whose interest is aroused by the mystery. He goes to a cafe where the two plotters meet and there learns that these crooks hope to "do" the rich Americans in two months' time. Their only weapons are to be a counterfeit title and the wits of De Barsac.

INSTALLMENT II.

IT WAS late afternoon. Except for the subdued murmur of motors in the Place Vendome, the salon was pleasantly quiet.

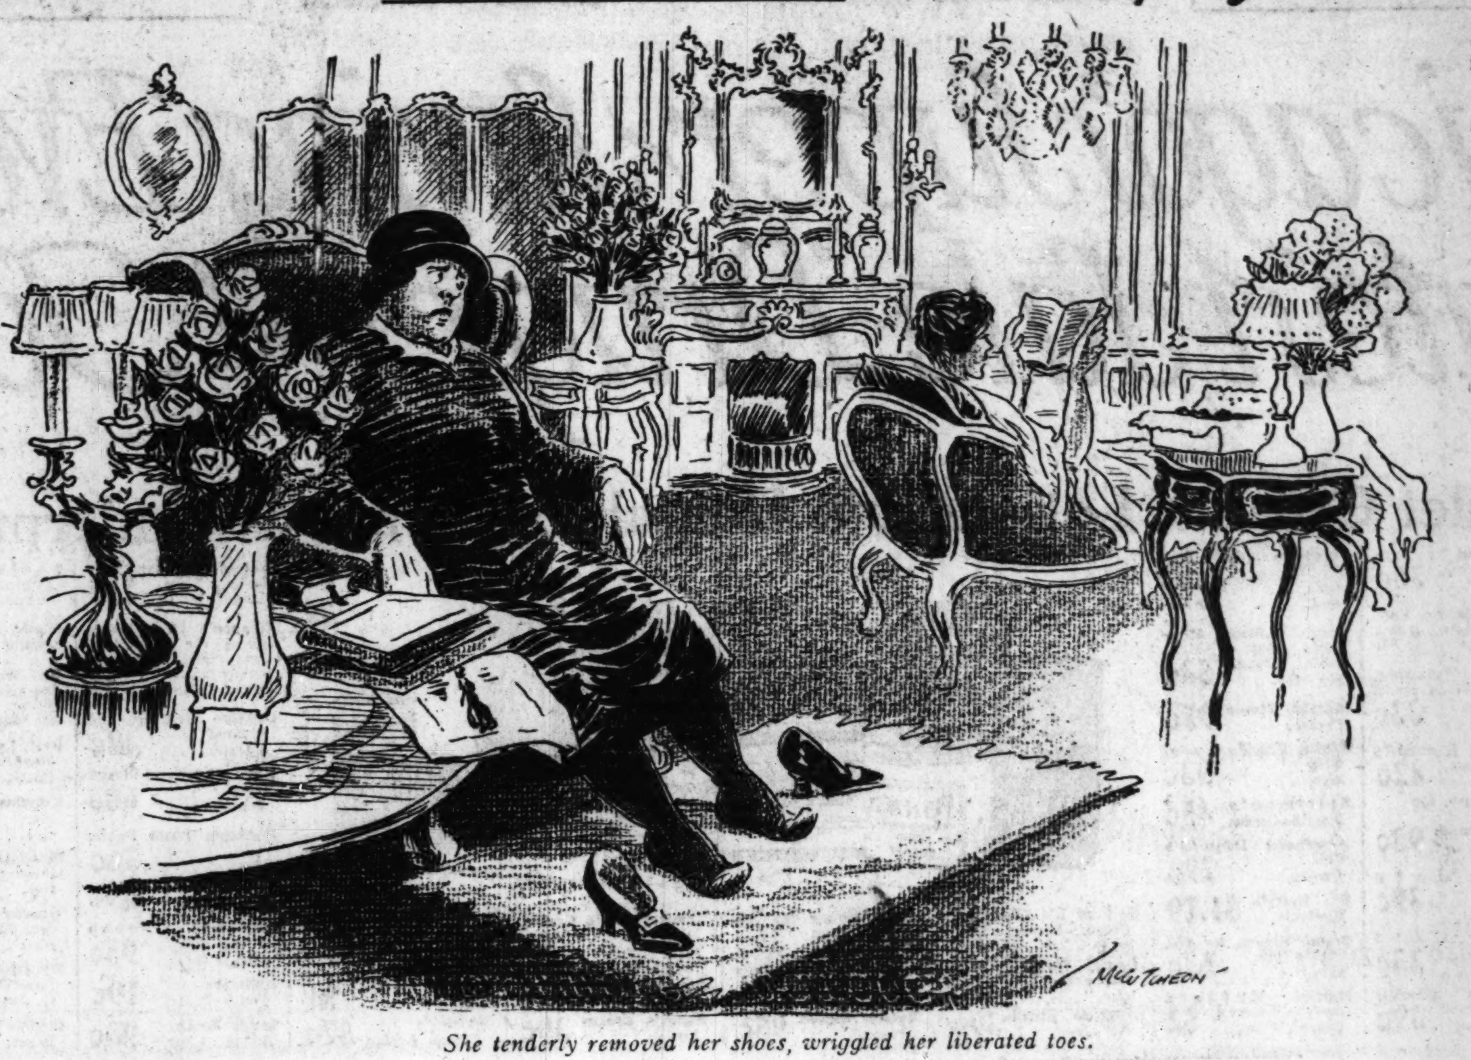
Miss Virginia Crayton, propped up in a chaise longue and reveling in a modern novel which owed its wide popularity to a sparing use of asterisks, was treating herself to a day off.

A large box of confections lay open at her side, and from time to time, unerringly and without removing her eyes from the pages, she dipped into it and conveyed a bit of candy to her ready lips. Several large bunches of flowers were scattered about. They were part of the floral bombardment of Count Pierre de Barsac, who was laying siege to the heart of Miss Crayton.

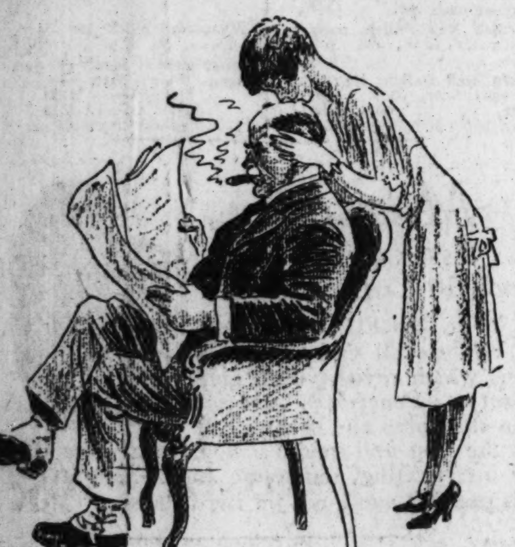
He had his moments of encouragement as well as of despair. Virginia's mother beamed amiably whenever he appeared. Her father, however, was unsympathetic. He lost no opportunity of impressing upon his wife and daughter that Monsieur de Barsac, as a possible son-in-law, was beyond the pale.

"I'll be damned if any infernal fortune hunter is going to marry my daughter!" he exclaimed; and by daily repetitions of this remark he hoped to convey the idea that he was opposed to the match.

As for Miss Crayton, her attitude varied. When her mother urged the desirability of a titled husband she scoffed, but when her father raved against De Barsac she found herself goaded to a state of revolt.



She tenderly removed her shoes, wriggled her liberated toes.



She answered by wrapping a soft arm around his neck and calling him "an old silly."

At first she had answered these explosions by wrapping a soft arm about his neck and calling him "an old silly." Later she began to show irritation, and finally she reached a rebellious frame of mind. When the subject of De Barsac arose she rushed out of the room.

If her father had known how to handle a delicate affair of the heart as well as he know how to handle the submissive directors of his company, he would have chosen subtler methods. He would have used the rapier of ridicule rather than the battering ram of rage.

Whenever Mr. Crayton entered the salon of their hotel suite and saw a new bunch of flowers he flew into a rage. Things could not continue this way for long.

At the time this chapter opens Mr. Crayton was absent and peace prevailed. In the midst of a most shocking episode of the novel, just as something scandalous was maturing, Mrs. Crayton elected to arrive from her daily ordeal at the dressmaker's.

She heaved a sigh as she collapsed into a chair.

"O, dear! I wish we still wore tight corsets. It would be such a relief at times like this to take them off." She tenderly removed her shoes, wriggled her liberated toes, and then beamed pleasantly as she noted a newly arrived bunch of flowers.

"From the count?" she asked. Receiving no answer, she glanced at the clock.

"Where's your father, Virginia?"

"Oh, I suppose he's out thinking up more disagreeable things to say."

"Poor man! I'm afraid he isn't enjoying Paris."

Virginia smiled. "That's what I call a conservative statement, mother. All he does is to go down to the bank every morning and watch those funny little markers registering the ups and downs of the franc. Then he hurries up to the newspaper office, where he reads the latest American papers. Then he sits for a while at a sidewalk table at the Café de la Paix, and then he comes back to the hotel. For an active man, accustomed to steering large enterprises, it isn't a wildly exciting life."

"O, dear!" sighed Mrs. Crayton. "And if we suggest art galleries or sightseeing he simply explodes."

"The trouble with father," continued Virginia, "is that he's so dreadfully important at home. Over here nobody notices him or cares what he does. Most men who come to Paris don't want people to know what they're doing."

"Virginia! You mustn't talk like that."

"All right, dear; I withdraw it. But you know it's true, just the same. Father misses not having people point him out as he walks along the streets. His vanity is hurt. He's beginning to hate everybody. He's a dear and I adore him, but I'm afraid he has all the small town prejudices against anybody who speaks a different language."

"He certainly is obsessed about Count de Barsac."

Virginia's lips tightened.

"Well, I can tell you this, mother: if he doesn't lay off his present tactics he'll drive me to do something desperate. He'll goad me into marrying Pierre—or the chauffeur or somebody," she added bitterly.

"It's on his mind dreadfully, Ginnie; I'm really disturbed about him. We must try to humor him."

"Mother, dear, I've humored him until my humor is all exhausted. If he keeps on—well, there's no telling what I'll do."

With this ultimatum, she picked up her book and tried to concentrate her mind on it.

Seven o'clock came, and as Mr. Crayton, for the first time in history, failed to return, his wife became vaguely alarmed.

They were giving a dinner that evening at a fashionable restaurant. It was to be their first important bit of entertaining, and elaborate preparations had been made. Count de Barsac was to be one of the honored guests.

Eight o'clock came and no Mr. Crayton! An acute crisis was at hand. Should they proceed with the dinner or should they notify the police?

(To be continued next Sunday.)

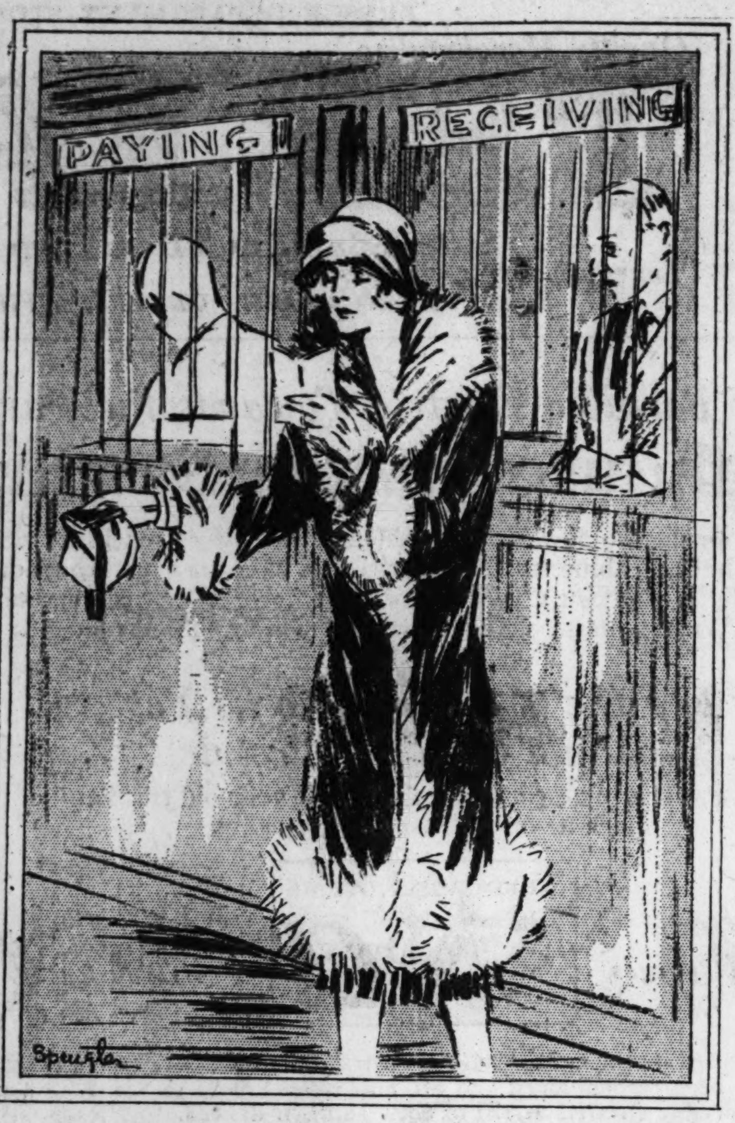
LEARNING TO SAVE

Lessons in Providence Might Help Both Business Girl and Her Social Sister.

by Doris Blake



DOES the business girl make the best wife? Does the handling of her own money train her efficiently in the management of a husband's income?

The popular theory is that the business girl makes the ideal wife, that her training fits her to make a dollar do the work that two would do in untrained hands. And not infrequently the opinion is justified. But not always—not by a good many business girls!

It is not what a girl earns but what she does with her earnings from which any prophetic conclusions may be drawn about her capacity as wife and household manager.

There are business women as reckless and as extravagant as girls who have never known what it is to punch a time clock. And they make no better wives than those who have known no business training.

Living in a certain community are two young brides, one who several years ago was listed among the social butterflies, the other a business girl earning an excellent salary. The first girl and her husband are making payments on a simple little bungalow. The former business girl and her husband have an expensive apartment, expensively furnished, the furniture being paid for on the "agreeable time payment terms." They are in debt.

Reckless or Provident.

This business girl belonged to that reckless group of earners who never denied herself what she thought she was entitled to, and never saved a dollar. There are two kinds of business women: the kind who spend no more than they should and the kind who spend far more than they should.

The average girl in the business world is in the main an exceedingly sensible and capable person, interested in her work, alert to her employer's interests, as well as alive to her own advancement. She is keen on success, quick to absorb knowledge, adaptable, and when she gives her mind wholeheartedly to her work she develops a brain as good as a man's.

But she too often has one failing that is curiously at variance with her business instincts. She is a poor "saver" and seems to have little sense of the value of capital where her own private affairs are concerned.

Wisdom in Pin Money.

There are several reasons for the recklessness of many girls' expenditure. To start at the beginning, as children they were not taught to understand the worth of money. In bygone days the small person was given a tiny allowance. The dimensions were modest and she was expected to regulate her expenditure according to her income. In this way she learned something of the purchasing power of money and of the necessity for forethought in spending. She early realized that if she desired some big item she must deny herself smaller things and save her pennies for the coveted treasure. Some parents, a generation ago, encouraged their children to keep a tiny ledger account, which enabled them to look back and see how they had spent their cash. All this helped a child to understand that money did not arrive like the gentle rain from heaven. Too, it involved discipline, restraint, and self-denial in spending.

Today the pendulum has swung far in the opposite direction. In all ranks of society, from the poorest to the richest, a child nowadays has only to clamor for money to get what it wants. The child of the poorer classes begs for money for candies and the movies, which is promptly supplied. The child of the rich cries for what it wants and gets it. The whole trend of parental affection is bound up in giving the child what it wants. The consequence is a generation with a confirmed taste for spending on self with next to no idea of the real value of money it wastes.

Another factor contributing to unwise expenditure among young business girls is the good salaries they command, which makes it possible for them to indulge money recklessly. Perpetual spending becomes after a time a mania with a large number of girls. So much does it become a habit that saving seems impossible with many, no matter what the size of their income.

Generosity—a Failing Virtue.

It is pointed out by one authority on business girls and their spending proclivities that, with this orgy of spending, women have not developed in generosity nor in a desire to be hospitable, that the more a woman spends in the present day, as a rule, the less does she do for other people. The influence of her early years, when every desire was gratified, has left its mark. She is self-indulgent.

Of course, there are exceptions among women in the business world. There are women who cannot save because the demands of loved ones prevent it. There are women who offer up a whole life of sacrifice for family reasons. And there are women with open hearts and hands for every charity that comes to their ears. To these we have no reference, but to that group only that spends too lavishly on themselves and never saves a dollar.

I know girls spend unduly on themselves in the hope of bettering their positions. Some look for the betterment to come through business channels. A large number hope it will come through marriage. It is only natural for a girl to want to look her best, but extravagant dressing is not good dressing. And it is no training for successful partnership in marriage. Few things can so quickly reduce a home to an abode of nervous wrecks as money shortage, which surely follows with one at the head trained in the art of self-indulgent spending.

When Savings Help.

There are so many reasons why a young business woman should begin her savings account with the first money earned. A little capital in the background may enable her, at an unexpected crisis in her affairs, to come in on the crest of the wave. Simply through having some savings which she could draw on at the psychological moment many a woman has been enabled to make a profitable investment. Then there is a feeling of security, a definite poise to know you have something more to your credit than the current week's salary. Most important of all is the fact that having learned to look ahead you will make a better wife.

Don't buoy yourselves up, you young business girls, with the delusion that you will save later when you get a raise. When you get that raise there will be more claims upon it. If you can't save anything on your present salary, it is most unlikely you will do so when you get an increase. Your expenses will increase in proportion as your salary grows, if you are one of the type unwilling to practice self-denial. You will want a better place to live, take a more expensive holiday trip, buy your clothes at a better house. Saving becomes more and more difficult unless you deal firmly with yourself at the start.

Suppose love passes you by and in your late thirties younger employés will be given preference; with a steadily accumulated nest egg life will have none of the terrors of the unprepared.

Or, suppose love does not pass you by, you come to marriage not only prepared to live within your husband's income, but eager to help him build that little nest egg which fortifies the home as few other measures of preparedness do.

Unless you are a "saver" you are not the business girl who makes the ideal wife.

MEMORIES OF YOU.

MI VIEJO AMOR: Why does rain always make me think of you, Sweetheart? Is it because the rain is gallant and moody, as you are? When I feel cold, swift rain upon my face it brings me close to you—closes the gap of the years that separate us. I can feel your eyes upon me—black, heartless—drawing and repelling me! Today the rain is cold and sharp. You were like that once with me! But, O, I want you!

But, sometimes, when the soft summer rain patters around me, it is like your gentler caresses—soft, tender—and it whispers golden things into my ear. It brings complete understanding and happiness such as I had when you held my hand, and my cheek touched yours momentarily in the soft darkness of an oleander-scented night.

But be it cruel or tender, commanding or understanding, I love the rain.

It is raining today—and my thoughts are of you!

HAT ORNAMENTS OF FELT.

ATTRACTIVE ornaments made of all colors of felt can be used on felt or straw hats like Bangkok and Ballibunples for smart spring wear.

The first ornament is called the cone. Small petals are pasted to a foundation of black tarlatan. Beginning at the top and finishing at the bottom, it measures 5 inches long and 3 inches wide.

The second is made of castilion or Mexican red felt. Nine petals are pasted on a foundation. Then there are eight smaller ones overlapping them. A circle of Kelly green felt cut in little notches is set in the center and a small circle of the red felt is set on that.

The third ornament is made of cinder gray felt. A circle 3 inches in diameter is cut, then two long petals are cut 4 inches long and are set at the bottom of the circle. Three short petals, the outside 2½ inches long, and the center one 2 inches, are cut and set up against the circle. All five petals are finished off with a small circle of felt covered with silver paint.

To make this paint gold, silver, and bronze dust can be bought at any artist's supply store. Put a large tablespoonful in a tin measure or in an old china cup. Pour banana oil, which can be bought at the same place as the dust, over the dust, and stir wet with a smooth stick until it is the consistency of paint. Use a small camel's hair brush to apply. Trace it carefully around the edge of the design. Use silver paint on blue, gray, pink, or orchid felt; gold or bronze paint on the wood or brown colorings.

Silver or gold painted on the edge of petals of pink or white gardenias gives them a smart touch. The large fussy chrysanthemum in all the late shades takes on a different look when given a dash here and there of any of these metal paints to the long petals of flower. It can also be used on ostrich feathers and on the edge of stiff quills or wings.

Many of the felts and velours of this season have the edges left raw. That is, there is no wire on binding on them. A narrow line of this paint on edge gives it a more finished look.

The black ostrich feathers have a tendency to look old, but when given a touch of this look lovely

How to make TEA correctly

Firstly

Be sure you use India Tea, or a blend containing India Tea.

Secondly

Use an earthenware teapot, and put into it one good teaspoonful of India Tea for each cup of tea required.

Thirdly

Be sure you pour the water into the teapot the moment it boils. Only fresh boiling water can bring out the true flavour of the tea. Hot water is no use. Water that has been boiling for some time does not give the best results. This is important if you want a really good cup of tea.

Fourthly

Allow the tea to stand 5 minutes to infuse. Put a little cream or milk into each cup before pouring out the tea. It greatly improves the flavour. Then add sugar to taste.

Any retailer or store can supply you with India Tea or blends containing India Tea. He has no difficulty in getting it, as practically every wholesale distributor of tea in this district supplies India Tea. He will gladly get it for you—but—

LOOKING TOWARD SLIMNESS

by Antoinette Donnelly

NEW YORK.—[Special Correspondence.]—We pointed out recently the relation of the overweight individual to health and length of life, as recently shown in health insurance statistics.

After the age of 30, reports show, overweight becomes a real menace. As the age increases, the relation between fatness and death becomes closer. They show that among men of medium height between 40 and 44 years, an excess weight of 20 per cent shows a 30 per cent higher mortality rate. An excess weight of 40 per cent, an 80 per cent mortality increase. Since fat knows no sex, the conclusions are as applicable to women. The fat woman is no better risk than the fat man.

In youth it is conceded a little fatness is a good thing, skinniness a real danger. At middle age the formula reverses itself. With the spread of motor car transportation and easier living it is no job at all to take on dangerous weight at this "comfortable age."

"One of the great menaces to health," says Dr. Haven Emerson of Columbia university, "is the substitution of balloon tires for sole leather."

Causes of Stoutness.

Overeating and lack of exercise are the two things which make people fat. Some people, because of glandular or other conditions, put on more flesh than others, although they eat less food, but for them they are overeating. There is a wide divergence between the amount of food necessary to different persons. In the same way, in reducing, the decrease of food has to be fitted to the individual.

As we warned you last week, reducing is a hard job. It takes grit to go through with it. And we also advised you if you are much overweight not to go at reducing too rapidly. We repeat the warning because we know there has sprung up in recent years a good deal of quackery to meet the demand of women who want to improve their appearance quickly. The results too often are anything but that desired. Some become actually sick from the hurried régime.

For the middle aged overweight by 20 pounds and up we advise the slow method of reducing the meals gradually from one-third to one-half of what was originally considered necessary at table. They should consider an average loss of two pounds a week sufficient accomplishment.

There are younger persons living a more or less indolent life and with appetites that need no such pampering, who may be put on a strenuous diet and suffer no other discomforts than those of the curbed appetite. You will find these at almost any age from 20 up to 35, who love to eat and who hate to walk if they can ride, stand if they can sit, move if they can remain stationary. Another body privileged to enter the class of get-thin-more-quickly embraces those whose weight oscillates between normal and 10 or 12 pounds above.

Monotonous but Helpful.

The pineapple and lamb chop diet, so popular among your favorite movie stars, may be adopted. It does reduce, if you can stand the monotony of it long enough.

For breakfast the order is one lamb chop and one slice of pineapple. For luncheon two lamb chops and one slice of pineapple. For dinner two lamb chops and two slices of pineapple. Canned pineapple is used.

A number of people have substituted another breakfast for the lamb chop and pineapple slice. It consists of a glass of orange juice, cup of coffee, one slice of thin gluten bread, bran or whole wheat bread thoroughly toasted. At luncheon following, one slice of pineapple and one lamb chop is sufficient; for dinner two chops and two pineapple slices, as in the original diet. Nothing else is taken. To make it seem like a large meal you are asked to eat it slowly.

An egg and milk diet has recently been brought to my attention by a trained nurse who accomplished a 15 pound reduction thereby. An apple first thing in the morning preceded the régime mapped out by her. For breakfast she took one egg, any way but fried, and one glass of milk. For luncheon two eggs, any way but fried, and a glass of milk. For dinner three eggs and one glass of milk. Before going to bed—an apple. For five days this diet was adhered to. On the sixth and seventh she ate anything she desired that was not too fat producing.

The second week, she observed the apple, egg, and milk course for three days. She ate regularly but wisely for the other days of the week, and kept up the three day a week milk and egg consumption until she reduced the desired amount.

If You Gain Easily.

Being one of those individuals myself, whose weight is liable to take an upward trend at the slightest cessation in activities, I worked out this menu some time ago and find in two weeks I can lose six pounds quite easily.

For breakfast take a couple of tablespoonsful of bran in scalded milk from which the cream has all been removed; orange juice, one slice of toasted rye bread, very thin, a soft boiled egg, and black coffee. For luncheon a heaping big plate of combination salad [tomatoes, lettuce, and celery]. You may use French dressing meagerly spread and made with little oil, and a thin slice of toast again, or a couple of crackers. For dinner, lamb chops broiled, string beans, or spinach, or carrots, or cauliflower [any two of the green vegetables] without dressing. A salad—endive or fruit or lettuce and orange with the tiniest bit of dressing may be eaten, but no bread or potatoes. Black coffee and an apple for dessert complete the meal. I do not have the "gone" feeling in the afternoon, because I do drink a great deal of water in the course of the day.

I find myself unconsciously arising from my typewriter and mechanically walking toward the water font three or four times in an afternoon. This habit I established long ago and fortunately have never gotten over. It is valuable when you are on a reducing régime for more reasons than one. It supplies volume to the blood and prevents that gone feeling, and it acts to rid the system of waste matter, an important point not to be overlooked by those hoping to accomplish a healthy weight reduction. The bran, the salad, and the vegetables all contribute to the same healthful condition of the intestines.

Doctor's Diet.

A diet used by a prominent woman physician to reduce 25 pounds in three months is this:

BREAKFAST.
Grapefruit without sugar.
Toasted gluten bread.
Two eggs [coddled, poached, or soft boiled].
Black coffee, unsweetened.
LUNCHEON.
Salad with vinegar, salt, and pepper.
Baked apple without cream and sugar.
Toasted gluten bread.
DINNER.
Lean meat [beef or lamb, hamburg steak or dried beef].
Vegetables without butter.
Fruit without sugar.
Toasted gluten bread.
Black coffee unsweetened.

Take all the water desired between meals; all the gluten bread desired at meals.

This diet is to be rigidly adhered to for six days a week. The seventh day any food wanted is allowed, which makes this an appealing diet to the type of reducer who craves forbidden food. It must be remembered, however, that this does not mean gorging on the seventh day.

A THREE DAYS' COUGH IS YOUR DANGER SIGNAL

Persistent coughs and colds lead to serious trouble. You can stop them now with Creomulsion, an emulsified creosote that is pleasant to take. Creomulsion is a new medical discovery with two-fold action: it soothes and heals the inflamed membrances and inhibits germ growth.

Of all known drugs, creosote is recognized by high medical authorities as one of the greatest healing agencies for persistent coughs and colds and other forms of throat troubles. Creomulsion contains, in addition to creosote, other healing elements which soothe and heal the infected membranes and stop the irritation and inflammation, while the creosote goes on to the stomach, is absorbed into the blood, attacks the seat of the trouble and checks the growth of the germs.

Creomulsion is guaranteed satisfactory in the treatment of persistent coughs and colds, bronchial asthma, bronchitis and other forms of respiratory diseases, and is excellent for building up the system after colds or flu. Money refunded if any cough or cold is not relieved after taking according to directions. Ask your druggist. Creomulsion Company, Atlanta, Ga. (Adv.)

A FRIEND IN NEED

by Sally Joy Brown

I want to be the medium through which the friend in deed and the friend in need may be brought together. It may be you have some discarded article which has not outgrown its usefulness that will make some less fortunate one happy and you would gladly give it if you knew how to go about it. Write to me and I shall be happy to be of service to you. Please write on one side of the paper.

When information is wanted by mail, a stamped, addressed envelope should accompany the request. Please do not send article to The Tribune but write for the address of the applicant and send direct.

WARDING OFF DISASTER.

"I ONLY wish, Miss Brown, I had written to you before my health failed. All my illness at first was worry, because half the time we were without anything to eat and there were no clothes for the little ones."

That's a hint for cutting the misery in half, at least. If only everybody would act upon it! At first there's just a little tipping of the balance against a struggling family. It grieves the parents to see their little ones in want. They worry, get desperate, spend their nervous energy. Then sickness comes, downright collapse—and we have another case calling for heroic measures.

But we can help without expense to ourselves when the balance first tips and end these troubles before they start—just by giving articles we no longer need. I have a number of letters from people who are at the point where a little help now will prevent great misery later. And the troubles which are breaking their courage, putting them on the down grade to sickness, and destitution are so easily remedied in many cases.

Clothing your children have outgrown, discarded articles of furniture that you have put in the storeroom—haven't you something that would fit just one of these cases?

An Urgent Appeal.

"Mother M. has worked hard ever since her husband died to take care of her three children. The eldest son has now shouldered the responsibility of caring for his mother, little sister, and sick brother. The cook stove has worn out and they cannot afford to buy a new one. Does any reader have a good coal range he would be willing to offer? C. P. P."

During this extremely cold weather you who are enjoying warmth and comfort can hardly resist an appeal like this from ones less fortunate.

Too Late.

"I am a mother with a baby and could nicely use a sled, as it is awfully hard to push a buggy in the snow. Will you kindly send the address of the person who has a baby sled to give away? MRS. F. W."

This sled has been given to an earlier applicant, but perhaps there is another that some kind reader will give to you.

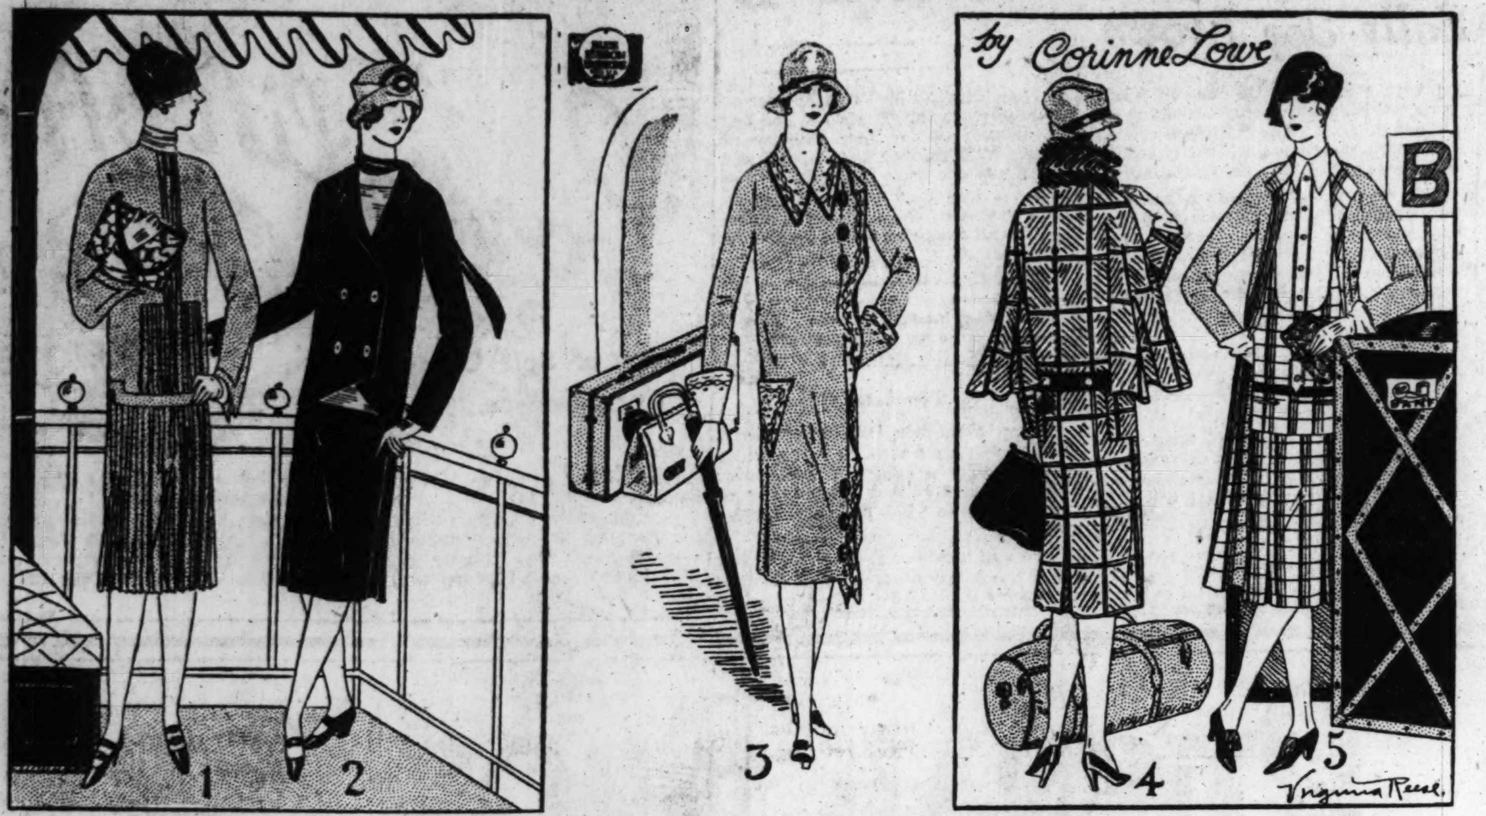
Clothes That Make Ideal Traveling Companions



When Navy blue flat crêpe meets tan flat crêpe the result, seen at the extreme left, is certainly the reverse of flat—especially when the encounter is accomplished with such subtlety of plaiting and of seam.

Next, a Cheruit tailleur of midnight blue covert cloth with white pique gilet should make this observation car the observed car.

The coat-frock pictured in the center, so rightly esteemed by every traveler, is here carried out in gray woolen with effective touches of silver quilting.

Walking around the deck should have its compensations when it can be done in a steamer coat, second from the right, of plaited tweed in beige and two tones of brown which possesses such recommendations as a striped collar of beige and brown clipped wool and cape sleeves.

Next we find the shirt bosom of which Patou is so fond exemplified in an ensemble mating dark olive green coat and a frock in brown and beige plait.

NEW YORK.—[Special Correspondence.]—Unless your chosen form of transit be the aeroplane, the traveling rug, or the Alaska dog sledge, I really can't see that there is any special category of "traveling clothes." More and more, in fact, the transcontinental trains and the trans-Atlantic steamers resemble hotels and those who voyage upon them wear exactly the same things which they might if they were sojourning at a hotel.

There is one difference, however. Go into the dining car and you find most women attired as they might be for the Ritz. On the other hand, if you wander into the dining salon, you are likely to find nearly every sister in sports clothes. From this it is immediately apparent that, whereas the train correspondents in its sartorial demands to a city hotel, the great ocean grayhound is, in spirit, a resort hostelry.

But, although this old myth of "traveling clothes" is losing its hold upon us, although the modern system of transit doesn't requisition many other costumes than those which we need for street or sports, the subject continues to be treated respectfully by almost all fashion experts. And from time to time I receive in my mail some such communication as this: "I am going to Europe. Will you please tell me what I shall need for the steamer?"

In deference to tradition, I am taking up this venerable subject today and my group of sketches is devoted to various possibilities of attire for the prospective traveler. Taking these up in orderly fashion, we come first to the little crêpe frock at the left.

Now, dark crêpe, as we all know, is as practical for travel as is a letter of credit. This particular model would be excellent for a long trip on the train and it's exactly the sort of thing which we might choose for the embarking or disembarking moments of a steamer journey.

What makes this little model so awfully smart? Well, I wish all examination papers were so easy. It's the arrangement of the plaits. This, together with the fact that our French frock of flat crêpe is carried out in two tones, is responsible for its air of distinction.

I really don't think anything else except profiles contrive to be so various as the types of plaited crêpe frocks suitable for travel. Many of such models marshal their trucks in the geometric effects so beloved of Vionnet, and, even when the result is not something familiar to the geometry class, the plaiting usually gets its effectiveness from cross currents. In this model the only opposition offered to the diagonal course of plaits is undertaken by the choker collar, which chooses to run its ornamentation horizontally. That slight argument, however, makes for variety, a variety otherwise upheld by the irregularity of the vestee.

Suits are always good for travel, especially that which takes place on land. Who can doubt it after seeing that photograph of our fascinating Gloria Swanson, in which she appears on the observation car in a tailleur with short, mannish jacket? For, after all, sisters, Gloria has her own individual French dressmaker, just as most of us have our own individual toothbrushes.

Second from the left we are showing one of the new ideas on the subject of tailored suits. This originated with Cheruit and is here developed in covert cloth, which may be either in natural tone or in midnight blue. The smart features of this model consist of the double breasted jacket with its upward closing, and of a white piqué waistcoat. In the back you will find a narrow belt held at the right side by a buckle.

The skirt of this Cheruit tailleur happens to have a double set of inverted plaits at each side. This brings us to some new and electrifying news about jacket suits. You know O'Rossen, the king of Paris suitmakers? Well, O'Rossen has just made up for the spring season a number of jaunty models with perfectly plain skirt. Not a single godet appears in these and their straight line is sustained by short jackets, which are often completed by that familiar apparition, the string belt.

There seems to be no doubt about it. The suit is coming back this spring to resume its old position in society. It is being made up in all the familiar mannish mixtures, and it is also emphasized in navy blue and a light gray. Of course, the browns and beiges are never allowed to languish, but one can't sing too often, "The gray dawn is breaking"—rather, "breaking in." In wraps and suits, in street frocks and afternoon models, one is destined to enjoy the society of this neutral tint.

Our central sketch represents a coat frock. Here is the occasion for a panegyric. I have a friend who went abroad last summer with quite a collection of new French costumes. When she got back she said, "I might have left everything else at home except that coat dress of the mannish mixture. I simply lived in it." And this woman's experience is almost universal. Easy to get into as a sewing circle and therefore made to resist the motion of train or boat, it is as ideal a traveling companion as a hot water bottle. And then when one gets off steamer or car it continues to befriend us in the same old way.

The model which we show is of gray kasha with silver embroidery. Or it may be of navy rep with metallic embroidery, or of alpaca or mohair with colored embroidery. O, yes, this is a broad minded model and the fact of it is that a certain fashionable debutante who has just gone south had the identical frock made up in Shantung in a crushed rose tint against which the embroideries appeared in darker rose.

They are not, by the way, just ordinary embroideries. Not at all. They simulate quilting. In fact, what well bred stichedy nowadays does not?

O, yes, you may wear an ensemble on your jaunt! It goes without saying that an extra wrap will have to be booked along, but at least that coat of your ensemble will keep out the wintry blast of critcism. You are a well dressed woman and you prove it.

One conception of the traveling ensemble is found at the extreme right in a costume embracing a frock of novelty woolen in checked design and a coat of plain color cloth lined with the dress material. The coat is a dark olive green, while the checks are executed in brown and beige. Further friendship between the two garments is cemented by a bit of dark green sud.

The salient features about this ensemble is that mannish shirt bosom developed in white tub silk. This is a Patou detail. In fact, the frock gives other signs of being a Patou adaptation. Be that as it may, M. Patou seems to be clinging to the bosom of fashion and similar drifts of white are found on many of his mid-season street frocks. For example, there is one awfully chic little navy rep street frock of his which owes its completing charm to the white shirt bosom.

No this is not practical detail for the ordinary traveler. The o. t. would more wisely elect a costume which cannot be betrayed by any touch of lingerie. Yet certainly nobody can dispute the smartness of Patou's white shirt bosom.

As to the steamer coat, I find its dignity is often reduced to the leopard or raccoon which one wears to a football game. Yet there are steamer coats and those who take the Mediterranean cruise or are planning a trip to the orient certainly won't regret honoring this familar obligation.

Plaits and capes. One might just as well be telegraphic and communicate most of one's information about steamer coats in two words. Many of the coats designed for this service have the inevitable shoulder cape. And quite a few of the capes have no coat at all. They are just great full length affairs of tweed.

We owe to one of the 5th avenue specialty shops the model low tweed in beige and two darker tones of brown which is sketched second from the right. This restrains the cape to sleeve drapedries which are bridged by a belt of shining brown leather with two white bone buttons. There are patch pockets starting under the belt, and the last touch is achieved by a collar of clipped wool arranged in light and dark stripes.

You will notice that an inverted plait, starting up at the shoulder line of this coat, is released below the pockets. This method is pursued sucessfully in numerous coat models, both steamer and sports. Some of the most stunning ones have neither cape nor belt and the plait, released almost as soon as it starts, produces the celebrated shoulder flare coat.

Drink Hot Water! Have Rosy Cheeks and a Peachy Skin

Says we will both look and feel clean, sweet and fresh and avoid illness.

To see the tinge of healthy bloom in your face, to see your skin get clearer and clearer, to wake up without a headache, backache, coated tongue or a nasty breath, in fact, to feel your best, day in and day out, just try inside bathing every morning for one week.

Before breakfast each day drink a glass of real hot water with a little Jad Salts in it as a harmless means of washing from the entire system the previous day's indigestible waste, sour bile and toxins; thus cleansing, sweetening and purifying the entire alimentary canal before putting more food into the stomach. The action of hot water and Jad Salts on an empty stomach is wonderfully invigorating. It cleans out all the sour fermentations, gases and acidity and gives one a splendid appetite for breakfast.

Get about 4 ounces of Jad Salts at the drug store. It is sufficient to demonstrate that just as soap and hot water cleanses, sweetens and freshens the skin, so hot water and Jad Salts act on the blood and internal organs. Those who are subject to constipation, bilious attacks, acid stomach, rheumatic twinges, also those whose skin is sallow and complexion pallid, are assured that one week of inside bathing will have them both looking and feeling better in every way. "Prove this by a test. The coupon will bring you a trial of Jad Salts. Clip it now."

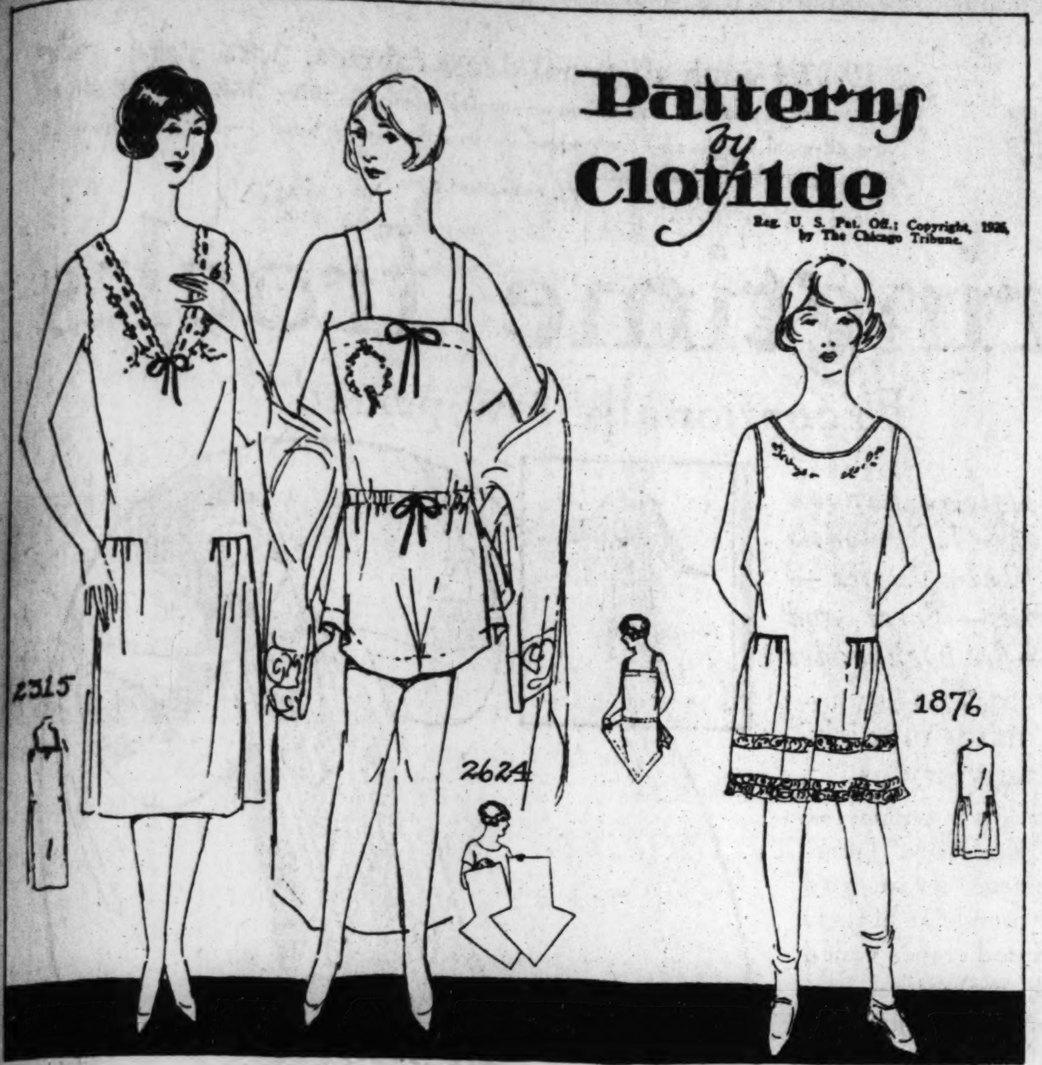
Patterns by Clotilde

Reg. U. S. Pat. Off.; Copyright, 1926, by The Chicago Tribune.



2315—Woman's and misses' slip. Sizes 16 years and 36, 38, 40, 42, 44 and 46 inches bust measure. Size 36 requires 2⅝ yards of 36 or 40 inch material. The hot iron transfer, 713, comes in blue only and costs 15 cents extra.

2624—Woman's and misses' combination undergarment. Sizes 16 years, 36, 38, 40 and 42 inches bust measure. Size 36 requires 2¼ yards of 40 inch material.

1876—Girl's slip. Sizes 4, 6, 8, 10, 12 and 14 years. Size 8 requires 1¾ yards of 36 inch material.

HOW TO USE THE PATTERNS

SLIPS are a necessary part of every woman's wardrobe, and pattern No. 2315 is an excellent one, and can be used numberless times. These slips may be made of wash satin, crêpe de chine, radium silk or one of the lovely crêpes. Then, too, it is fine to have some made of cambric or other wash material to wear under morning dresses at home. The bottom of the skirt, instead of having a straight hemmed edge, may be cut in points, or round or oval scallops. This sort of edge should be finished with a rolled hem, and the lace insertion and edging gathered to it. The lace should not be set on full—just full enough so it will lie flat around the curves or points.

Lace medallions or rows of insertion set in horizontally will make the top of the camisole pretty. The shoulder straps may be made of the material with hemstitched edges; or ribbon one and one-half inches wide, or lace insertion may be used.

If the slip is cut to go over the shoulders, and the neck cut round across the back and in rather a deep "V" in the front, it will be necessary to work eyelets at regular intervals around the neck, through which ribbon may be run. Or the neck may be finished with lace beading and edging. One rarely sees these slips with anything but shoulder straps; but the other way will allow the garment to hold in place over the shoulders, and not slip and show, as straps often do.

Where the fullness comes over the sides, the edge to be gathered should be started at the end nearest the middle, with as narrow a margin as possible, only growing to one-quarter of an inch wide at the outer edge. The next step is to cut a strip long enough to extend beyond each edge after the turning in has been done; and wide enough to cover the seam well. This is basted in position on the wrong side of the slip and stitched. Then a similar piece is set on the right side. Machine hemstitching is the most satisfactory finish—having the hemstitching go around the four edges. The top of the camisole may be finished with a hemstitched hem or casing, through which a rather wide ribbon is run.

The pattern for the young girl's slip—No. 1876—is cut much like pattern No. 2315; and is suitable for any of the materials mentioned in describing the other one. There are perforations at the top for a round neckline and short shoulder seams, or for a straight top, finished with shoulder straps. China silk or crêpe de chine make attractive looking slips for girls. Well made, of good material, these slips are pretty, with no trimming other than the necessary hemstitching.

For every day wear a light weight easy to handle, being cut in two pieces as the small cuts show. The top part sateen wouldn't be a bad material.

Making lingerie is fascinating work, and particularly so when using so pretty a pattern as No. 2624. It is forms a long waisted camisole, with shoulder straps, and the lower part forms envelope drawers. A casing is attached where the camisole ends, and a hem finishes this garment across the top; through the casing an elastic should be run; and through the hem a ribbon would add to the attractiveness of the whole.

The embroidery pattern, No. 709, would be pretty, and would not take long to make. There is nothing lovelier than silk crêpe for lingerie, although georgette and other materials are liked by many. The manner of cutting the lower part gives the fashionable flare.

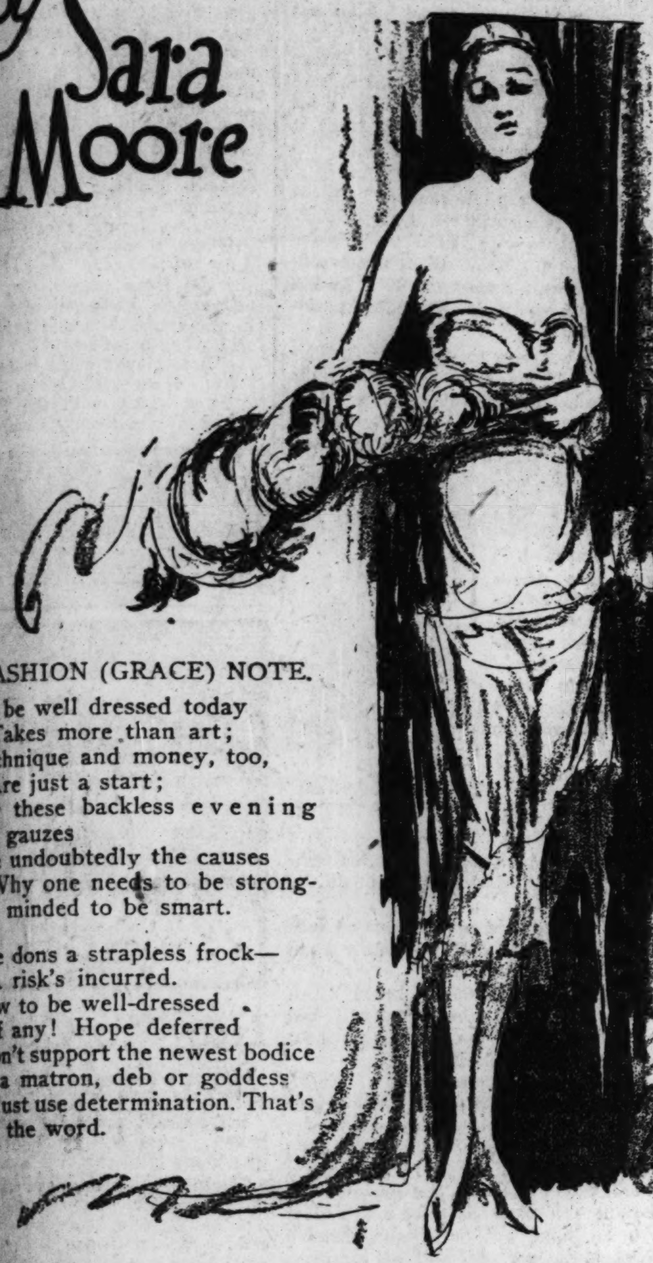
MAIDEN MEDITATIONS

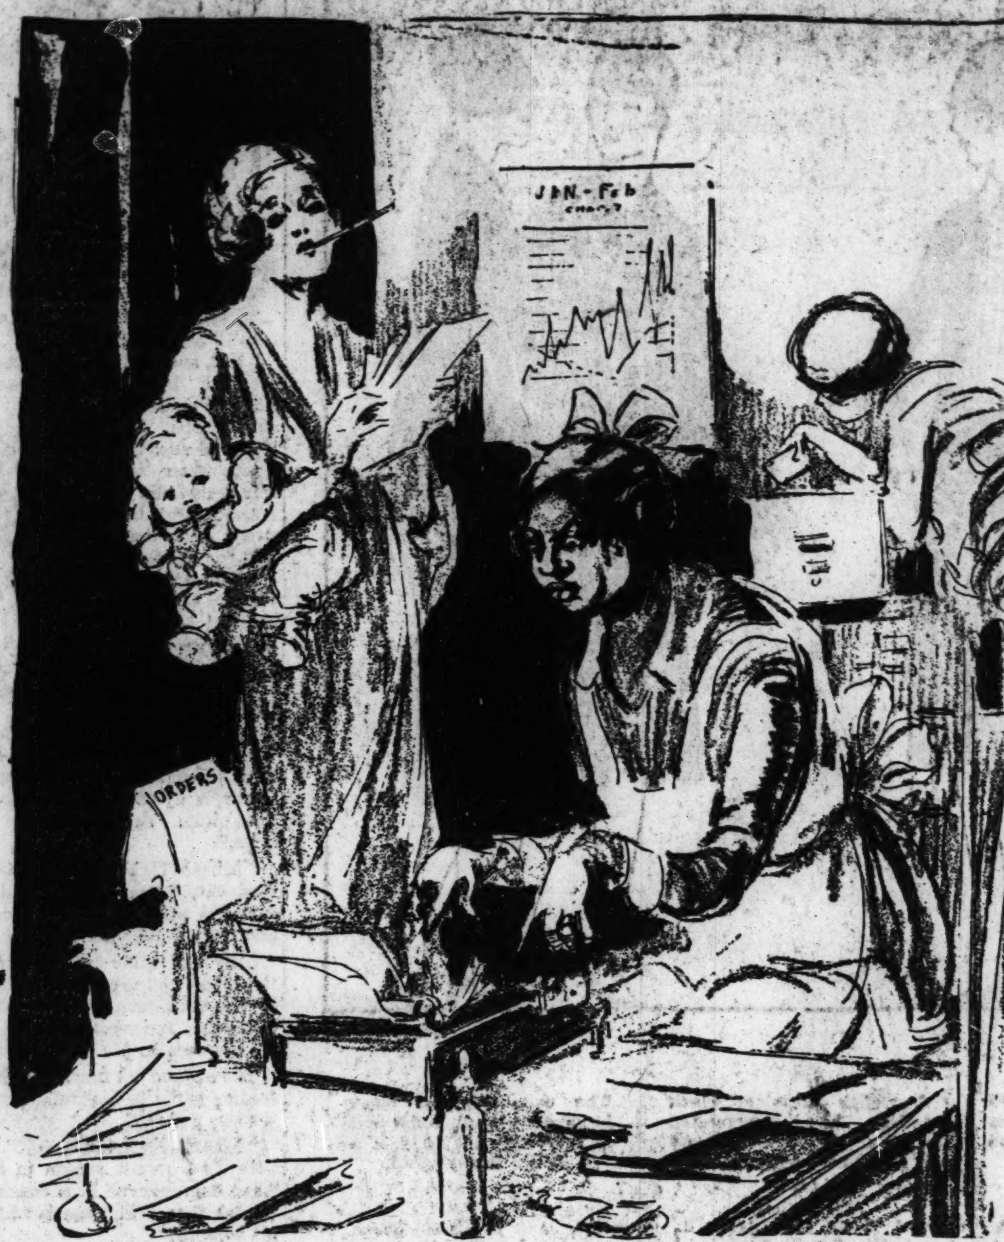
by Sara Moore



FASHION (GRACE) NOTE.

To be well dressed today
 Takes more than art;
Technique and money, too,
 Are just a start;
For these backless evening gauzes
Are undoubtedly the causes
 Why one needs to be strong-minded to be smart.

One dons a strapless frock—
 A risk's incurred.
How to be well-dressed
 If any! Hope deferred
Won't support the newest bodice
So a matron, deb or goddess
 Must use determination. That's the word.



THE PERFECT HOME.

"System. That's the only way
One should run a house today.
Like a business. Have a plan."
Thus stormed Dad—misguided man.

Now for extra spoons, you see,
He makes out form two-two-three;
Requisition for a tow'l
On the wrong blank brings a scowl.

"Coffee cold? Why, I do not Find, on file, requests for hot;
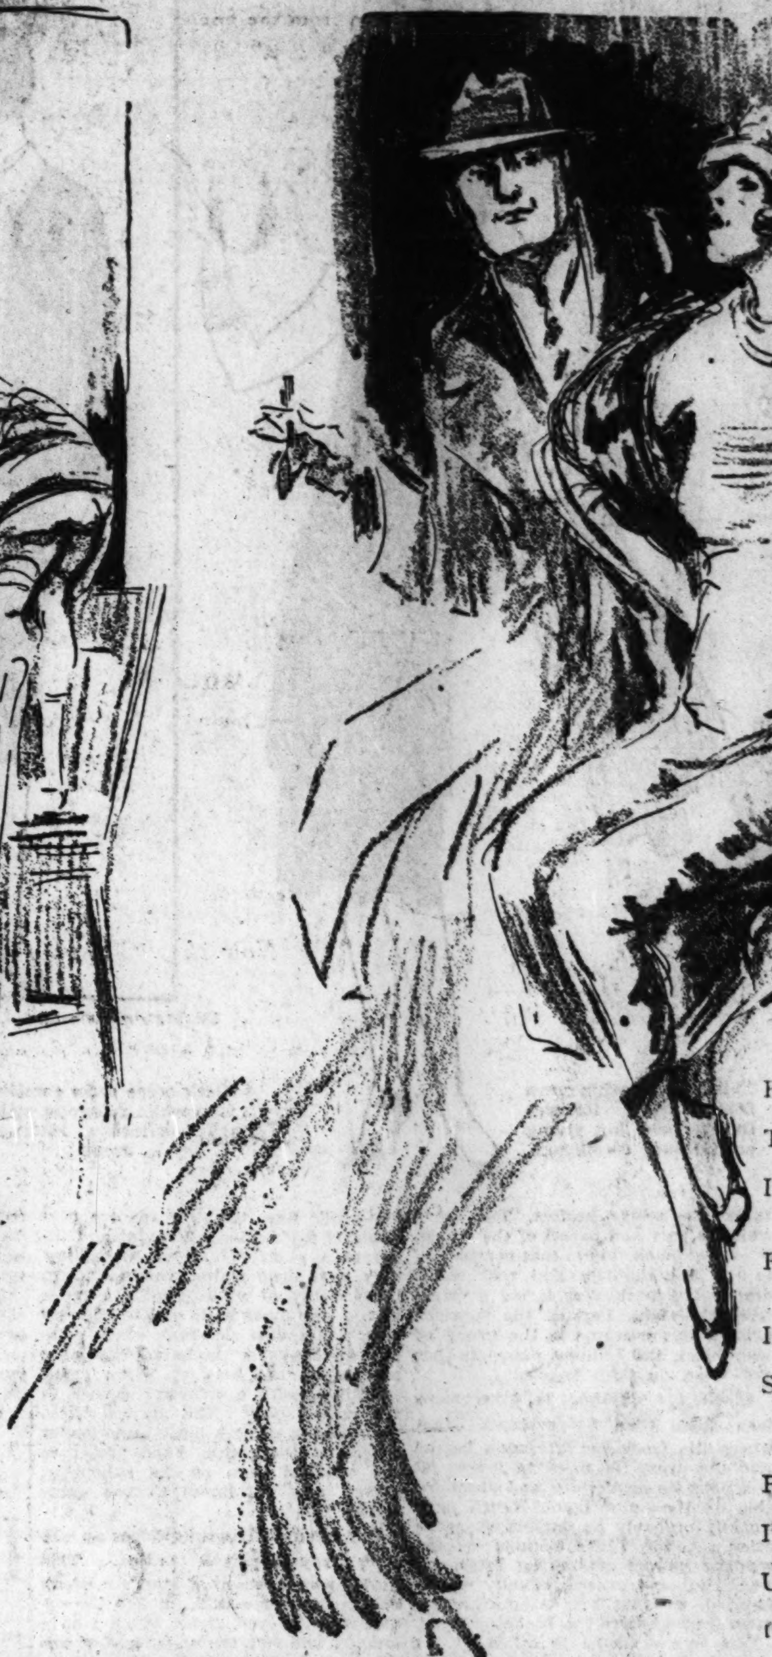
Send complaint with returned cup
And I will take the matter up."

Then mother calls a secretary,
Dictates, "Memo. Have young Jerry
Wash out his ears," and "Memo, John;
Be sure to put your rubbers on."



CHOICE.

Freddie T. had family and many millions, too.
There were other suitors that my parents thought might do.
I've even had proposals from dukes—princes, not a few!

Folks spent years, tears, time, cash and love in putting me across.
I stand, from bob to patent pumps, to them, a total loss.
Smashed are their plans and hopes and hearts. I showed 'em who was boss.

Pride of caste and fine ideals—all rare things at command—
I'd rather have excitement. So I've just bestowed my hand
Upon a Bowery bartender who owns a big jazz band.

The Last Word in Paris Fashions

BLACK HAS COME BACK.

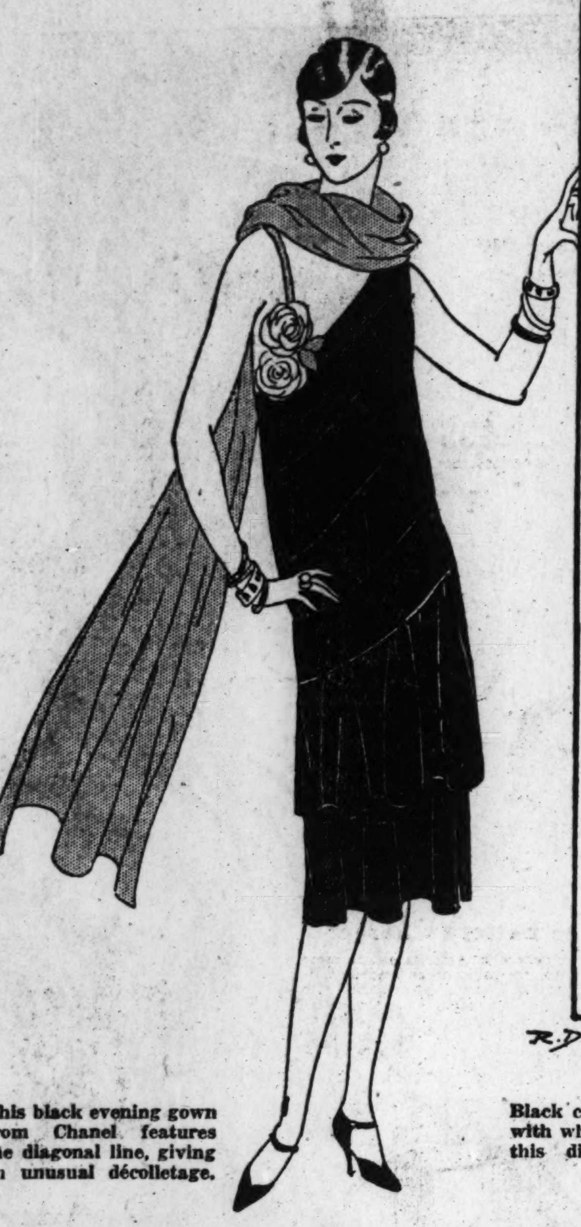
By Bettina Bedwell.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

PARIS.—[Special Correspondence.]—It's in again—black. The Parisienne, who is as astute as she is gay, can tell you the reason. Black is intriguing, and it is the most adaptable of all colors. Black does nice things for fat women, and it makes slenderness as delightful as a flower stem. Black is appropriate. It appears gay and sophisticated at weddings, and properly doleful at funerals. One is always well dressed in black. That is, of course, if it's right. The smartest women you see in Paris today—the truly distinguished ones that merit the sincere flattery of imitation—are wearing black. They are wearing it alone, with only the faint alluring distraction of dull beige stockings and suede gloves, and they are wearing it touched up with happy, scintillating bits of color, or pure and dainty in combination with white.

They are especially and particularly wearing black with beige, for daytime. The all-black coat is fashionable. The black coat with beige fur trimming is even more fashionable. There is black and black. Black is all things to all women. Vampires always wear it. So does the beautiful and noble woman. So does the dowdy. But we are talking of smart black. The worst sin of black is a certain rusty quality it sometimes assumes. Paris couturiers are taking care to eliminate this, for the fashionable black of today is a softly shimmering, live sort of black—the black of crêpe satin, the black of velvet, and the black of satiny broadcloth. No chance of dinginess at all in these fabrics. And then the lines! Those natural figure lines that characterize the newest of modes are in no other shade so beautifully exploited and expressed.

Black never appears flip, garish, or too obvious. To the Parisienne it is quality. It is practical, and she loves the durable. It is mysterious, and she revels in this quality. It is either sad or gay, and this suits also her many moods. It is the Parisienne herself, her inherent taste and love of the suitable that has brought this shade back to a preëminent place in the mode today.



This black evening gown from Chanel features the diagonal line, giving an unusual décolletage.

A girlish dress of black taffeta has exaggerated sleeves, lace trimmed, and is banded with gold leather.

The cape coat of black broadcloth, with collar cut in one with its cape is a smart street wrap.

For evening it is perennially smart. This season black is particularly favored for the gay soirée, particularly and especially black velvet. This fabric, in its new, almost chiffon delicacy, is going to be worn right up to the time when summer makes it impossible. That is a long way off. Evening wraps of black velvet, with fluffy collars of fox, or even the humble sheep, are preferred above everything else for Paris affairs, and evening gowns of black velvet are the choicest of the chic. Our first model shows you the most beautiful of such evening gowns. It was worn at the Embassy club on New Year's eve. Only Chanel could have conceived that perfect combination of slim, straight diagonal lines that mark the bodice, and those flaring diagonal flounces that make the skirt. The décolletage is particularly notable and it makes the high point of the diagonal lines of the gown. On the left shoulder the diagonal lines of front and back converge, and a slim strap holds the bodice in place under the right shoulder. The two rose and metal flowers placed at the base of this strap are little inconsequential touches that make the whole perfect. The scarf, which is part and parcel of the whole, is a bit of black chiffon that is attached to the left shoulder and that softly drapes the neck and forms a panel from the right. Part of the supreme chic of this costume is the group of wide black and brilliant bracelets that are worn on both wrists.

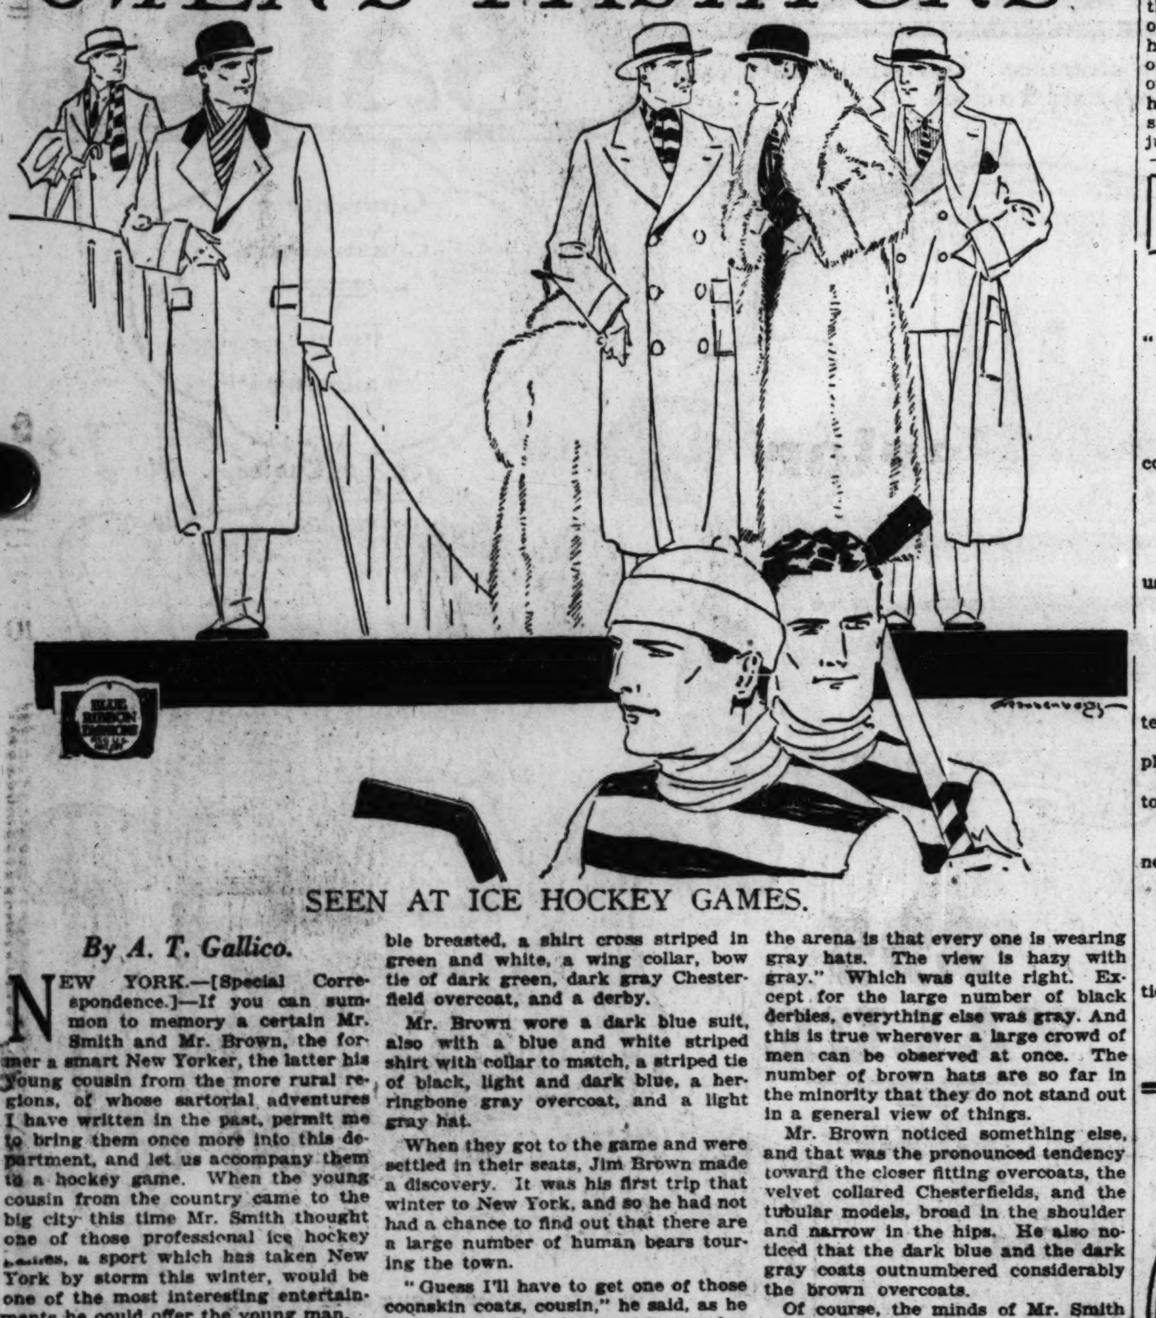
Black for daytime is even more fashionable than for evening. Just where the frock for afternoon begins and the dress for morning leaves off is a point as mysterious and unattainable as the snow bound south pole. This is probably an imaginary point after all, for I see notable women wearing jumper dresses for afternoon weddings, and others, equally distinguished, wearing lace trimmed crêpe satin frocks before the luncheon hour.

Our second model is called by its creator—Redfern—an afternoon dress. It is, however, entirely appropriate for petit dejeneur at 10 in the morning. It is simply an excellent example of the black frock for any daylight hour. Made of black crêpe satin, this dress has a blouse that follows the lines of the body, and that blouses softly at its low girdle line. The sleeves are particularly interesting. Straight and fitted to a point just below the elbow they have deep plaited ruffles and an inner sleeve of white crêpe georgette, with a tiny black satin wrist band and bow, and double rick-rack edged cuffs that almost cover the hand. The gilet and collar are also of white crêpe georgette, with a rick-rack border to the ruffled gilet. The draped girdle is becoming to both large and slender hips, and the plaited skirt preserves the straight lines of the silhouette, giving ample fullness at the same time.

Our third model reintroduces an old-time favorite—black taffeta. This model was worn by a slim American debutante at the Ritz. It has the exaggerated sleeves, about which I have already told you, the upper half of taffeta, and the lower puffs of beige lace. Phillippe et Gaston, who created this model, have given it a charming triple waist line of three rows of scallops, achieved in gold leather, and the bottom of the skirt is also piped and scalloped in gold leather. The taffeta collar and closing are edged with narrow ruffles of gold lace. Here black is used in its most youthful guise, and no more appropriate gown for the debutante can be conceived.

The final, and fourth model, is a cape coat that caused even the blasé lunchers at the Ritz to turn around and admire. The costume entire is a perfect example of the new vogue for black. The coat, with its fitted hip-deep cape and negligible collar, is of black broadcloth, without deviation of color. The crunched Gigolo hat is of black felt, with only a rhinestone pin for trimming. The pumps are of black antelope, simple and unadorned, and it is only the dull beige silk stockings and the slip-on beige suede gloves that give any relief from the all-black combination.

MEN'S FASHIONS



SEEN AT ICE HOCKEY GAMES.

By A. T. Gallico.

NEW YORK.—[Special Correspondence.]—If you can summon to memory a certain Mr. Smith and Mr. Brown, the former a smart New Yorker, the latter his young cousin from the more rural regions, of whose sartorial adventures I have written in the past, permit me to bring them once more into this department, and let us accompany them to a hockey game. When the young cousin from the country came to the big city this time Mr. Smith thought one of those professional ice hockey games, a sport which has taken New York by storm this winter, would be one of the most interesting entertainments he could offer the young man.

When Mr. Smith told Jim Brown he was going to a hockey game, Jim began to get out his skating outfit, woolen gloves, woolen cap, and all. But Mr. Smith soon persuaded him that, since the game was to be indoors, he would not need to look like an Eskimo on vacation in New York, but that the smartly turned out men who attended these games did so in the same kind of clothes they would wear to the theater.

"Except," said Mr. Smith, "that you won't see much evening dress. The opening night of the hockey matches, there was plenty of dressing, but at the ordinary game you will find mostly sack suits."

Mr. Smith that evening wore a smartly tailored suit of dark blue, double breasted, a shirt cross striped in green and white, a wing collar, bow tie of dark green, dark gray Chesterfield overcoat, and a derby.

Mr. Brown wore a dark blue suit, also with a blue and white striped shirt with collar to match, a striped tie of black, light and dark blue, a herringbone gray overcoat, and a light gray hat.

When they got to the game and were settled in their seats, Jim Brown made a discovery. It was his first trip that winter to New York, and so he had not had a chance to find out that there are a large number of human bears touring the town.

"Guess I'll have to get one of those coonskin coats, cousin," he said, as he looked around and saw any number of them in the arena. "I thought you said I shouldn't look like an Eskimo. What do you call them?"

"Well, it's a good thing there aren't many more of them here," answered his cousin, "for if there were there wouldn't be room in a row of seats unless each coonskin coat wearer bought two seats. However, there's no doubt about the popularity and stylishness of a coonskin coat, as you can judge from this gathering of well dressed men, and if you will notice the coon coat is usually accompanied by a derby, and very often by a stick."

"There may be a lot of derbies," returned young Mr. Brown, "but it seems to me the impression one gets from looking over the sea of hats in the arena is that every one is wearing gray hats. The view is hazy with gray." Which was quite right. Except for the large number of black derbies, everything else was gray. And this is true wherever a large crowd of men can be observed at once. The number of brown hats are so far in the minority that they do not stand out in a general view of things.

Mr. Brown noticed something else, and that was the pronounced tendency toward the closer fitting overcoats, the velvet collared Chesterfields, and the tubular models, broad in the shoulder and narrow in the hips. He also noticed that the dark blue and the dark gray coats outnumbered considerably the brown overcoats.

Of course, the minds of Mr. Smith and Mr. Brown were not always on the sartorial equipment of the crowds at the hockey game. But the young man from the country could not help taking in the clothes, his trips to New York not being frequent.

In between the periods of the game, when they weren't watching the fancy skaters, Mr. Smith and Mr. Brown amused themselves by picking out the best dressed men in the audience. "That's what I call a smart getup," said the younger man, pointing to a man in a blue Chesterfield coat and a derby. And he was right. Under the overcoat could be seen a gray herring bone suit of medium shade, a blue and white striped shirt, and a blue tie of solid color. His muffler was of blue and gray stripes.

ISN'T IT ODD

by William Atherton Du Puy

ISN'T it odd that one class of individuals that goes to make up the animal kingdom, the mammals, should wear its skeleton on the inside of its body, while another class, the insects, should wear its skeleton on the outside!

The mammals put their bones underneath and stretch their muscles over them to work the pulleys that make motion possible. The insects put the hard substance on the outside, make it up into hollow joints like stovepipe, and run their ropes that work the levers through on the inside.

In each case the ropes pull the levers that produce motion. It would be hard to say which scheme is most successful. When the greyhound pursues the rabbit both animals give evidence of the possibilities that lie in the scheme of hidden skeletons. When the grasshopper leaps high into the air he demonstrates the workability of the scheme of inside pulleys. If a cow could drive herself as well in proportion to her size she would come near actually jumping over the moon.

The mammals, with man as their master product, regard themselves as being superior to the insects. If one could get the viewpoint of the insect, however, the thing would probably look quite different.

On this matter of the placement of the skeleton, for instance, the insect would probably regard the mammal as no less than silly. It would point to the fact that the flesh, the muscles, are tender, are subject to injury, may be torn by any brier. They require protection. They protect it by putting it inside. The skeleton, on the contrary, is hard. It cannot be pricked or torn. It does not bleed on contact with thorns. It needs no protection from contact with a rough edged world.

Man, the insect would say, is most foolish to put his tender side out and cover that side which is rugged and tough. The insect is wiser. The crust is on the outside and it can be injured only by a force big enough actually to crush it.

"We must eat to live and live to eat."

"The butcher, the baker, the candlestick maker."

"Hell is paved with good intentions."

"Virtue is its own reward."

"God helps them that help themselves."

"Laugh and be fat."

ANSWERS.

Sentence errors:

1. "Between you and me," not "Between you and I," is correct usage.
2. "Tell him to hurry," not "them." "Any one," the antecedent, is singular and must be followed by a singular pronoun.
3. "It is a scene never to be forgotten," is correct. Never split infinitives.
4. "What have you in the way of new fiction?" is correct. Omit "got."
5. "I am the man whom you sent for," is correct. The objective pronoun is "whom." It is incorrect to use "who," which is nominative.
6. "Will you lend me the book?" is correct. Loan is a noun and cannot be used as a verb.

Quotations:

1. Fielding.
2. Old Mother Hubbard.
3. Samuel Johnson.
4. Prior (Imitations of Horace).
5. Benjamin Franklin (Maxims to Poor Richard's Almanac).

MR. NICKELDICK'S

COUSIN BITEUS

BY WM. DONAHEY

THE colored cat had just finished beating the frosting for a cake when there was a loud ring at the front door. She quickly licked the beater and hurried to answer the ring.

A huge rabbit stood on the porch. He carried a small traveling bag and a large amount of self-satisfaction.

"Does Mr. Alexander Nickeldick live here?" he asked.

"Yas, suh; he do," answered the colored cat, "but we all don't need nothin' this mahning, suh." She was about to close the door when the rabbit put one of his big feet between the door and the casing.

Feeding garlic to his Italian goldfish.

"Daughter of licorice," exclaimed the rabbit, glaring at the colored cat, "I am no agent, as you suppose me to be! I am none other than J. Biteus Tightem. Your master, child of ebony, is my cousin, and I have come to visit him. Announce me, midnight belle."

"Mistah Tightem, suh," said the colored cat, "step right into de pahlah, suh. Ah will acclimate Mistah Nickeldick of yo' pussonal presence, suh."

Tilly was rather peeved at the names the rabbit had called her, so she showed him to the most uncomfortable chair in the parlor and went away to announce his presence to Mr. Nickeldick.

The colored cat found Mr. Nickeldick feeding garlic to his Italian gold fish in the sun parlor.

"Mistah Nickeldick, suh," she said, "there's a rabbit pusson in de pahlah what done say he is a cousin of yo's. Mistah Biteus Tightem is what he says his name is."

"Biteus Tightem!" exclaimed Mr. Nickeldick, puckering up his ears and thinking deeply. "Tightem? Tightem? I don't know of any cousin by the name of Tightem. Show him in, Tilly, and I'll be right down."

"Mistah Nickeldick, suh, he's done been showed in," answered the colored cat. "He's in de pahlah."

Mr. Nickeldick quickly washed his paws in scented soap and hurried down to the parlor.

Mr. Tightem had removed his shoes and was lying on the davenport eating. There were orange peelings on the floor.

"Greetings, Cousin Alexander!" he cried, reaching out his hand. "I'm J. Biteus Tightem. Never met you before, but I've heard so much about you I feel as though I had known you all my life. I'm your sister's husband's uncle's wife's nephew."

"I'm glad to see you," answered Mr. Nickeldick, politely "I see you're making yourself at home."

"You seem to have a comfortable place here, Cousin Alexander, so I thought I would spend a few days with you," said Biteus, brushing some orange peelings off his vest.

"I'd be glad to have you stop for a few days," answered Mr. Nickeldick. "I'll have Tilly air out the guest chamber and you can make yourself comfortable."

"Has the bed got box springs on it?" asked Biteus.

"The latest box springs and also a soft hair mattress," answered Mr. Nickeldick.

"That's fine!" exclaimed Biteus, pulling off his collar and tossing it on the center table. "I can't sleep on anything but the best of beds."

In a few hours Mr. Tightem was thoroughly at home. He found Mr. Nickeldick's lavender dressing gown just fitted him, and he liked Mr. Nickeldick's cigars. He told Tilly he liked his carrots well done and that he always had his breakfast served in bed.

"Lawsey me!" grumbled the colored cat to herself. "Ah 'speck dat Biteus pusson will be askin' me fo' to do his breathin' fo' him befo' long. No, suh! Ah don't do no breathin' fo' dat snubbledump. Ah is gwine fo' to save my bref fo' to tell him what Ah done think of him when Ah done git de chance."

Mr. Nickeldick was somewhat annoyed at the free and easy way Mr. Tightem made himself at home, but he was exceedingly polite and he did not want to be rude to a guest.

He didn't like the idea of Biteus wearing his dressing gown, and he said nothing when Mr. Tightem smoked his cigars, but Mr. Nickeldick did think it was rather rude of his guest to use his toothbrush.

"Why, Cousin Alexander!" Biteus exclaimed in surprise when Mr. Nickeldick spoke to him about it. "We're cousins, aren't we? What's a toothbrush between cousins? If I had a toothbrush you would be perfectly welcome to it."

Biteus was hurt to think Mr. Nickeldick should speak to him about the toothbrush, and he wouldn't talk to his cousin for two days. He ate all his meals out of the ice chest and made faces at Mr. Nickledick when his back was turned.

Ate all his meals out of the ice chest.

Presently his grudge disappeared and he began to wear Mr. Nickledick's neckties and socks.

"Cousin Alexander," Biteus said one day to Mr. Nickledick, "I don't like your shirts—they're a size and a half too small for me."

Mr. Nickeldick almost lost his temper. He bit his whiskers and left the room.

"Tilly," he said as he stamped into the kitchen, "I—I—I just can't stand that Biteus another day."

"Lawsey me, Mistah Nickeldick! Ah don't like dat pusson mahself, but sometimes we all have to put up a lot with our blood relations."

"But he's no blood relation of mine!" exclaimed Mr. Nickeldick. "He's just a cousin or something by marriage.

"O," grunted the colored cat, "dat's different! Yo' all can't do nothin' much about blood relations, but marriage relations can done be devo'ced, and if Ah all have yo' permission, Mistah Nickeldick, suh, Ah will be gratificationed to devo'ce dis Biteus pusson from yo' presence."

"But, Tilly, I wouldn't want you to be rude."

"No, suh, Mistah Nickeldick. Ah is sometimes turrible, but Ah is nevah rude. Yo' all jus' traipse down to de club fo' a couple of hours, and when yo' all return de devo'ce will all be ovah."

It was just two hours later when Mr. Nickeldick returned from the club.

"Is he gone, Tilly?" asked Mr. Nickeldick anxiously when the colored cat opened the door.

"Mistah Nickeldick, suh," answered Tilly, "yo' all have been devo'ced fo' one hour and fifty-fo' minutes."

"How did you get rid of him, Tilly?" asked Mr. Nickeldick.

"Mistah Nickeldick, suh," smiled the colored cat, "Ah jus' put a little molasses on de handle of mah wooden 'tater mashah and waded right into yo' ex-cousin. He done take de hint quickly, and yo' is free."

"Why did you put molasses on the handle of your potato masher?" asked Mr. Nickeldick.

"Mistah Nickeldick, suh, so it wouldn't slip."

$5 Apiece for Bright Sayings

Ruth had always wanted a baby sister, but when the stork brought her a brother she showed no disappointment and showered him with all sorts of love and attention.

When he was about two and she was six they had spent the morning playing with some neighbors' children, who were both girls. The other of the two girls gave Donald an extra pat and said what a fine boy he was. Thereupon they began the discussion of the merits of boys and girls, so Mrs. D. suggested that they exchange—that Ruth take Baby Harriet and she take Donald, as they had always wanted a boy.

Ruth studied soberly for a minute, and then said: "If it was anybody else but Donald I would."

How To Quickly Stop Bad Coughs

It is often surprising how quickly the heaviest cough disappears when treated by a remarkable new method.

Here is the method, based on the famous Dr. King's New Discovery for Coughs. You simply take one teaspoonful and hold it in your throat for 15 or 20 seconds before swallowing it. The prescription has a double action. It not only soothes and heals irritation, but also loosens and removes the phlegm and congestion which are the real cause of the coughing. So the severest cough soon disappears completely.

Dr. King's New Discovery is for coughs, chest colds, bronchitis, spasmodic croup, etc. Fine for children, too—no harmful drugs. Very economical, as the dose is only one teaspoonful. At all good druggists. Ask for Women Need a Mild Laxative -Not a "Physic"

Countless girls and women now know how foolish and needless it is to "purge" and "physic" themselves to avoid sick headache, dizziness, biliousness, sallow skin, colds, or sour, gassy stomach.

They have found that Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin helps to establish natural bowel "regularity" even for those heretofore chronically constipated. Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin not only causes a gentle, easy bowel movement but, best of all, it never gripes, sickens or upsets the most delicate girl or woman. Besides, it is absolutely harmless and so pleasant that even a cross, feverish bilious, sick child gladly takes it.

Buy a large 60-cent bottle at any store that sells medicine and just see for yourself.

Blackheads Go Quick By This Simple Method

Blackheads—big ones or little ones—soft ones or hard ones—on any part of the body, go quick by a simple method that just dissolves them. To do this get about two ounces of Calonite powder from your druggist—sprinkle a little on a hot, wet cloth—rub over the blackheads briskly for a few seconds—and wash off. You'll wonder where the blackheads have gone. Pinching and squeezing blackheads only open the pores of the skin and leave them large and unsightly—while the simple application of Calonite powder and the water dissolves them right out, leaving the skin soft and the pores in their natural condition.

TO DARKEN HAIR APPLY SAGE TEA

Common garden sage brewed into a heavy tea with sulphur added will turn gray, streaked and faded hair beautifully dark and luxuriant. Just a few applications will prove a revelation if your hair is fading, streaked or gray. Mixing the Sage Tea and Sulphur recipe at home though, is troublesome. An easier way is to get a bottle of Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Compound at any drug store all ready for use for only 75 cents. This is the old time recipe improved by the addition of other ingredients.

While wispy, gray, faded hair is not sinful, we all desire to retain our youthful appearance and attractiveness. By darkening your hair with Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Compound no one can tell because it does it so naturally, so evenly. You just dampen a sponge or soft brush with it and draw this through your hair, taking one small strand at a time: by morning all gray hairs have disappeared, and after another application or two, your hair becomes beautifully dark, glossy, soft and luxuriant.

THREE VALENTINE MENUS.

ONE of the exceedingly difficult things to do is to plan what the refreshments shall be for a small party not one's own. Of course, for large parties the whole business is passed over to a caterer and he provides what he has standardized for such events.

Every person who gives a party, whether she is 10 or twice 10 or twice that, will give a prettier and more entertaining party if she makes her own decisions about everything, and puts her own energy and imagination into it, because she will take a more pardonable pride in her affair and show a stimulating enthusiasm that of itself is hospitable and happy for guests.

For the Children.

In entertaining children, and one of the great party days for them is at hand [St. Valentine's day], the food may be quite simple yet symbolic, too. For a little supper menu the following would do:

Creamed Sweetbreads.
Toasted Hearts.
Beet Salad [Bleeding heart].
Jack Frost Dessert [an ice]. Cake.
Candies of the Day.

For a menu for young women the following may be a base for such additions as suit the character of the guests:

Fried Hearts with vegetable garnishes cut in hearts.
Baked Idaho. Hot Rolls.
Endive Salad with garnish of beet hearts.
Violet Jelly. Cake.
Candy and Valentines.

If mother wants to give a valentine luncheon for her friends with whom she plays bridge perhaps she can work out a plan by which she may use part or all of the following menu:

Double Lamb Chops [arrange like a heart].
Mashed Potatoes.
Green Peas. Hot Rolls.
Hearts of Celery.
Cream Puffs.
Coffee.

The latter luncheon menu can easily be turned into a dinner menu by prefacing it with a soup, and perhaps some relishes, or turning the celery to a relish instead of making it serve in place of a salad, as in the luncheon menu.

Or the element of a hot meat dish can be entirely taken out of these menus in order to fit them for supper use by substituting meat sandwiches for the meat.

And here is a way of providing sandwiches for a daughter's party and

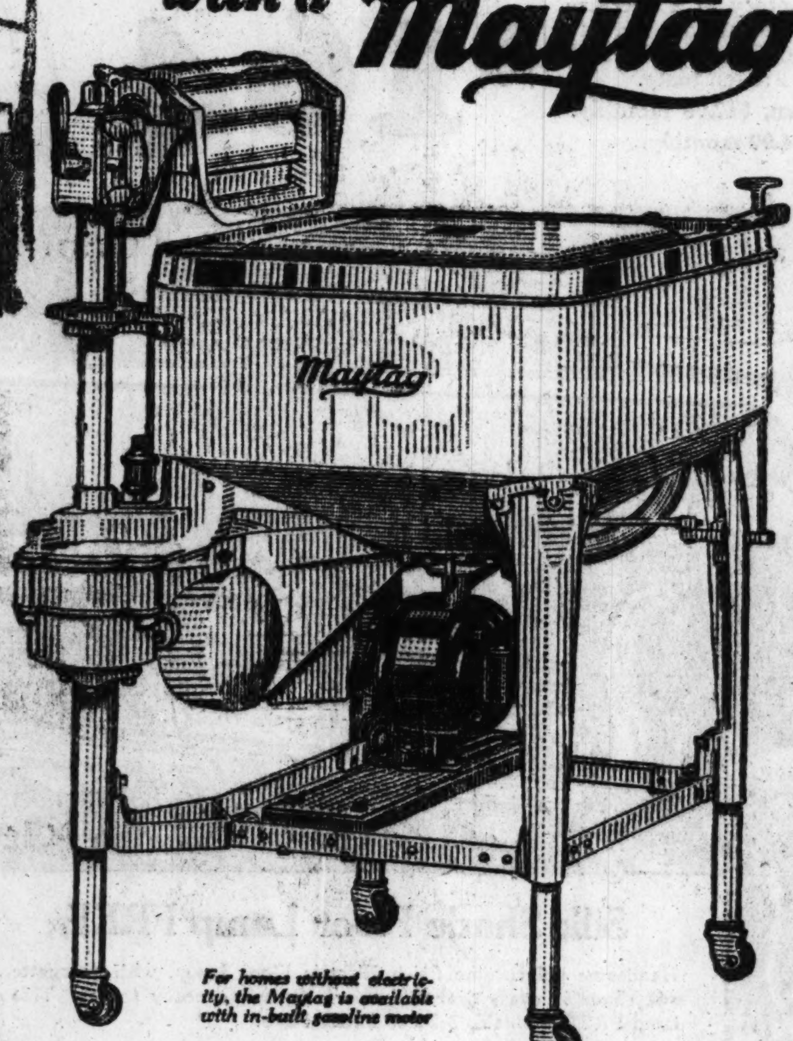
Grease-Crusted Overalls made Spic-Span Clean with a Maytag



For homes without electricity, the Maytag is available with in-built gasoline motor

IF you have ever tried to wash greasy, grimy overalls you know how hard it is to get them really clean. Almost impossible—isn't it?

Yet the Maytag washes them clean in a few minutes—gets them free of all grease and dirt. Convincing proof of the Maytag's unusual washability.

Let the Maytag do your next week's washing free. Give it every washing test. Put your light, finer things in the satin-smooth, heat-retaining, self-cleaning, cast-aluminum tub. See how carefully they are washed—every bit as gently as by hand.

Then wash the heavy, bulky pieces—blankets, floor rugs, soiled rompers and play clothes—greasy, grimy work clothes, if you have them. Wash everything you want washed. You will have cleaner clothes—quicker washing—easier washing.

Any Maytag dealer will deliver a Maytag for you to use free and without obligation to buy. If the Maytag doesn't sell itself, don't keep it.

THE MAYTAG COMPANY, Newton, Iowa

4.—Most compact washer made—takes floor space only 25 inches square.

6.—Easily adjusted to your height, and height of tube.

7.—Clothes can be put in or taken out while washer is running.

8.—Tub cleans itself in 30 seconds.

9.—Metal swinging wringer. Low. Swings into 7 positions. Adjusts itself automatically for handkerchiefs or blankets. Automatic drainboard. Instant tension-release. All parts enclosed.

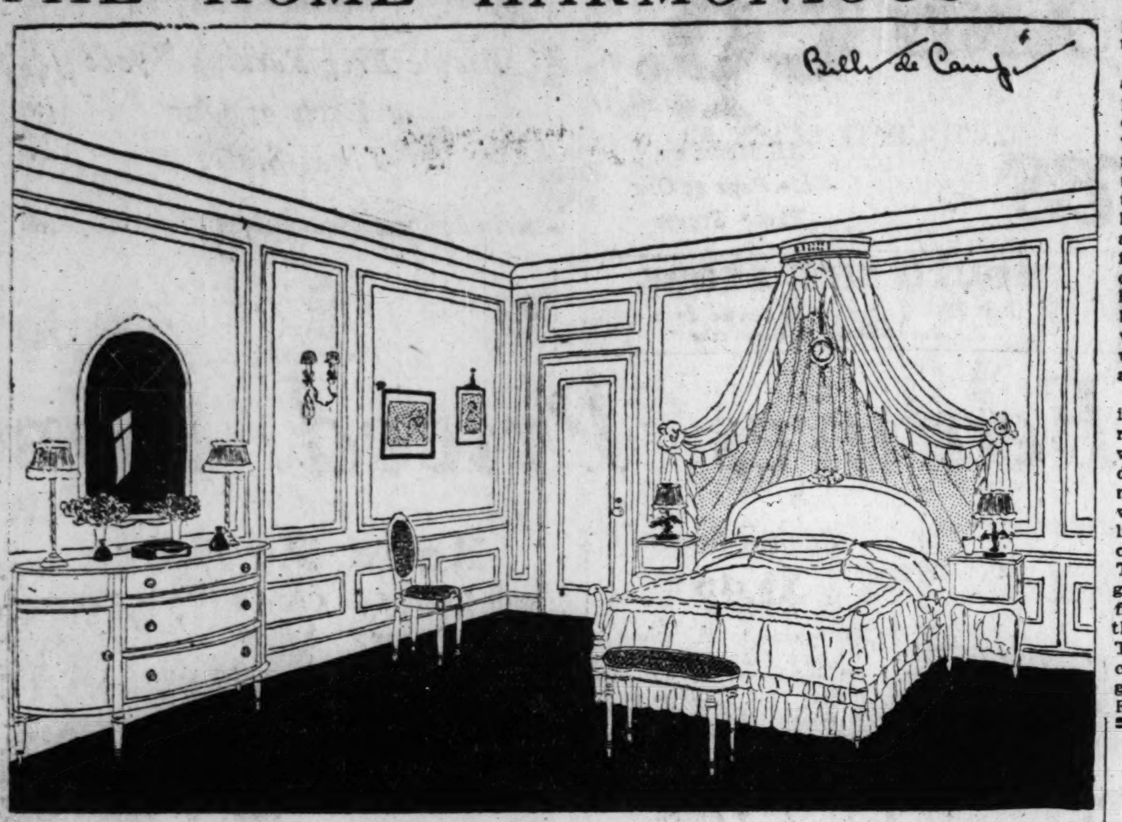
THE HOME HARMONIOUS

By Anita de Campi



Combining Restfulness with Beauty.

BEDROOMS OF CHARM.

"THIS is the dearest room!" Helen exclaimed rapturously "I simply love it. It just looks like you—everything in it so dainty and sweet." How often this sentiment can be voiced in regard to the lovely bedrooms we see nowadays. Here, especially, a charming femininity may be expressed to full advantage. Delicate furnishings, exquisite wall coverings and draperies, joyously happy blendings of color, all lend themselves to the attainment of the desired effects.

Particularly lovely is the bedroom illustrated today. Woodwork is painted a soft Wedgewood blue. The paneled walls are calcimined appleblossom pink, so there is always a warm, pleasant glow about the room. The furniture is French walnut At the windows there are glass curtains and draperies of silk gauze hanging in full foamy lengths. The glass curtains are a pale mauve, the others are Wedgewood blue and both are finished across the ends with short, glass bead fringe which makes a pretty play of sparkles as the sunlight seeks it out. Bed cover and draperies are of crisp taffeta in blue and appleblossom pink, trimmed with ruffles of mauve.

Pink silk shades on side lights and lamps are finished with ruchings of mauve. The floor has a rug of blue chenille.

Quite different from this delicate French room is one done in strong color contrasts. All of the woodwork is painted black with a hairline edge of paprika red. The walls are pistachio green. There are floor length draperies at the windows of bright yellow chintz, bordered with a half inch band of paprika red and topped by shaped lambrequins of flowered blocked linen. Glass curtains are of pistachio green gauze. A cover for the bed is made of the same gay flowered linen as is used for the lambrequins. It is piped in paprika and finished at the sides with wide ruchings of the yellow glazed chintz. On the black floor there are a number of colorful hooked rugs.

Colonial bedrooms always have a certain distinctive nicety of their own. Greatly admired is one in which the walls are done in a paper sprinkled with little tulips in softest blues, pinks, yellow, and green. The woodwork is painted old ivory. There are characteristically flowered chintz draperies over ivory net glass curtains at the windows. The furniture is maple, rich in its goldeny glow. Every piece is in keeping with the colonial quality of the room. There is a stately four post bed, a dignified highboy, a little dropleaf table beside a quaint wing chair at one side of the fireplace, and an old spinning wheel with a rush bottom chair at the other. The wing chair is upholstered in flowered glazed chintz and is accompanied by a delightful little footstool. Dressed in true period style is the four post bed, with its tester valance of chintz matching the window draperies, and its quilted cover of creamy yellow flounced with chintz.

Black and white, with a touch of red, makes a striking bedroom. Carried out in this combination is a room with glossy black woodwork and furniture. The white wall paper is spattered with black stars of different sizes. Cameo-like silhouettes are painted in medallions on the furniture.

These are copied on the lamp shades and shields which are made of white paper, decorated with black silhouettes. At the windows there are full white china silk curtains, weighted at the lower hem so they hang in the right lines. There are no over curtains. The window frames are painted black and the sills are scarlet. An arm chair, beside a low black breakfast table, and a chaise longue in one corner of the room are upholstered in heavy scarlet satin, piped in black. A boxed cover for the bed is of the same vivid material. The black floor is waxed and highly polished and there are lustrous black fur rugs.

Furniture painted a soft sage green is the keynote for another lovely bedroom. The green pieces are lightened with hairline edges of antique gold and decorated with pleasingly quiet floral motifs. Walls are pearl gray and the woodwork a light French gray outlined in sage green. Light rose colored voile makes the glass curtains. The window draperies are of sage green taffeta edged with petal-like ruffles of rose colored taffeta. Covers on the twin beds match these draperies. The floor is carpeted in taupe. Rose colored lamp shades are trimmed in green. An interesting set of graceful French prints in narrow gold frames gives a final note of exquisite quality to the room.

Another painted set is done in old ivory with trims of robins' egg blue. The woodwork is painted blue to match the trim and the wall is covered with an old ivory satin stripe paper. Ruffled marquisette curtains of old ivory dotted in blue dress the windows. There are ruffled valances and tiebacks of the same material. A deep flounced, ruffled cover of the dotted marquisette on the bed has an underslip of robins' egg blue sateen. There are ivory silk lamp shades, decorated with multicolored French silk flowers. Many little lacy pillows on the bed repeat the rainbow colors of the silk flowers. A deep peacock blue rug almost completely covers the floor.

Decidedly unusual is a room with light violet colored walls and jade green woodwork. The furniture s brown mahogany. There are light coral gauze curtains at the windows. Strikingly good looking overdraperies are of brilliantly flowered glazed chintz with a background of jade green They are edged with striped taffeta ruffles in jade, sand, coral, and several shades of violet. Spreads on the twin beds match the draperies. Tubelike day pillows covered with striped taffeta, the stripes running across the width of the bed, complete the individuality of the room.

The TRIBUNE COOK BOOK

EDITED BY JANE EDDINGTON

at the same time a dessert for one's own adults from one base: Make cream puffs and fill part of them with either whipped cream or cooked cream, or to make them more unlike the ordinary puff fill them with a cooked cream in which there is candied fruit like pineapple, which alone will do or it may be used with others, cherry giving a bit of color, candied pear giving a delicate quality, etc.

Cooked Cream with Fruits.

Any cooked cream will do, but the followin is one of the least expensive: One cup of milk, one and a half tablespoons of corn starch, one-half cup of sugar—less may be used when the fruits are quite sweet—four tablespoons of butter, one egg or two egg yolks, a few grains of salt and a scant teaspoon of vanilla, or flavor to suit or none when fruits are to be used.

Blend the butter, sugar and corn starch, add the milk cold, stir over a gentle fire until the whole thickens and is boiling hot. Then take from the fire and immediately stir into it the egg. If it should seem thin, cook a minute or two with stirring and add flavor When cool add fruit, cut fine

Cream puffs filled with a chicken sandwich filling make sandwiches that are considered extra fine, and other fillings can be made for cream puffs which are quite piquant. While those about half the usual size are being made for sandwich use, the big ones for whipped cream—the German name for these means "wind bag" and there is a charming story of how the great Wagner loved these when he was a child—the tiny ones, no bigger than a walnut, can be made for the enjoyment of the children and filled with a bit of cooked cream or a sandwich filling.

It does not make much difference what recipe you take when making cream puffs, if it works. The method is the same for all, but more or less egg can be used. In our experimental kitchen we took the following formula when we made cream puffs and dressed them up in all the ways mentioned above and more:

One cup of boiling water
One-half cup of butter
One cup of flour.
Four eggs.
One-half a teaspoon of salt.

Method: Put water, butter and salt together and bring to a boil. Sift the flour gradually into this, beating vigorously, and cook over the fire, beating until the mixture leaves the sides of the pan. Then pour it into a bowl to cool for three minutes Some people let it cool a little in the utensil and do all the work in that, but it is not so careful a way to do. Into this mixture drop the eggs [unbeaten] one at a time, and beat well after each until they are thoroughly mixed in A part of one of the eggs may be saved out for washing the tops Make the puffs in desired size and shape, placing them on a buttered sheet far enough apart so they will not touch when baked and bake for 35 minutes in a 350 degree oven. They double in size in baking.

The puffs may be shaped uniformly by using a pastry bag and it is easier to get the different sizes and shapes with it, but a tablespoon, for a large and a teaspoon for small ones will do for the shaping.

THE TRIBUNE COOK BOOK, by Jane Eddington, with menus for thirty meals and with chapters making a brief guide to correct eating, is on sale for 10 cents by mail or at the Public Service Bureau, 11 South Dearborn street.

Home-made Supply of Fine Cough Syrup

Better than ready-made cough syrups, and saves about $2. Easily prepared.

If you combined the curative properties of every known "ready-made" cough remedy, you probably could not get as much real curative power as there is in this simple home-made syrup.

Get from any druggist 2½ ounces of Pinex, pour it into a pint bottle and fill the bottle with syrup, using either plain granulated sugar syrup, clarified molasses, honey, or corn syrup, as desired. The result is a full pint of really better cough syrup than you could buy ready-made for three times the money. Tastes pleasant and never spoils.

This Pinex and Syrup preparation gets right at the cause of a cough and gives almost immediate relief. It loosens the phlegm, stops the throat tickle and heals the irritated membranes so gently and easily that it is really astonishing.

A day's use will usually overcome the ordinary cough and for bronchitis, croup, hoarseness and bronchial asthma, there is nothing better.

Pinex is a most valuable concentrated compound of genuine Norway pine extract, and has been used for generations to break up severe coughs.

To avoid disappointment ask your druggist for "2½ ounces of Pinex" with directions, and don't accept anything else. Guaranteed to give absolute satisfaction or money refunded. The Pinex Co., Ft. Wayne, Ind.

FEBRUARY 7, 1926.

The United States Senate

By H. L. Mencken.

LIKE all the other more refined and elegant clubs of this great nation the United States senate has been vastly damaged by prohibition. Not, of course, that it has actually gone dry. I do not frequent it personally, but I am told by reliable agents that its members, wet and dry, still manage to lave their whistles when the need arises. The senate, in its earliest days, was full of three bottle men, and its traditions have been somewhat bibulous ever since. One of the most accomplished guzzlers that Washington has seen in modern times served in it until very recently. He was an honest man, drunk or sober, and always voted wet.

The senate has been ruined by the preposterous frauds, chiefly from the south and middle west, who drink wet and vote dry. Obviously, they are not gentlemen, and equally obviously a club which gives them all the rights of membership is not an agreeable resort for men who are. Worse, they constitute a majority, and so the whole place takes its tone from them. I do not object to teetotalers. On the contrary, I have a high respect for them, as for men capable of a feat that is inordinately difficult under prohibition, and, in my judgment, against the law of God. But how any one can be polite to a scoundrel who sobs for prohibition with a jug in his pocket is quite beyond my imagination. I'd as lief be polite to a prohibition agent, to a Y. M. C. A. secretary, or to a hangman.

In private life, one treats such swine to the boot tip, literally if they are encountered a cappella, and metaphorically if they are accompanied by their friends. But a senator cannot kick another senator. It is not only a high crime and misdemeanor; it is also unclubby. He must treat even a wet dry courteously, and listen to him. It is my contention that no man can stoop to such revolting hypocrisies without doing grave damage to his immortal soul. He becomes, like the wet dry, a fraud. The whole senate, of late, is sicklied o'er with the pale cast of fraudulence. Its best days are behind it.

Not, of course, that it lacks able and interesting men, even today. The two Reeds, from Missouri and Pennsylvania, are certainly not lacking in ability. The Reed of Pittsburgh, just past 45 and in the full bloom of vigor, is the perfect model of a high toned corporation lawyer—suave, alert, well informed, easy in manner, very sure of himself. He rose as the tail of the Mellon kite, but he will be heard of later on, I believe, on his own account. The great crater left by the translation of Penrose to the celestial pastures still yawns tragically. The Curtises and Smoots rattle around in it like Cal in the White House. It will have a new tenant, I predict, toward the end of Senator Reed's first term, and it will be comfortably filled by the middle of his second.

The other Reed of Kansas City, gets vastly less attention than he deserves from the Washington correspondents. He is an incorrigible independent, and hence beyond their imaginations. They are all sturdy regulars, and of both parties: the man they most admire is the perfect stalwart. One cannot spend all morning drenching Mr. Coolidge with vaseline and cologne water, and then rise to Senator Reed in the afternoon. He has all of the qualities that pessimists say have gone out of our public men. He is an adept and highly successful politician, and yet he is the complete antithesis of the party hack. No more formidable debater has been heard in the senate in recent years. He is a master of the art of thinking on his legs—and he thinks in terms of 16 inch shells.

The senate half of the Congressional Record would be as dull, without Reed, as the house half. When he horns into a debate, if only to ask a casual question, the whole atmosphere changes. What was, perhaps, only a series of flatulent recitations becomes at once a clash of ideas and wills. Tender senators take to the cloakrooms, and leave him to his sanguinary hunting. Once he achieved the curious feat of making a colleague burst into tears on the floor. In the battle over the egregious Charles Beecher Warren he achieved the still more curious feat of knocking out the senate majority and the president of the United States.

But such men are now rare in the senate, and their number, I believe, tends to diminish, chiefly because of the seventeenth amendment. Direct elections fill the chamber with mountebanks of the type of Magnus Johnson, the Minnesota professional yokel, and Capper, the Kansas professional Christian. It is easy for boob bumpers, trained in the rustic chautauquas, to get in, but it is very hard for men of any genuine dignity. And the seats that the boob bumpers fail to grab fall to hack politicians of the school of Watson of Indiana and Weller of Maryland.

The most independent and useful senators, some one was lately observing, now come from the less populous states. Borah of Idaho and Walsh of Montana are examples. One reason is that their constituents are usually far off, and so cannot march upon Washington and waste their time. Another is that they have fewer constituents to think of, and hence fewer factions to placate. An eastern senator, if he comes from a large state, has to devote at least two-thirds of his time to purely political business. Even the late Henry Cabot Lodge, for all his lofty mien, was an assiduous job getter, and always had half an hour for visitors from Massachusetts. The Pennsylvania senators, during a Republican administration, and the Virginia senators, when the Democrats are in power, are literally overwhelmed. Only recently Senator Pepper of Pennsylvania was so rattled by the demand for jobs that he fell into the dreadful obscenity of denouncing the titular head of his party.

The ambassadors of the states west of the Mississippi escape most of this nuisance, and so they are able to give their attention to statecraft, and when they happen to be intelligent, they attain to proficiency at its practice, and get upon the first pages. Both of the senate floor leaders come from the transpontine regions. Some day you will be reading a great deal about the senators from Hawaii and Alaska.

The senate, as I have said, has been spoiled as a club by prohibition—and by the direct election of senators. Certainly it must be depressing for a man of any intelligence to have to associate, day in and day out, with a rabble of Anti-Saloon league marionettes and cow state John Baptists. There was far better society in the old time saloons of Washington; there is better society, even today, among the colored intellectuals of the town. But the charm of the upper chamber still lingers, and it is easy to see why.

A United States senator, once he is sworn in, is almost the only genuinely free man left among us. Unlike a representative, he doesn't have to start his campaign for reëlection at once; he has a term of six years, and may take his ease for four of them. Unlike a member of the cabinet, he is not responsible to any one, and need not give an account of himself. And unlike a President or a justice of the supreme court, he is under no obligation to work on days when he feels like loafing.

For six long years he is completely his own man, free to say whatever he pleases and do whatever he pleases. If he offends the high and mighty, the high and mighty must grin and bear it. If he jumps the party traces, it takes a long while to punish him. If, tiring of the great affairs of state, he wants a holiday, he is free to take it. There is no way to gag a senator—that is, no way that is certain to work. A representative, under the present rules, is no more than a private in a regiment, with no rights that the officers are bound to respect. But a senator is an officer himself, and of field rank. He must be attended to. It is dangerous, even for other senators, to use him roughly. He can bite.

Thus, gentlemen who like that sort of power continue to put their names on the senate waiting list, despite all the cow state John Baptists, and all the hack politicians, and all the Anti-Saloon league lickspittles. They hope, I daresay, for better days. The senate chamber is the only place where such hopes may be still entertained. At the other end of the capitol there is only Egyptian night.

THE SIX BEST PICTURES OF JANUARY

LADY WINDERMERE'S FAN
THE GOOSE WOMAN
MANNEQUIN
LIGHTS OF OLD BROADWAY
THE EAGLE
STELLA MARIS

By Mae Tinee

GOOD MORNING!

Not so easy to choose just six "best pictures" this time. January had many good ones! But I—personal—got the most kick out of the ones mentioned above.

"LADY WINDERMERE'S FAN" was such a smooth and polished thing! Though modernized, it stuck closely to the original play by Oscar Wilde, and Ernst Lubitsch, who directed it, displayed his usual skill, which is, you know, SKILL! And then, weren't May McAvoy and Irene Rich delightful? Yes, the entire production was an intelligent and beautiful thing and I guess most of us loved it.

IRENE RICH
in "Lady Windermere's Fan."

"THE GOOSE WOMAN" was unusual and absorbing with Louise Dresser giving a marvelous interpretation in the title rôle. You remember—she portrayed a gin-sodden wreck of a woman who had once been a famous opera singer. It was adapted from Rex Beach's novel, which was a mystery story. Mighty interesting. Skillfully directed.

"MANNEQUIN" was a thriller, wasn't it? Made, you know, from Fannie Hurst's prize winning Liberty Weekly serial. It was beautifully done throughout, with lots of action, and the suspense well sustained. James Cruze directed it and has a right to be proud of his job. Dolores Costello and Alice Joyce were the two charming women in the case.

"LIGHTS OF OLD BROADWAY" presented Marion Davies as twins in the screen adaptation of Laurence Eyre's "The Merry Wives of Gotham." The picture was funny, and clever, and picturesque, and as full of haunting memories of other days as an old time song. Miss Davies played her two rôles adroitly and was in both of them a beautiful sight to see.

"THE EAGLE"—Rudy, girls, and the lovely Vilma Banky in a thrilling adventure romance. But I should tell YOU about "The Eagle"!

"STELLA MARIS" gave us another lovely girl in a double rôle—Mary Philbin. As a hot house flower and a poor little alley weed she did some great work. The picture as a whole was breath-taking.

Rudy in Person—Not a Movie

And they hissed in hushed ecstatic glee
"It's HIM!" "It's he!" "It's HIM!" "It's he!"

Rudy, you know. He came to call Monday. And if you think there wasn't excitement around the neck of the woods where this office is located, I ask you to believe me that there WAS!

From the moment this certain party entered the Sunday room, that department became the most important place in town, for the time. Not a girl in the building but had a moment's pressing business there—and the MEN—ha! Males who never in this world venture our way came in with furrowed brows to ask if there was a letter for them? Or had anybody called them on the phone? And were we sure our clock was right? And as they queried of anybody and everybody they fed their jealous, gleaming eyes on the famous dark gentleman so unconcernedly chatting and smoking in the southeast corner, right under a picture of himself.

Speaking of sitting—he was placed. "Not there, please," I had to say as he started to take a chair. "Promised faithfully to have you face the room. You know . . . !"

"I am pleased," said Mr. Valentino, simply, and with great poise arranged his person so the light of his countenance was not obscured from the shifting groups of his observers.

The awfully nice Mr. Ashcraft, his representative, murmured of business upstairs and disappeared, leaving us alone. Mr. Valentino and I smiled at each other. He said he was glad to meet me and I told him how nice I thought it was of him to come over. He offered me a cigaret out of a gold box with a tassel—no, I didn't—lighted one himself and thanked me for the favorable review I had given "The Eagle."

"I liked it," I said. He said—so did he, only it could have been better done if more time could have been given to the filming of it. We discussed a lot of other pictures and then started gnawing on "The Sheik." And HE said:

"I wasn't so awfully good in that, Miss Tinée. They made me do a lot of tawdry, melodramatic things—crude as the devil. That was the picture that insured my popularity—such as it is—but it wasn't myself who put myself across. It was——" he hesitated.

Page 54 Was Responsible.

"Yes?" I said helpfully. He grinned a wicked, boyish grin.

"It was page 54," said Mr. Valentino.

"Beg pardon?"

"And what was on page 54 of the book?" asked the dumb interviewer.

"Everybody who was crazy about my picture—knows," replied Mr. Valentino politely. "You weren't. I remember, you see."

I hedged. "No? Well—do you think the sort of talk the picture started has been—in the long run—a good thing for you?"

"Yes and no," said my famous visitor slowly. "Of course, it made me. 'The Four Horsemen' had introduced me most favorably. This put my name in every home. I was in demand. The women liked my brand of romance. (If I may call it that.) So far, so good. BUT, because the women like me does NOT mean that I'm effeminate—and some of the talk about me gets my goat. Granted I am 'a woman's man'—a woman's man is not an effeminate one. Yet they say the silliest things about me. Why, in this afternoon's paper I see I'm supposed to wear fur lined pajamas! Ridiculous, and unkind, and unjust!"

"Jealous, maybe?"

"Perhaps. And cannot one be jealous and just at the same time?"

"Well—can he?"

"Maybe not. It is the answer!" replied the hero glumly. He leaned forward, flexing his arm.

"Feel that!"

"Ummmmmmm!"

"A he man's muscle," said Mr. Valentino, leaning back triumphantly.

"I'LL say!"

"I have to be strong to do the stunts I do—like, in 'The Eagle,' leaning over from a vantage point above and lifting a man bodily off his mount, with one hand, picking his pocket with the other, etc. That is not effeminacy," said he, lighting another cigaret. (The stubs he left were tenderly collected later by adorers.)

Single Blessedness for Him.

And then we got personal and he said with great emphasis that he had not intention of marrying Vilma, or Mae, or Constance, or any other of those so gorgeous ladies to whom he has been reported engaged. City Heard Debussy Sixteen Years Ago

By Edward Moore.

NEW YORK has once again recorded itself as the center of the musical universe. One of its papers announces that Mr. Toscanini is to conduct today a work by Debussy "which is scarcely known to contemporary music lovers." It is "La Mer."

This is a truly enviable state of mind, in its bland assumption as well as its unconscious humor. The only thing against it is a few cargoes of facts.

FLORENCE AUSTRAL, soloist with the Symphony orchestra this week.
[Apeda Photo.]

Along in 1910 the late Cleofonte Campanini used to conduct "La Mer" at the Sunday afternoon concerts, which were pleasant observances in the weekly schedules of the old Chicago Opera company, and he made a good job of it. About the same time Mr. Stock took up the work. He never quite got to the point of regarding it as one of the best sellers in the répertoire of the Chicago Symphony orchestra, but taking one season with another, it became a fairly standard item. Incidentally he is planning to present it again on Friday afternoon and Saturday night of this week.

"La Mer" is one of the larger achievements in Debussy's career. It is nearly as fine as "The Afternoon of a Faun," "Iberia," or the "Two Nocturnes." It is one of the few pieces concerned with the sea that ever got big enough in vision to mean the sea. For while many composers have tried to deal with an oceanic view, the result of their labors has frequently been a lake, and a rather small lake at that.

Mr. Stock Gives Unusual Program.

Since contemporary music lovers do not exist in this hinterland—there is no escaping the deduction—I shall take the liberty of quoting again from the gentleman who has stated it. He finds the music of "La Mer" to be in a way duplex, "the ocean that seems an actuality of wet winds and tossing spray and inexorable depths and reaches, and that uncharted and haunted and incredible sea that opens before the magic casements of the dreaming mind."

It is a somewhat unusual program, this of Mr. Stock's, of two distinct sections, with Florence Austral, the soprano, as the connecting link. The first half will consist of Gustav Holst's Japanese Suite, which I do not find recorded in past performances of the orchestra, then "La Mer," and finally Miss Austral singing Weber's "Ocean, Thou Mighty Monster."

The second part is Wagnerian: "Lohengrin," introduction to the third act and "Elsa's Dream," with Miss Austral; "Siegfried," the orchestra in "Voices of the Forest"; "Die Götterdämmerung," Siegfried's death music, and the finale, including "Brunnhilde's Immolation," again with Miss Austral.

This soprano was one of the sensations of last season at the music festivals at Cincinnati and Evanston. They speak of her career as unusual, which it would seem to be. She used to sing as an amateur—her name, I believe, is Florence Mary Wilson—until more for the fun of it than anything else, she entered a competitive music festival at Victoria, New South Wales, where she was living.

Fritz Hart, the director of the Melba conservatory at Melbourne, advised her to take up the serious study of music. She completed her course in 18 months, went to London for further study, and in 1922, four years after she had heard her first opera, she adopted part of the name of her native land as her own stage name, and appeared as Aida, Isolde, Elizabeth, and all the Brunnhildes of the Ring, also in orchestral concerts under Felix Weingartner, Sir Henry Wood, Sir Landon Ronald, and in 1923 in the Verde Requiem at the Crystal Palace.

Chaliapin Sings at Auditorium.

Feodor Chaliapin is to sing at the Auditorium this afternoon for the benefit of the North End club. It is said this will be his only Chicago appearance of the season. When he comes again, it will be at the head of his own opera company, wherein he will sing Don Basilio in "The Barber of Seville."

In Mr. Chaliapin's past appearances with the Civic Opera company here, there have been rumors that he was somewhat insistent about having things take place on the stage in accordance with his own ideas. Apparently the same conditions are going to prevail when he makes his operatic tour.

He has stipulated that he, the star of the organization, is to select his own cast. The only selection made public thus far is Elvira de Hidalgo as Rosina. The artistic director who will stage the opera is to be Feodor Chaliapin. The scenery will be painted by M. Korovin, who made the production of Anna Pavlowa's "Don Quixote," but Mr. Chaliapin will inspect and approve the scene models and costume plates. He has engaged Eugene Plotnikoff, who conducted for him in Moscow and Petrograd, to be musical director.

Returning to this afternoon's program, it will probably be made up of songs announced by Chaliapin after he appears on the stage, which is his custom, but there is the promise that some of the songs will be in English.

There will be a notable feature in the song recital given by Clara Bloomfield at Kimball hall on Tuesday evening. It is that Miss Bloomfield's aunt, the famous pianist, Fannie Bloomfield Zeisler, will play her accompaniments, probably the only time that the immortal Fannie has ever acted in such a capacity.

Miss Bloomfield classifies as a diseuse. She has been a pupil of Lombardi, Ernestine Schumann-Heink, and Marcella Sembrich in matters tonal, also of Yvette Guilbert, of whose fascinating interpretive art she is said to be an able disciple. Her program will be chiefly of folk songs from the lore of England, Ireland, Germany, France, Russia, Poland, and Ukrainia, also including a group by Moussorgsky, Gretchaninoff, and Rachmaninoff.

Boston Hears "Pelleas and Melisande."

By this time the Civic Opera company will have finished its annual invasion of Boston and will be on its way to Baltimore, Washington, and points west and south. The two weeks would seem to have pleased the Bostonians mightily, including the performance of "Pelléas and Mélisande," concerning which Miss Garden is quoted as saying that the Boston performance of the work was the best that had ever been given, anywhere.

Apparently, however, some of the Bostonians are not quite up to "Pelléas." I find the following protest in the Globe of that city:

"It is to be hoped that people who want to see Mary Garden and are not particular about what opera they see her in, will not select 'Pelléas.' There are enough people hereabouts who will come to hear Debussy's music and to watch a well rounded performance to fill the house. In other seasons the performances of 'Pelléas' have been times of trial for the musical portion of the audience. There are a number of exquisite orchestra interludes between the scenes, during which the curtain is lowered and the house kept dark. The persons who have only come for Mary Garden, and are wishing they had picked a 'real' opera like 'Thais' to see her in, have talked cheerfully and pertinaciously through these interludes, despite frantic endeavors of the musically inclined majority to hush them up. Opera is not, in general, a 'highbrow' entertainment, nor is Mary Garden a 'highbrow' performer. But 'Pelléas' and her performance in it are of the

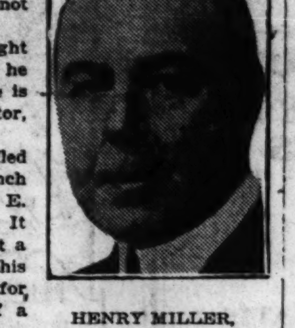
"EMBERS" IS GLOWING FRENCH ADAPTATION

By Burns Mantle.

NEW YORK.—[Special Correspondence.]—A year ago Henry Miller admitted a little tearfully from the stage of his theater that he had serious thoughts of retiring. But you know actors. Henry was overwrought because he was disappointed in that particular play, and other things.

This week he is back at the home theater with a sentimental and domestic drama from the French that he evidently likes, and he was happy to tell everybody present Monday night that whatever else he may do he will not retire.



HENRY MILLER,
Back to the New York stage in "Embers."

Which is perfectly all right with me. I like him. When he cries and when he doesn't. He is a pretty thorough job as an actor, and ever so well meaning.

This new play is one called "Embers." It is from the French of Wolff and Duvernois, and A. E. Thomas made the adaptation. It is fairly heavy with plot. In it a sentimental historian, knowing his wife has practically left him for her lover, takes unto himself a pretty little shopgirl mistress.

A year later both the historian's wife and his mistress become mothers practically at the same time. It was, I suppose, during the agitation for bigger and better families in France. The wife comes through nicely with her lover's offspring, but the little mistress dies, leaving the historian with a motherless infant. They are both boys.

Then the historian, determined to give his own son a home and have a hand in his rearing, deliberately substitutes him for his wife's baby during a change of nurses and she never knows the difference. Not for six years, anyway. When I left the theater the historian had about induced her to adopt what she supposed was his illegitimate son, but which was in reality her own child.

A little labored, this plot. For a time I feared Mr. Miller himself would also be brought to bed with child, such was the progress of the stage birth rate. But the play escaped being ridiculous by reason of the holding value of its story and the wise playing of Mr. Miller, Laura Hope Crews, and Florence Shirley.

More from the French.

"A Weak Woman" is daring. That incorrigible fellow, Henry Baron, is in again with another French farce having to do with the ways of philanderers and their mildly curious, if not completely acquiescent, ladies. "A Weak Woman" he calls this one. It was Baron, you may recall, who shocked one season with "The Rubicon," and another with "The Bride Retires," and before that tried an adaptation of "Amoureuse," which he called "A Night of Love," or some such thing. Neither Henry nor his productions are worth much memory room.

"A Weak Woman," like most of them, is made possible by the careful playing of a carefully selected cast. The Morgan boys, Frank from the "Firebrand," and Ralph, who was the fooled husband in "Cobra," are featured with Estelle Winwood, she of the saucer eyes and the bland ingenuousness so helpful to the playing of risque situations.

In the argument Estelle plays a widow who is in love with both the Morgans and unable to choose between them. One is an athlete, a champion fencer, the other a composer, rather sensitive and fine.

Invited to visit Frank, the handsome athlete, in his rooms, she goes in order to convince herself that, even surrounded by propitious furniture, her sentiments are purely Platonic. Frank, too, is eager to prove to her that he can be good on occasion. Especially just before a fencing match, in which he will be called upon to defend his title.

But at the end of the second act a discreetly motivated drop curtain is barely down in time to shut out the widow's surrender. And the day following the Paris papers are filled with regrets that the defending champion had lost his match.

Thereafter the lady, convinced that she really stands in need of the proper restraints of matrimony, turns to the poet. And he, being broad minded and still much in love, overlooks the affair of the afternoon visit to his rival.

The response to this newest audacity has been lively, but in no way sensational. One thing in its favor as a marketable comedy is that the adaptation was made by Ernest Boyd, a gentleman of letters who, wearing a sandy beard, looks like a character from the Bible and is known to his intimates of the inner circles, so George Kaufman tells me, as "the boid in the bush." Mr. Boyd has assisted greatly in the refining process, and, save for the brazenness of the situation itself, which is probably enough, there is little if any offense in the play.

"Big Bill" Does His Honest Best.

I have had no more than a glimpse of that aspiring champion William T. Tilden II. performing as a social settlement worker and modest lover in a piece called "Don Q. Jr." But that glimpse convinces me that Big Bill is doing at least the best he can.

He has courage, this lad. Any man upon whom fate has visited the curse of swivel hips needs courage publicly to face the world. And more courage to fight the sneers of the world through seven national championships and several that were international.

I have seen this same Big Bill time and again walk out on the Forest Hills courts, at once the cynosure and the butt of all within view of him. He has a mincing way of walking, or seems to have, because of his unusual height and his supple body.

I have heard the open sniggering of the crowd as he practiced, swinging himself into curious poses, or standing with his hands on his hips like a mannequin.

But I never have seen him fail to turn this unmannerly sneering into applause before his match was finished, and usually, partly because of his trick of letting the other fellow get within winning-distance of him and then calmly showing up the entire tennis world, he is swept toward the showers by a whirlwind of cheers.

"Big Bill" isn't much of an actor. Why in the name of sense he wants to try to be any kind of an actor it is not easy for me to understand. But he is at least an honest amateur who does no harm and some good to the play.

"Don Q. Jr." is a sentimental comedy drama about a little fellow who stole money to help out a pal with a sick wife and who was caught and reformed and made happy in the end. Young Bill Quinn, who was with the Dennis Neilsen-Terrys playing the kid in "The Crooked Friday," and is a clever boy actor, has the name part.

Breaking Out with Ibsenitis.

I don't suppose I would be justified in speaking of it as an attack of Norwegian measles, but we certainly are breaking out with a rash of Ibsenitis.

Last week I told you of Eva Le Gallienne's success with "The Master Builder." This week we have had a revival of "Hedda Gabler" made by the Actors' theater, with Emily Stevens in the titular rôle, and another Le Gallienne revival of "John Gabriel Borkman," with a German actor, Egon Brecher, playing the name part to Miss Le Gallienne's Ella Rentheim. And within the week we shall see "Little Eyolf" revived at the Guild, though not by the Guild. And there seems to be a definite demand, of sorts, for each of them.

"Hedda," of course, has a following. Playgoers of our time, particularly women playgoers, collect impressions of this unhappy heroine's interpreters as our play loving ancestors collected impressions of many Hamlets. Most of them have seen the Mrs. Fiske, Mary Shaw, and Alla Nazimova

This Thing and That Thing of the Theater

By Frederick Donaghey.

SOMETHING more about "The Miracle," of course: there's a great deal to the pantomime, if that be really its classification; and most of what is to it is rich with reasons why the Chicago engagement should be made successful. . . . Letters—not so many of them, but good letters from readers who can write—come with sneers and sniffs and sarcasms for what the senders delight in calling the ballyhoo for "The Miracle"; and letters of the kind make me slightly ill with impatience. It is true that extraordinary space has been devoted to the venture; and it is equally true that "The Miracle" is an extraordinary venture. Nothing nearly so extensive, in a quantitative way, has ever before been undertaken in the theater, here or abroad. Nothing else on a large scale so far achieved in the theater has been so nearly free from pretense, and, therefore, so nearly real. Most aspects of the enterprise are news, and a proper matter for newspapers. The efforts put forth by the Chicago newspapers to create and stir up interest in the performances have been decent and right. There is no reason why Mr. Gest should have brought the spectacle hither unless he might have just that kind of help and support.

TOM PATRIOLA
He's dancing oddly in the current Scandals.

"The Miracle" is, as Mr. L. L. T. argues in a letter, "a show for which admissions are sold"; and "The Miracle" is, nonetheless, Mr. L. L. T., a happening, also, in that it is something in the experience of all who see it to be marked with rubrics. . . . "The Miracle," in the view of Miss Lena Gran, "is alien, and a terrific waste of money that might have been devoted to doing something big and fine for American theatrical art." "The Miracle," Miss Gran, is imported, but is hardly alien. The legend of how the Virgin took on the duties of the errant nun was live and virile folk-lore in many lands at least ten centuries before America was discovered; but it is universal, and no more alien than the religion of the Christians or of the Jews. The essential beauty and the human appeal of the legend have taken the fancy of workers in all the arts. One of the gems of English poetry is Adelaide Proctor's treatment of the old tale,—although I suspect that John Davidson's ballad is more familiar. Materlinck was at his best when he used the theme for his lovely play of "Sister Beatrice,"—a play that serves as the libretto of André Messager's like-named opera. An insolent and tawdry use of the legend in the theater was made some seasons back by Edward Knobloch and Mr. Belasco in a sappy and simpering piece named "Marie-Odille." . . . There is nothing "alien," Miss Gran, in a tale whose appeal is to all peoples, including those whose attitude toward the religious implications of the tale is non-believing,—or even furiously hostile.

The Good Comedy in the Harris.

SIR: As you have, so have I a great deal of liking for "They Knew What They Wanted," which I regard as a perfect pippin of a hut-play, as it was the fashion to call the little pieces which the Irish Players used to do with such charm and reality. I think, however, that your saying that the "posture" of Amy, Tony, and Joe is again a twist of the Francesca di Rimini motive is not as happy as what struck me when I saw the play in New-York. What struck me was that it was like Cyrano's wooing Roxane for Christian in Rostand's fine play.

Maybe that situation is less "eternal" than that of Francesca, the ugly soldier, and the elegant young Paolo; but it was the thought pressed into me as Amy, a forlorn little bum seeking rest and a let-up on worry as the mail-order bride of an unknown farmer far from the lights and sights of the Frisco that means metropolis to so many poor souls, took it for granted that the Joe who talked like the letters she had read was the Tony whose bride she had come to be.

C. WILLIAMS PEACOCK.

P.S.—I'm glad "Gas" baffled you, too. I was rather afraid, as I departed with my five-dollars' worth the night it opened, that you might "get" it as I didn't.

C. W. P.

While grateful to Mr. Peacock for a letter that serves three or four purposes (one of his, at least, and three of mine), I prefer to find the basic parallel of "They Knew What They Wanted" in the Francesca legend. Cyrano was older than Christian, for one thing; for another, Roxanne did not mistake one for the other, and was merely fooled into believing that it was Christian who poured forth the lovely address of love as she stood in her balcony above the hidden poet. . . . Whereas, plainly, Amy's plight is Francesca's plight, and Joe's is Paolo's; and the parallel carries even unto the full implication of Dante's words—"And they read no more that day."

And (P.S.) "Gas" didn't baffle me; and I "got" it. . . . I'm sorry, of course; but I "got" it.

Miscellany.

"The Student-Prince," "Kid Boots," and "The Hottentot," three made-in-America entertainments, were staged last week in London, where "Rose-Marie" and "No! No, Nanette!" have for months been in high favor. . . . George Graves, a London tradition when it is a matter of acting the comic men of operetta, flung himself out of rehearsals of "The Student-Prince"; and Oscar Figman was rushed from New-York to act Lutz.

Mr. J. J. Shubert, there to superintend the venture, has stirred London into one of its easy rages by the simple process of doing away with the foolish pit-seats for "The Student-Prince." The so-called pit in the English theaters is an arbitrary matter of one or two or three or six rows at the rear of the main floor which are sold, like gallery-places, on the first-come-first-served plan. The number of rows constituting the pit varies with the pull of the play on view.

And the Chicago run of "The Student-Prince" will round out a calendar-year Saturday night of next week—the 20th instant. The operetta already holds the Chicago record for a consecutive run of a play with music. The record was held until last week by "No! No, Nanette!"

"Say It with Girls!" is the title of what C. B. Cochran, the London producer, says will be his last revue. He complains that ideas for revue are scarce, and gifted women hard to get. . . . Miss Elizabeth Hines, here last Summer in "June Days," is to be in the cast of his new one.

Hamilton Revelle, a dude of a leading-man about the time the Nineteenth Century was winding up its affairs, announces that he is on his way to Italy to act with the Signorina Maria Bazzi, a tragic lady of that land who had a go at entertaining New-York early in the current season. One of her enterprising ideas was to act "Rain" there; and, although she used an Italian text, the owner of the play was quick to make her stop. . . . So far as is known, Mr. Revelle will be the first American actor to give aid to an Italian star in the home-towns.

Mr. Tilden, best of the tennis-players, last night ended his first adventure as a star of the drama. . . . Those who saw him in something named "Don Q Jr." say he was about as bad as they make 'em.

the most beautiful musical play the world has ever seen

To Chicago:

We are happy to announce that J. Harold Murray, originally cast for the role of the Prince in "Castles In the Air," but who was prevented from joining the company by the success in New York of "Captain Jinks," in which he sang—and acted—the title role as only J. Harold Murray could, is now with us—and you—and will play Prince Carol in "Castles" at the New Shubert Olympic Theater beginning Wednesday evening, Feb. 10.

The coming of Mr. Murray completes, what we believe to be, the most perfect cast ever assembled in a musical play.

Odds-and-Ends of Stage-News

THE playwrights banded as the Dramatists' Guild (which is an underlying body of the Authors' League of America) have settled upon the terms which they say producers must meet if they are to produce plays written by any of the members. The playwrights have been in a furious mood ever since they found out, not long ago, that some of the producers were making deals with movie-magnates whereby the film-rights were disposed of without consulting the authors. Now the authors say they will boycott any producer who dares to stage a play not written by one of their number; and they add that foreign authors may have their works staged within the pale only when they are members of a protective organization affiliated with the Dramatists' Guild. . . . It is all as funny as can be; and the playwrights have had Dudley Field Malone, who is funnier than any of them, draw up the new papers.

Troupes venturing into Florida report immense takings.

Augustus Thomas thinks the time is just right to try again with his play named "Still Waters," not written for the glorification of the Eighteenth Amendment. . . . When it was staged last year, Mr. Thomas, himself, undertook to act the principal rôle, although in the days when he was an actor on hire he didn't rank as a good one, I've been told. Anyway, his present plan is to do his own managing, and let somebody else do the most important acting.

Will Rogers fares well on his tour as a talker, and plans, it is understood, to keep on touring as a talker through next season. . . . And Mr. Ziegfeld says nothing about another issue of the Follies. The issue recently shown in the Illinois was bereft last night of the comical W. C. Fields, who withdrew to take up a juicy contract in the movies. Johnnie Dooley has been moved into the sketches wherein Mr. Fields was so amusing.

Miss Blanche Bates is expected soon to act in a play made by Harry Wagstaff Gribble from a novel named "The Back Seat."

Aux Italiens!

Hamilton Revelle, a dude of a leading-man about the time the Nineteenth Century was winding up its affairs, announces that he is on his way to Italy to act with the Signorina Maria Bazzi, a tragic lady of that land who had a go at entertaining New-York early in the current season. One of her enterprising ideas was to act "Rain" there; and, although she used an Italian text, the owner of the play was quick to make her stop. . . . So far as is known, Mr. Revelle will be the first American actor to give aid to an Italian star in the home-towns.

J. Harold Murray is to succeed Irving Beebe as the hero of "Castles in the Air" Wednesday night. Mr. Murray sang here, in the Garrick, two years ago in a pallid operetta named "Carolina." . . . Miss Vivienne Segal, who sings with more skill than any other young woman now in operetta, is back in the cast in the Olympic. Miss Irene Dunn was good enough to go on as the heroine while Miss Segal was ailing. . . . And Manert Kippen, who gave up a villain's rôle in the piece some weeks ago, also is back.

The news out of Chicago some weeks ago that "A Light from St.-Agnes" was both a jazz-opera and a hit in the Auditorium hasn't worked any serious injury, as yet, to W. Frank Harling, the composer, although nobody is heard to whistle any of the tunes from that opus. It was announced three weeks ago that he was to do the score of an operetta named "Deep River" to a libretto by Laurence Stallings, co-author of "What Price Glory!"; and now he has been engaged to write an incidental score for the dramatization of Donn Byrne's colorful and diverting tale of "Messer Marco Polo." . . . I think it has been told in THE TRIBUNE that Sidney Blackmer is to be the star of this play.

Parting.

Miss Barrymore and Walter Hampden, after acting together in "Hamlet" and "The Merchant of Venice," are to part. . . . He is about to revive "Cyrano de Bergerac," in which two seasons ago he had the astonishing run of 250 performances in New-York. She, it is told, will soon be seen in a new play.

Miss Gladys Cooper, when through acting in the London production of "The Last of Mrs. Cheyney," is to appear, it is said, in W. Somerset Maugham's comedy named "The Letter." . . . Also, it seems that a paragraph in THE TRIBUNE to the effect that "The Last of Mrs. Cheyney" was all through in London was not nearly true, and that the play is still a big draw there. The paragraph was based on cable information.

There is a talk of a special Chicago cast in William Anthony Maguire's riproarer named "Twelve Miles Out," which is all about bootleggers and hijackers in the waters washing New-York, with William Courtney as the costliest actor.

"Find Papa!" is the name of one new play. Will Deming and Miss Mabel Acker are to be in it. . . . Ernest Glendenning is to try the two-a-day in a sketch named "Officer O'Flahent," by Frank Conlan. The sketch had a hearing in New-York two weeks ago at a public gambol of the Lambs. . . . "Velvet" is something by Edward L. Goodwin announced for early production. . . . And George Kelly's most recent play "Philip Goes Forth," is not to be staged until the Autumn.

The Theater Guild's revival in New-York of "Arms and the Man" will be taken off at the end of this week. . . . This has been the most successful of the Guild's ventures so far this season, although never a riot at the box-office. The revival of "Androcles and the Lion" didn't click; "Merchants of Glory" was a flat failure; so was "The Glass Slipper"; and "Goat-Song" is reported as not liked by the Guild's subscribed clientèle,—which now numbers all but twenty thousand persons, and is said to be peevish about the plays it pays to see. One complaint, I'm told, is that the Guild has been giving too much Shaw; and, if this be true, then the clientèle is out of pre-agreement with Mr. Shaw, himself.

F. D.

BOTH ARE BRITISH: ONE'S A STRANGER

MISS GILDA LEARY

MISS EDNA BEST

MISS LEARY is currently employed as the naughty parlor-maid in "Young Blood"; and, if you've taken note of her interesting way with that good part, you've been made aware that she is in possession of an accent. It is congenitally her own: she comes from England. . . . So does Miss Best, also: she is with Mr. Maude in "These Charming People," and is on her first tour of the States. Back in London, she has had high rating for some seasons as an actress of hoydenish and ingenuous young women; and she has what is held there to be the high honor of having acted the title-part of "Peter Pan."

SEASONED

WALLACE FORD

He's the player of the adolescent hero of "Pigs," and is liked. . . . It is told that young Mr. Ford's past has had to do with Abie-plays: that he was the youngster, William Scott, in "Abraham Lincoln," and the youthful lover of the title in "Abie's Irish Rose."

Changing Bills

"Dancing Mothers" in the La Salle.—The play, after six weeks in the Selwyn, is transferred to the little theater in Madison Street for a minimum of four weeks, with arrangements for an extension in case attendance is as liberal as hoped for. . . . Starts tonight.

Cyril Maude in "These Charming People" in the Selwyn.—The popular English comedian in a piece by Michael Arlen that was among the Autumn successes in New-York. The comedy is not a dramatization of any of the matter in Mr. Arlen's like-named volume of short tales, but is a piece of his acted in London as "Dear Father." Miss Edna Best, an English soubrette, will make her first Chicago appearance with Mr. Maude, who, it is said by him, is on his final American tour. . . . Opens tomorrow night.

This week's rotation of principal players in "The Miracle":

Monday, Tuesday, Thursday, Friday nights and Friday and Saturday afternoons, Lady Diana Manners as the Madonna.

Monday and Friday nights and Wednesday afternoon, Miss Elinor Patterson as Megildis.

Tuesday and Thursday nights and Friday and Saturday afternoons, Miss Iris Tree as Megildis.

Wednesday [first time in Chicago] and Saturday nights, Lady Diana Manners as Megildis.

Wednesday [first time in Chicago] and Saturday nights, Miss Elisabeth Schirmer as the Madonna.

MONDAY, FEBRUARY 15:

Al Jolson in "Big Boy" in the Apollo.—Resumption of a popular engagement suspended January 26, in its fifth week.

MONDAY, FEBRUARY 22:

"The Vortex," with Noël Coward, in the Selwyn.—Mr. Coward's play about some unlovely Londoners and the things and habits that make them unlovely. The piece was immensely successful last year in London and in the course of a New-York engagement recently terminated. . . . Miss Lillian Braithwaite, a popular London actress, comes with Mr. Coward.

MONDAY, MARCH 8:

Leon Errol in "Louie the Fourteenth" in the Illinois.—The well-liked buffoon, not here in the three years since "Sally," in an imported piece wherein he performed many weeks in New-York. . . . The production is Mr. Ziegfeld's, and is said to be sumptuous.

SUNDAY, MARCH 21:

The Charlot Revue in the Selwyn.—Miss Beatrice Lillie, Miss Gertrude Lawrence, and Jack Buchanan in a program prepared for this country by André Charlot from items in various entertainments he has staged in London. . . . Miss Lawrence and Mr. Buchanan will be new-comers in Chicago.

MOVING

MISS DOROTHY BURGESS

She is the actress of the boozing, loose-minded moron-like daughter whose conduct helps to make a red-hot mamma of the seemly matron who gives title to "Dancing Mothers." . . . Miss Burgess, who had been an unimportant also-ran of the cast, stepped into the rôle of the daughter when Miss Helen Hayes, who had originated it, stepped out to go into something else. And she was in the play while it ran on and on in New-York last season. . . . She moves with it tonight from the Selwyn to the La Salle.

New in New-York

These are the novelties bulletined for this week in the New-York theaters:

"The Jay-Walker," by Miss Olga Printzlau, with Miss Mary Daniel and Curtis Cooksey. . . . 'Tis said that the character of this play is not as facetious as the title may indicate.

"The Beaten Track," by J. O. Francis, with Miss Eleanor Daniels, Gavin Muir, Miss Lucille Likolas, and Wallace Erskine. . . . The producer seeks to identify Mr. Francis as "the author of Lord Howard de Walden's prize play, 'Change.'" The play was acted in Chicago [in what is now the Playhouse] about eleven years ago by a cast of Welsh actors, of whom Gareth Hughes remained in this country to achieve fair distinction in other plays and in the movies.

"Port o' London," by George W. Oliver, with Basil Rathbone and Miss Alison Skipworth. . . . This play, then named "The Maelstrom," was tried out two weeks ago in one of New-York's outlying theaters. It has to do with Cockney life and character.

"Lulu Belle," by Edward Sheldon and Charles MacArthur, with Miss Lenore Ulric and Henry Hull. . . . Reports from Philadelphia indicate that this work classifies as hot stuff. The principal characters are Negroes. The authors are ex-Chicagoans; and Mr. MacArthur was for a time a reporter for THE TRIBUNE.

Boston is not the only place where certain persons' own conversation is the most important thing in the world. There are some in Chicago also.

Here and There in Music.

Recital givers are pretty nearly infallible in some of their habits. For years they have been noted in selecting Sunday afternoon as the one period of the week when it is possible to give a recital in Chicago. They add to this custom the variant of abandoning Sunday afternoons for a week or so, and then suddenly charging in by companies and battalions. This afternoon, for example, there are six: Chaliapin, Bauer and Casals, Thibaud, Pouishnoff, Anastasha Rabinoff, and Davidson and Gillman. It may be that they come for public approval expressed at the box office, or for what critical attention they can afterwards use in their advertising material. Whichever it is, they are greatly generous in their willingness to share with so many of their fellows.

One of the novelties later in the week is a recital of spirituals and other music of the American Negroes to be given Wednesday night at Orchestra hall by Paul Robeson, bass-baritone, and Lawrence Brown, pianist. This will be their first joint appearance in Chicago, and according to all preliminary accounts they are good. I omit a rather long discussion on the primitive, fundamental, and emotional qualities of spirituals, because a good many people know what spirituals are, even though there are only a few able to do them properly. This pair, from all indications, classify among the few.

A letter from Albert Coates, or, to be more exact, Mrs. Coates, tells of uncommon success with the production of Rimsky-Korsakoff's opera, "The Invisible City of Kiteje," at Barcelona. It was put on with what is called absolute luxury and gorgeous scenery, "better even than what we had in the old pre-war days of luxury in Russia." The Teatro del Liceo of Barcelona, with a capacity of 4,800, was packed at each performance, and two extra performances were given to accommodate the demand for seats. A press account says the opera is a masterpiece, and puts a crown of honor on the head of Russian art. The public of the third and fourth floor boxes and galleries collected a sum of money among themselves and bought a medal to present to Mr. Coates. As part of the record, the names of the three principal singers, soprano, tenor, and bass, are Jakowleva, Pozemkoffsky, and Zaporojetz.

For some weeks "The New Vocal Art," by P. Mario Marafioti, M. D., has been reposing on this desk and asking to be reviewed. It is a task to be approached with considerable hesitation. The book is both medical and artistic in its considerations. One infers that if all its directions are followed, all singers, and consequently the whole world of singing, will be transformed. The only trouble is that probably within a few months another author will outline another and quite contrary set of directions, whereby all singers and consequently the whole world of singing will be transformed.

Of making books on the mechanics of singing there is no end. They seldom agree, but to an outsider they are all equally eloquent and equally convincing. And yet there are so many bad singers in the world!

Dr. Marafioti assumes correct speaking as the logical basis for correct singing. This may be the true secret. Some singers have told me it would be correct if singing were confined to the range of a single octave. Dr. Marafioti, however, leaves me cold on the argument that Italian is a better language than English for singing purposes when he attempts to prove it by quoting an Italian poem and then translating it into English. It would not be difficult to prove the opposite by taking an English poem and translating it into Italian.

Anything, however, that will improve the singing situation deserves encouragement.

Joseph Schwarz, the baritone, has been in San Francisco singing with the opera company of that city. On his way east he will give a song recital, next Tuesday night, at the Elm Place auditorium of Highland Park.

The Royal Carl Rosa Opera company sends word from England that there is an organization in the United States calling itself the Carl Rosa Opera company, but that the first named company has not been in America for over 50 years.

'Embers' Is Glowing French Adaptation

By Burns Mantle.

Hedda. In New York some have added the Clare Eames study to that list, though Miss Eames' appearances have been few.

Now we have Miss Stevens. She, too, is an interesting Hedda, twitchy and a little detached, like her famous aunt. Having more youth and better looks than any of her predecessors, she brings a suggestion of youth to the part that helps explain her appeal to the men she teased, though it makes it less easy to understand her final renunciation of life through her overwrought disappointment in Lovborg, her disgust of Tesman, and her fear of Brack. Life would have had a stronger grip on this Hedda than the others.

You remember Huneker wrote of her: "She went through life with a chip of chastity on her shoulder, yet dare a man approach her, and she is in the throes of mock virtue." Miss Stevens is like that. But there is always a challenge in her eyes, too. You know the type.

Dudley Digges is an excellent Tesman, Frank Conroy a nicely insinuating Brack. Louis Calhern is the Lovborg and a little over anxious. Patricia Collinge seems some way to miss Mrs. Elvsted, although she tries most earnestly not to.

"Borkman" Revival Wins Praise.

The "Borkman" revival adds another feather to the Le Gallienne's plumed hat. Rather an inspiring thing to see this little actress step out in a crusade for what she considers to be better drama. And to see her put it over, as we express it in the square.

She is not, so far as I can judge, the inordinately vain type of actress. She does not feature herself at the expense of her fellows, or choose only those plays in which she can shine.

Her Hilda in "The Master Builder" is an outstanding part and she vibrates through it in spirited fashion. But her Ella in "Borkman" is the rôle of a sympathetic cadaver, an aging lady of thin gray hair and a parchment skin stretched white across high cheek bones—a perfect test of versatility perfectly met, in both the picture and the playing.

There are fine individual performances in this revival. An English woman, Helen Haye, plays Ella's twin sister, Gunhild Borkman, and the scenes between these two—Ella, the aunt, fighting for the love of the Borkman boy, Erhart, whom she has brought up and for what she believes to be his salvation, and Gunhild, the mother, determined to hold her son, however unwise or selfish her demand—are perfectly played.

Then, as you know, in steps the fascinating Fanny Wilton, a widow with wiles but no weeds, and quite easily takes Erhart away from both of them. Marian Warring-Manley, a stock lady newly come to Broadway, is this Fanny, and extremely nice.

The Borkman is Egon Brecher, a stolid, solid, guttural, intelligent German actor who visualizes the silk wolf satisfactorily and plays with considerable power.

Headliners in the Photoplay Month

By Mae Tinée.

[illegible] and that perhaps and probably—! Well . . .!] But I asked him then:

"And when you DO marry—well, have you a favorite type?" (Of all the bromide questions!)

He answered: "O, no, no, no! No—not Type—what is it? A matter of hair and skin and eyes. What matter? It's the woman, herself, who counts. If she has this, that, the other thing, she becomes THE ONE. If not, well, she is not that one. Simple."

"A home woman?"

"Decidedly. But I do not want a slavey. No, most decidedly not a slavey!"

"May she smoke, drink?"

"Surely, a cocktail, a glass of champagne. A cigaret—why not? But many of any of them, no. A woman should smell nice, always, and when she drinks and smokes to excess she does not."

And then we talked of the picture he's about to make, "The Son of the Sheik," and he told me the plot, which I shan't tell you—and of the film he wants to make eventually, but not now, because his admirers won't have him with a beard—"Cæsar Borgia." And as we talked I saw his suit was gray and fitted him like the paper on the wall; that his shirt was blue and white striped with self collar and cuffs; that his tie was purple and that he wore a gold slave bracelet, a wrist watch, two rings, one seal, the other with a red stone, and that his sideburns are more suggestion than reality.

And as he talked I realized he is quite as good looking as he appears on the screen, not, apparently, conceited, and that, really, I was liking him a lot. One thing in his favor is the fact that he has no false modesty—none of this "O, you flatter me" nonsense. He knows you know he knows he's an idol, and that's that.

We were getting real chummy when Mr. Ashcraft came back.

"Must go—got to talk on the radio at 6:30, you know, Mr. Valentino."

"And I was being so comfortable," said Rudy with a gracious smile and a flattering sigh. "O, well—and then there is dinner to eat and my dog to take out, and the luggage to tend to, and the train to catch——"

He rose and immured that famous figger in his coat of suede and opossum—serviceable but not especially snappy—and took his gray fedora in hand. I think it was a fedora.

"Good-by," he said. "I thank you. I have tried each time I came through to see you and have been lucky only once. I hope when I come back again, or if you come to California . . ." Fadeout.

Don't blame you for liking him, girls! So's your old critic!

See you tomorrow!

Voice of the Movie Fan

Pictures Which Impress

Dear Mae Tinée: I read daily with interest your comment on the pictures. I have no particular kick to register against the films. Some are good, and if some do not interest, why, I just don't linger.

The producers can't suit us all even part of the time.

Just from memory I am listing seven pictures which impressed me—impressed me, or I wouldn't remember them two days after seeing them—and I am wondering if you or your readers liked and remember them.

I'd like to see them all again:

"The Dictator," with Wallace Reid and Walter Long.

"Ruggles of Red Gap," with Edward Horton and Ernest Torrence.

"Enemies of Women," with Lionel Barrymore and Alma Rubens.

"Smilin' Through," with Norma Talmadge, Harrison Ford, and Wyndham Standing.

"Boy of Mine," with Irene Rich, Henry Walthall, Ben Alexander, and Rockliffe Fellowes.

"Tol'able David," with Richard Barthelmess and E. Torrence.

"Kindred of the Dust," with Miriam Cooper.

M. J.

"Lincoln" Was Best.

Dear Miss Tinée: I think "Abraham Lincoln" was the greatest picture ever screened. I shall never forget it. It was romantic, thrilling and wonderful—enough to amaze the whole country. During the performance I couldn't sit still but clapped till I could clap no longer. I have seen many pictures but none have thrilled me like this one. Perhaps it is because I admire Lincoln above all men.

Hurrah for the movies! I surely adore them all. I will not criticize them except I wish they'd have more like "Abraham Lincoln" and not so many modern ones.

As you can probably guess I am a girl of 14 and a movie fan. Mary Pickford and Douglas are my favorite movie stars.

Virgie.

Editor's note: It's refreshing to read a letter of such generous and unqualified approval, Virgie!

LEATRICE AND JACK STILL ARE FRIENDS

By Rosalind Shaffer

By Rosalind Shaffer.

HOLLYWOOD, Cal.—[Special Correspondence.]—The attractive center of much hand kissing, bowing, laughter, and smiles at the Montmartre on Friday proved to be Leatrice Joy, holding her own little court of merriment among her friends. A smoke blue frock of georgette with the modish high collar and long sleeves accented her dancing brown eyes, while a taffy colored slick straw hat sat perkily above the upturning black curls on each cheek. Leatrice is spending a vacation and returning to work this week and in addition is preparing for a two weeks' run on the legitimate stage at the local art theater called the Potboilers, in "The Children's Tragedy." This latter venture has Leatrice much enthused.

Leatrice and Jack Gilbert have been the subject of much gossip, speculation and surmise in Hollywood for they have accomplished the unattainable, a friendship after a divorce.

Some hurt was confessed by Leatrice in a personal chat because of stories, representing her as flighty and unable to make up her mind as to whether she loved Jack, or not, during their married life.

The real facts, she says, are that she and Jack, who is perhaps the screen's most romantic figure since his triple success in "The Mery Widow," "His Hour," and "The Big Parade," this year, were never suited to each other.

"No one knows more than I that Jack has lovable qualities and many admirable ones. I have seen him give up chances to gain advantages for himself, but he refused them because he said he would have to be a humbug. He is sincere to a fault. But his temperament is that of a poet living on the heights. He does not want to be annoyed with everyday things.

He Believed Her.

"When Mme. Glyn one time remonstrated with Jack for surrounding himself with the ordinary domestic background of a happy wife and baby she told him such a state of affairs was unthinkable for a romantic lover. I guess Jack believed her. Well, Mme. Glyn may have given the world a great actor, but at what a cost!" and Leatrice sighed.

Leatrice herself confesses her ambition has been to be successful as a woman first and an actress afterward. In other words, she is an apostle of normal and bourgeois ideals. Such a combination of temperaments as hers and Jack Gilbert's, Leatrice says, was impossible. But she and her romantic looking ex-husband make devoted friends. They even go out together occasionally to Hollywood affairs. Both certainly love their baby, which Jack visits frequently.

Leatrice is proud that the baby has Jack's curly hair. And that's not all. Young Miss Leatrice can do three dances, hold her nose when her father's acting ability is questioned and shake her head sadly when her mother's talents are inquired after.

Speaking of her early film days Leatrice tells of how delighted she was when she rehearsed with Mary Pickford's company in Mary's rôle, thus sparing Mary the exhaustion of rehearsals, to receive the reward of a personal "thank you" from Mary herself. She's never forgotten that thrill.

No Wig Would Do.

Mildred Harris's friends are mourning her hair—for she had to dye it black for a recent picture. A wig simply could not be found that would do, so all Mildred's lovely golden hair had to go into the dye pot. She liked it so little that she has bobbed it since, and though she is still charming without her famous long hair, everyone here is sighing over the lost locks.

The Chaplins seem to have the awfullest times over their babies. Lita told one reporter that she expects the sister to little Spencer Chaplin to be born in April. The same day her grandparents stoutly averred she expects her new baby in June.

Charlie Chaplin, they say, is getting all primed for another of his practical jokes. It is an old story now of how by raving over Josef Von Sternberg's "Salvation Hunters" he got Von Sternberg a contract with Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer and of how the black shirted, necktie hating "genius" was later released from that contract by Louis B. Mayer and his picture entirely remade.

Now Charlie has employed Von Sternberg to direct Edna Purviance for him in her next starring picture. The merry andrews hereabouts say Chaplin will make it a wonderful picture, doing most of the directing himself, and then will be able to turn to Mayer and say, "You see what I got out of this fellow!"

A recent meeting in the Montmartre was laden with interest to the beholders. Chaplin and his first wife, Mildred Harris, came face to face and cut each other dead.

Time Off For Wedding.

"I'm going to get married and have nine children," yelled Ricardo Cortez this week on his set at the Lasky studio. Yes, it was only part of his rôle, but part of it has come true since, for he married Alma Rubens in just the way every one expected—with no announcement, just dashing off to Riverside with enough friends to be witnesses. And it was back to the same set that he was obliged to go after the wedding and a brief celebration in the early afternoon at Alma's house. Cortez is making "The Cat's Pajamas" with Betty Bronson, and the set is the wings of an opera stage with Ricardo as the temperamental opera star.

The title is because of a black cat which stalks through the picture, the pet of Betty, who makes a cute pair of silk pajamas for the kitty. Much comedy ensues over the ludicrous adventures of our hero all brought about by the cat and the pajamas.

* *

Irene Rich's family got too homesick to stand it any longer and have returned to Irene and Hollywood. Irene's two daughters, Frances and Jane, were taken to Switzerland by their mother and placed in school there with Irene's mother, Mrs. Luther, to look after them. They couldn't stand being away from Irene, so back they've come.

CHICAGO SUNDAY TRIBUNE: DECEMBER 6. 1925.

Grocery chain increases sales $172,000 a month with Chicago Tribune advertising

Back in 1901, John R. Roney, present head of The Consumers Sanitary Coffee and Butter Stores, was earning a living driving a tea wagon. A year later he was successfully operating his first retail store. Today he is president of a concern of 178 grocery stores in Chicago and vicinity whose sales totaled $9,500,000 in 1925.

This remarkable success was not brought about without years of intensive effort. Mr. Roney had to first build an organization that could withstand the strain of excessively rapid expansion. Having accomplished this, he next began to concentrate his advertising in the one Chicago newspaper that would best insure the immediate sales success of each new store.

First Tribune Advertisement Results in 10% Increase

The Chicago Tribune was chosen to carry this advertising responsibility for two reasons; first because a test insertion of a double page advertisement in The Sunday Tribune resulted in a 10 per cent increase over the sales of the best previous week's business in the history of the company; second, because of the notable success scored with Tribune advertising in other lines of business. The Walgreen Drug Company, for example, by using Tribune advertising, builds up the sales volumes of its new stores in record time.

Between September 13, 1925, and January 1, 1926, The Consumers Stores placed 41,480 lines of advertising in The Chicago Tribune. The results of this campaign were so exceptional that Walter J. Roney, vice president in charge of advertising, wrote the letter to The Tribune facsimiled on this page. During the year 1925, Consumers opened 51 new stores in Chicago and vicinity. During the last four months, the period when The Tribune advertising began, 24 of these 51 stores were opened.

The Christmas week volume of sales of the 171 stores then in operation amounted to $250,788.09. This figure represents 74 per cent increase over the Christmas week business of the year previous, although the number of new stores opened during the intervening 12 months increased only 39 per cent.

The Consumers Sanitary Coffee and Butter Stores in 1926 will continue to expand in number and in volume of business per store. A large campaign of advertising has been scheduled in The Daily and Sunday Tribune during the coming year in order to build up uniformly large sales throughout each entire week.

Women Readers in 1925 Sent 270,453 Letters to The Tribune

Every grocery firm, whatever its size, must make its advertising appeal to women. And there is very definite proof of the tremendous reader interest in The Chicago Tribune among Chicago women. The table below shows the 1925 mail receipts of the various women feature departments of The Tribune. Note that more than a quarter of a million letters were received and that the Clotilde Pattern feature, requiring ten cents with every order, drew 153,663 requests.

This remarkable response from women readers proves that the Consumers Stores advertising is appearing in the newspaper that commands the respect and interest of its women readers. The excellent results of the advertising of grocery products though gratifying are therefore to be expected in a medium of the character of The Chicago Tribune.

Mail Receipts of the Women's Feature Department of The Tribune in 1925

Mae Tinee (Movies)	2,846 letters
Sally Joy Brown (Help for needy)	33,738 letters

If your business can stand similar expansion in 1926, call in a Tribune man at once. He will have a story and a plan that is sure to interest you.

5000 SOUTH HALSTED STREET

Chicago, January 27th, 1926.

Mr. William Donahue,
The Chicago Tribune,
435 N. Michigan Ave.,
Chicago Illinois.

Dear Sir:

On Sunday, September 13th, we startod an advertising campaign in The Chicago Tribune with a double page advertisement. The following Sunday, the 20th of September, we repeated with another double page ad. Since then, each consecutive week, we have run large advertisements in The Sunday Tribune. The results obtained over this period in our 178 retail grocery stores have shown such a wonderful increase that I thought you would be interested in them.

After the first double page ad our volume of sales increased 10% over the best previous week we ever had. Since the first ad, due to our consistent full page ads, our volume of business has increased $43,000.00 per week in sales over what it was previous to the time we started the advertising campaign in your newspaper.

Due to this great increase in our volume and the wonderful co-operation rendered through your service, it is our plan to continue to advertise in The Chicago Tribune.

Respectfully,
CONSUMERS SANITARY STORES.

Timmons of the First Church, St. Louis, who will speak in the Hyde Park church, 56th street and Dorchester avenue, on "The Opportunities of the Christian Ministry"; the Rev. Dwight J. Bradley, Webster Groves church, St. Louis, who will speak in the New England church, Delaware place and North Dearborn street, on "The Rewards of the Christian Ministry," while the Rev. John R. Heyworth, pastor of the New England church, will speak in St. Louis; Dr. Charles E. McKinley, Galesburg, will speak in the Bryn Mawr church, 7000 Jeffery avenue, and the Bryn Mawr pastor, the Rev. M. R. Boynton, will go to Galesburg; the Rev. Paul J. Bockhoven of Little Falls, Minn., will exchange with the Rev. Philip E. Gregory at the Morgan Park church; the Rev. W. Ernest Collins of Muskegon, Mich., will exchange with the Rev. W. H. North at the Warren Avenue church; Dr. Chester B. Emerson, North Woodward Avenue church, Detroit, will exchange with Dr. Edward A. Thompson at La Grange. Dr. Ozora S. Davis is chairman of the committee directing the exchange and the quest for suitable men for the Congregational ministry.

His honor Mayor William E. Dever and United States Senator William B. McKinley will speak next Thursday evening at the third dinner of the Presbyterian union at the Hotel La Salle. The chief address, however, will be made by Dr. John A. Marquis, New York City, on the subject, "The Greatest Romance in America."

Howard S. Williams, leader of the revival at Herrin, Ill., last year will begin today at 11 o'clock an evangelistic campaign at the Ogden Avenue Methodist Episcopal church, 68th street and Loomis boulevard, the Rev. Frank David Lawyer, pastor. An evening meeting tonight at 7:45 and every evening this week except Saturday will be held. M. Dow Mooney, soloist, and T. L. Bearse, pianist, will assist.

The dedication of the $220,000 community house of the Englewood Baptist church, Englewood and Stewart avenues, will be held today. Dr. Myron W. Haynes, a former pastor, will preach at 10:30. At 3 p. m. the Rev. C. G. Kindred, Englewood Christian church, and Dr. H. H. Hough, Englewood First Methodist Episcopal church, will speak. At 8 p. m. the speakers will be the pastor, Dr. Charles A. Brooks, and Dr. C. W. Gilkey, pastor of the Hyde Park Baptist church. Ceremonies began last week, as announced in THE TRIBUNE.

There will be a special musical program this evening at 8 at the St. James Methodist Episcopal church, 46th street and Ellis avenue, Dr. W. R. Wedderspoon, pastor.

The Congregational Training School for Women at 5756 Dorchester avenue will be merged with the Chicago Theological seminary, beginning June 15 next. The following committee will be an advisory board of directors: the Rev. J. W. F. Davies, Winnetka; John Stewart and Mrs. W. M. Fuller, Chicago; Miss Sallie A. McDermott, Oak Park, and Miss Charlotte Merrill, Hinsdale. Miss Margaret Taylor is dean of the training school. A property of $100,000 will thus be turned over to the seminary.

A Lincoln day celebration of unusual interest will be held today at the New First Congregational church, Washington and Ashland boulevards. Dr. William E. Barton, author of a life of Lincoln and one of the foremost authorities on the subject, will speak at both the morning and evening services. The united five choirs numbering 300 voices will sing patriotic music. The subjects are: "Abraham Lincoln, the Product and Prophet of Democracy," and "Abraham Lincoln and the American Ideal."

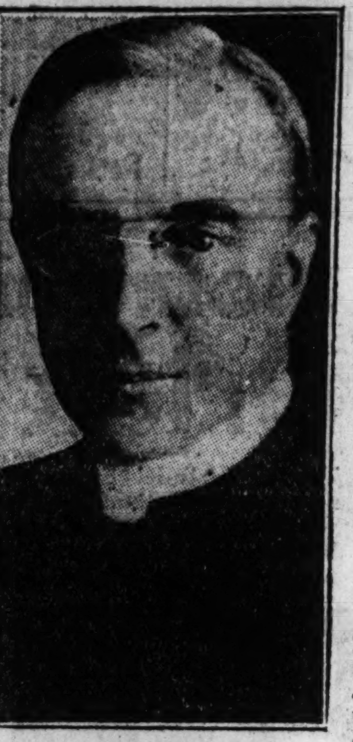
A Lincoln celebration will be held this evening at the Albany Park Methodist Episcopal church, Wilson and Albany avenues, the Rev. Howard P. Buxton, pastor. Boy and Girl Scouts, the American Legion and the Daughters of the Union Veterans of the Civil War will be special guests.

The Rev. John A. Sheahan, the Rev. Jerome Mulherin, and the Rev. Bonaventure Maguire, Servite fathers, are observing their silver jubilees. A first celebration was held at Our Lady of Sorrows monastery, 3121 Jackson boulevard, last Wednesday. Another will be held at the parish auditorium next Wednesday evening. Yesterday morning they were felicitated at the Columbus Memorial hospital, where Father Sheahan is chaplain. All three of the priests were Chicago boys. Father Maguire served as an army chaplain in the world war. Father Mulherin has spent nearly all of his twenty-five years of service at Our Lady of Sorrows parish.

Dr. Robert E. Speer will speak this evening at 8 at the Sunday Evening club at Orchestra hall on the subject, "Can Christ Really Help Men?" Clifford W. Barnes will speak at 7.

Mrs. Carrie Chapman Catt, internationally known suffragist and woman leader, will speak at 3 today at the Olympic theater on "The Causes and Cure of War." The meeting is under the auspices of the Chicago Forum, Fred A. Moore director, and discussion will be allowed.

SERMONS AND SERVICES in CHICAGO CHURCHES TODAY



THE REV. JOHN HENRY HOPKINS, D. D.

Dr. John Henry Hopkins is rector of the Church of the Redeemer, Episcopal, 56th street and Dorchester avenue, which will dedicate today a new $35,000 parish house. The Rt. Rev. Charles P. Anderson, bishop of Chicago, will preach the dedicatory sermon at 11 o'clock. A choir of 100 voices, with R. R. Birch as organist, will give a notable program of music. Dr. Hopkins is himself an accomplished player on the pipe organ and has made a lifelong study of music. The new building has an auditorium and stage, a large choir room, offices for the rector and secretary, guild and church schoolrooms, a dining room for 200, and in the basement a large kitchen and social room for boys. A memorial chapel to Henry Stephen Hawley, former senior warden, will be consecrated. The parish has 1,077 communicants and 1,500 baptized persons. Dr. Hopkins has been rector of the Redeemer parish 15 years and was formerly rector of the Church of the Epiphany for 10 years. Confidence

The results achieved by the Public Health Institute in its war against "Social" Diseases have won for it the confidence and good will of the entire public.

Working to alleviate human suffering and to check the spread of devastating venereal infections, it has brought better health, greater happiness and increased efficiency to thousands upon thousands of Chicagoans.

By giving reliable medical treatment at the lowest possible cost, the Public Health Institute has deservedly earned public friendship. Those who rejoice in their cure have told others, with the consequence that a large part of the Institute's new patients are recommended to it by satisfied former patients.

The remarkable growth of the Public Health Institute is graphically described at the left. Note that while it originally treated an average of only 77 patients daily, it is now treating more than 1,200 men, women and children every day.

The Institute's growth in the number of patients treated has been paralleled by its growth in facilities. Beginning in a tiny back room with only one physician and a clerk, it now maintains three complete clinics and employs thirty physicians, five woman nurses and thirty other employees.

The need for an organization such as the Public Health Institute is recognized by every right-thinking Chicagoan. For venereal diseases constitute one of the most dreaded menaces the city has to face. Often seemingly mild in themselves, they invariably result in untold misery unless promptly and properly treated.

Insanity, blindness, paralysis, sterility, still-born and defective children, pelvic disorders in women—these are only a few of the awful results of neglected "Social" Diseases. Deaths directly traceable to venereal infections reach the appalling total of 300,000 annually.

The alarm of this danger sounds for all who have become infected or are in any doubt regarding their condition. Delay is dangerous—prompt treatment will ordinarily effect a cure. Therefore you are urged to immediately consult a reputable physician or to come to the Public Health Institute for examination.

Being organized not for profit, the Institute's fees are low enough to be within the reach of all. Even those who lack immediate funds will not be turned away.

Bearing in mind that a "Social" Disease may be inherited, or otherwise innocently acquired, an occasional medical examination is advisable if only as a preventive measure. At the Public Health Institute you can be examined at small cost in surroundings of privacy and comfort. If found to be free from venereal infection, you will be discharged with a clean bill of health.

Mrs. William Campbell Taylor was Miss Constance Evelyn Long, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Frank E. Long of Oak Park until her marriage at 8 o'clock last evening to Mr. Taylor who is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Louis Sherman Taylor of 48 Cedar street.

Glancing Back Over Busy Social Winter

BY NANCY R——.

HERE we are well into the in-between season of the social year, the month when most fashionable folk shed the responsibility of their luxurious town houses and apartments, putting behind them —perhaps with a sigh of relief—the task of giving and attending large and elaborate functions, fleeing to milder climes and milder times.

A glance back over the excitements of an unusually busy winter mirrors a certain fact concerning what we are pleased to call society: the grand old business of entertaining is as important to the existence of society as are pods to peas. Show me a city without a well defined group of outstanding hosts, and I'll show you a city without society.

And what a host of hosts—and hostesses—we boast! The tradition of entertaining, not only one's friends, but the celebrated persons who visit Chicago each year, is a necessary and a cherished heritage—if we fall down on the job we are labeled forever and aye as provincial, and the standard is not the dollar sign. It's something far less concrete than that—taste, judgment, culture, all these and more go to make up the art.

Goals of the Ambitious.

There are certain Lake Shore drive houses that for years have been the goal of the socially ambitious, and the natural habitat and rendezvous of those who have arrived. The Potter Palmer house, for instance, was, several decades ago, universally acclaimed as the center of our little fashionable world. And the traditions of that first Mrs. Potter Palmer who reigned here as the leader of the smart set are being carried on faithfully by the Potter Palmers of this generation, two of the most charming, cultivated, and gentle of our Chicago hosts.

A little along to the north, the handsome mansion of Edward Blair may be pointed out as a gathering place for the elect. Mr. Blair presides there, a delightful and thoughtful host, drawing to his fireside prominent men and women from all the corners of the earth, whom he entertains in a way that those who partake of his hospitality can never forget.

South again to the pair of fine old houses that flank the east end of Bellevue place at the drive, those of Mrs. Rockefeller McCormick and Mrs. Walter Borden. The latter chatelaine has been away much of the last eight or nine months, but when she is in town, her drawing rooms are frequented by the interesting men and women of Chicago and other fashionable metropoli.

Mrs. Rockefeller McCormick's gold luncheons are becoming quite the acme of formal entertaining here in our Windy burg. To be invited to one of them is assurance of that standing that's so desirable if one goes in for social doings at all.

"Gold Luncheons" Are Memorable.

She is the only Chicago hostess to own and use a complete solid gold service (hence the name, "gold luncheons," for those rare occasions when it is in use!) and the beauty of hers is matched by the elegance and perfection of her entertaining.

Tales of the large gold luncheon given last spring by Mrs. McCormick are still in the air, and last Sunday she gave another, this time for the Max Masons, the new president of the University of Chicago and his wife, who have slid into a niche so entirely theirs that it might almost have been tagged "reserved."

There were more than 50 guests seated Sunday at a great T-shaped table that stretched from the reception room into the great Empire room, the list including Mrs. Stanley Field, Mrs. Moses Wentworth, Mrs. Arthur Ryerson, Mrs. Henry Flower, the Joseph Colemans, the Watson Blairs [who departed this week for a month in Florida, by the bye], the Charles Strobels, the Samuel Insulls, the Augustus Peabodys, the Albert A. Michelsons, the Harry Pratt Judsons, the Thomas Hindes, the Arthur Meekers, the Frederick Stocks, the James Simpsons, the Alfred Grangers, the Edward Swifts, the Walter Kirks, the Frederick H. Rawsons, the J. Hamilton Lewises, the Wheeler Williams, the John Crerars, the Leroy Fullers, the Rudolph Steinbachs, Col. and Mrs. Oscar Solbert, Harold Swift, Col. Voevodsky, James Keeley, Horace Oakley, Arthur Upham Pope, Dr. Ackerman and Edwin Krenn.

For the Smart Ménage.

Apropos gold service, have you heard one of the newest wrinkles for smart ménages? Plated gold instead of solid flat silver—I'm told that it's being made with a finish that doesn't have to be polished all the time [that bugaboo of young bride-housekeepers with small establishments!] and it's not only extremely effective but isn't expensive. A certain fond uncle sent a set of it to a neice for a wedding present recently, and it's been the most admired gift on her table.

But to return to our eminent hostesses.

Mrs. Arthur Ryerson has a fine faculty for collecting personages at her house at 2700 Lake View avenue, and her dinners, Sunday luncheons, and teas are flavored with that most appetizing of sauces, excellent and brilliant conversation, the fruit of brilliant minds and world culture.

The Joseph Colemans, too, must have a place in the list of our foremost hosts—their Rush street house is one of the most delightful spots in town and Mrs. Coleman's skill in planning unusual and tempting dishes makes her table a famous one. Add to this the Coleman keenness of vision and gift of friendship, and you have an unbeatable combination. They, too, specialize in Sunday luncheons, to which our haut monde is invited during the winter.

VITRAUX PRINTS

An interesting development at the Paris Exposition of Decorative Arts—patterned after the delicate color harmonies of modern stained glass windows.

SILKS—SECOND FLOOR

The designers of Vitraux Prints have fully considered the demands of utility. These vigorous, dynamic designs are especially suited to the modern two-piece sports mode of printed jumper over a skirt of white, or harmonizing color. The restraint of coloring and the unexpected contrasts of soft, mellow beauty make Vitraux Prints very wearable in the form of refreshing negligees or stunning afternoon frocks.

NEWS OF CHICAGO SOCIETY

and one absorbing interests of Mrs. Kellogg Fairbank have not dimmed at all her prowess as a hostess; instead, they add to it, and the great dinners given in the North State parkway domicile of the Fairbanks' are always high lights in a crowded season. And speaking of highlights, the 1875 party given this winter by the Walter Brewsters for the Roy McWilliamses, will never be forgotten. Which reminds me that Chicago lost a pair of true hosts when Mr. and Mrs. McWilliams moved away from here, to settle abroad. Their entertainments were always of the most chic and memorable.

An Outstanding Figure.

Whenever I ramble mentally through the list of Chicago women whose outstanding qualities make them outstanding figures, I come to one who has, I think, done more than perhaps any one else for her friends here—Mrs. William Prescott Hunt. Less than two years ago she lost her eyesight, an affliction so terrible that it would have downed a less splendid, indomitable spirit.

Mrs. Hunt rose above it immediately—it must have taken almost superhuman effort in those first dark days to carry on as she and hers have always done to play their part in life here, but no one ever heard her complain. She is to be seen everywhere, at dinners, at teas, at the theater and the opera, at luncheon—her husband and her sister, Miss Marie J. Rozet, have been her eyes, while she [I am sure they will agree] has been their spirit.

Lovely looking always, Mrs. Hunt has an added something now that makes her one of the most conspicuously lovely women wherever she is. At the gala performance of the Opera company, I thought I had never seen any one more beautiful as she sat in a box listening to the music. Her soft, smooth, white hair, the turquoise blue gown that matched her eyes, her tranquil expression, her youthful complexion made her stand out in a circle of beautiful women.

The old Hunt house at 1006 North La Salle has long been one of the landmarks of fashionable Chicago. It is filled with a wonderful collection of family heirlooms, the treasures of generation after generation, assembled there and lived with, almost the only property that things can possess that makes them truly valuable, as well as interesting.

Athletic Club News.

From Mrs. E. R. Fifield comes much news concerning the Illinois Women's Athletic club, and the announcement that Mrs. Medill McCormick will head the executive committee of the special underwriting campaign. At a tea given last week by Mrs. Joseph G. Coleman at the Arts club, Mrs. McCormick enlisted the support of many of the women of the city who have heretofore been silent members of the club. Mrs. Frederick Rawson, Mrs. George Halleck Taylor, Mrs. William Yager, Mrs. Orville Babcock, Mrs. Edward Leight, Mrs. Weymouth Kirkland, Mrs. Roy Keehn, Mrs. William Curley, and Mrs. George Jaeger are among those assisting Mrs. McCormick, who, with Mrs. Fifield and Mrs. Coleman, have laid out the underwriting details. In this new program there will be no more solicitation of memberships; instead, several women have pledged themselves to the cause, and have underwritten 5, 10, or 20 memberships. These will be held by them, and the roster of the club closed.

Several women have been appointed to the board of admissions, a group that will function in passing upon the desirability of the applicants for these underwritten memberships. They will be held for some time and sold to friends at a later date. In this manner the necessary atmosphere will be maintained to make this club one of the most attractive here.

Historical Society Celebrates.

In February more than in any other month of the year, the Chicago Historical society comes into its own, for the origin of this interesting organization is inextricably bound up with the debut of Abraham Lincoln as a figure of national importance. The incorporators of the society ['way back in the spring of 1856] were friends of Lincoln, and later his ardent supporters for the presidency.

WOMEN'S CLUB PAGE

Renaissance Club Devoted to the Arts

THE annual view day of the Renaissance, a club conducted solely in the interest of art, will be held tomorrow at the Art institute. Mrs. Louis Neebe, a member and herself an artist, will be the guide and interpolator, and Mrs. Joseph P. Jond will be hostess in charge.

On the second Monday in February each year the members hold this reception and luncheon, after which a tour of the galleries is made.

The Renaissance holds the unique distinction of being the only real "art club" in the city. It was organized in 1915, the object being the study of historical art and the fine arts. Since that time much has been done by the members in the furthering of these arts.

Twenty per cent of the club's funds go annually to the encouragement of young artists. In years past this money has been used in the purchase of pictures from exhibits of Chicago artists, in prizes for meritorious work, an endowment in the school of metal craft and jewelry in the Art institute, the purchase of designs and patterns to be hung on the walls of the class room, contributions to the children's room, buying French aquatints to be hung in the Art institute, and for scholarships. This year a substantial sum has been voted for a scholarship and for slides for the Ryerson gallery. These slides are lent to various schools for use in educational work.

The club has a membership of over 200, meeting on its lecture days in the clubroom of the Art institute, on its music and drama days at the Edgewater Beach hotel. In addition to the study of the five arts, music, painting, sculpture, architecture, and drama, there is another interesting feature in the club's activities, the outings. These outings are arranged by the outing committee, trips being planned to the forest preserve, the sand dunes, to the studios and unusual haunts of artists in the city. The members are always accompanied on these trips by a guide schooled in the work.

The club has memberships in the Outdoor Art league, the Municipal Art league, the Drama league, the Chicago Band association, the Civic Music Association of Chicago, the Chicago Public School Art society, and the Apollo club.

The officers of the Renaissance are: Mrs. James McAlear, president; Mr. James P. Latto and Mrs. Ernest I. Dresher, vice presidents; Mrs. William H. Mullen, recording secretary; Mrs. Arthur W. Payne, corresponding secretary; Mrs. Clarence Nelson, treasurer.

MRS. HARRY J. ILETT. [Moffett Photo.] MISS PEARL FRANKLIN. [Toloff Photo.] MRS. JAMES McALEAR. [Ray Huff-Richter Photo.]

The annual drive for funds to carry on the work of the Hadassah organization in Palestine will be opened on Wednesday with an open meeting at the Woman's City club. Miss Pearl Franklin is president of the Chicago unit, an account of its activities being given in the club notes today.

Members of The Renaissance, an organization conducted in the interest of the fine arts, will have the annual view day and luncheon tomorrow at the Art institute. Mrs. James McAlear is president of the club.

DOWNTOWN CLUBS

A meeting of interest will be held on Tuesday at the Morrison hotel, when two departments of the Illinois Federation of Women's clubs, those of child welfare and education, will cooperate in a health education program for the "runabout child." It is the plan of these departments that each club woman in the state shall assume her personal responsibility in the examination of these dependent children. Formation of child study classes is being urged and is working out on a splendid basis with the coördination of interest of these two important sections of the state federation. Dr. Lena K. Sadler and Mrs. Grant Beebe are the leaders of the two departments under whose supervision Tuesday's program will be held.

President Max Mason of the University of Chicago will speak on "The New Era of Science" on Wednesday afternoon before the Chicago Woman's club. CLUB ETHICS

By Maude Swalm Evans.

"DID you enjoy your meeting the other night?" the member of the Arco club asked the member of the Haven club. "I read an announcement of it and thought it sounded splendid."

"You can't always go by sounds," replied the Haven club member. "I thought it was going to be fine, too, and I took some friends with me who were as anxious as I to hear the city hall speakers. Out of the four scheduled, only one appeared."

"Did the chairman forget to invite the others to the party, or to set the date?"

"She asked them, and she expected them until it was too late for hope. She played up the music and the one speaker, and encouraged discussion, but the audience felt it had been brought out under false pretenses."

"I'll warrant the one speaker felt the same way. Did you find out why the others didn't appear?"

"One forgot; another said he'd gone to the wrong place, and the third had somehow put down the wrong date."

"It looks like mismanagement somewhere."

"Lack of management, rather. Our regular program chairman was sick and she appointed one of the members of her committee to put the thing through. The substitute was too little experienced to know that with speakers, especially those who give their services, you have to use a follow-up system if you want them on hand at the right time."

"Follow-up is right," concurred the Arco member. "I've put through many a program, and I've had my speakers on hand, paid and unpaid. I never just ask them and then stop, especially if they're not paid, although I've known paid speakers to forget dates. I call them up several days before the meeting and remind them of the engagement, and if I have any doubts I call up again the day of the meeting and tell them I'm expecting them. I repeat the date and the place and the hour each time. It seldom fails."

Hadassah Opens Tithing Campaign

MISS HORTENSE L. PFAELZER

Miss Hortense L. Pfaelzer is president of the junior auxiliary of the mothers' aid of the Chicago Lying-In hospital and dispensary, which will give a bridge and mah jongg party on Friday at the Cooper-Carlton hotel. The proceeds will be used for the dispensary milk fund.

THE Chicago Hadassah chapter will hold an open meeting on Wednesday at 2:30 o'clock at the Woman's City club, when Mrs. Felix Levy will be the speaker. This meeting will mark the opening of the "tithe campaign," a drive for funds to maintain the work of the organization in Palestine.

Effective in the extreme has been the work of American Jews in health work in Palestine, and Hadassah leads in this important field. In 1924 alone the American units kept five hospitals in Jerusalem, Haifa, Tel Awiw, and Safed, with 300 to 325 beds and 3 clinics with approximately 100,000 cases; and with the help of another American body, the committee of American Jewish physicians, Hadassah has opened the Roentgen Institute of X-Ray in Jerusalem, which later will be affiliated with the Hebrew university.

In the Hadassah Nurses' Training school, the largest in the land, 50 young girls have been trained to the badly needed profession of nurses. The staff has risen from 44 in 1918 to 429 in 1924, including 63 physicians, and the total expenditure of Hadassah in the six years has amounted to almost $3,000,000. Practically the whole Jewish health service in the Holy Land is under the control of this organization.

Infant welfare stations, orphan work, work for the prevention of trachoma in school children, and the preparation of school luncheons for safeguarding the health of children are among other activities taken care of in the organization program. The Hadassah sewing circles also supply the hospital linens and clothing, which are sent from America at stated periods and which help greatly in the maintenance of decent clothing standards.

Miss Pearl Franklin, president of the Chicago chapter, heads the drive for funds which begins this week. Other officers include Mrs. Bertha Read, Mrs. Alexander Dushkin, and Mrs. Harry Berkman, vice presidents; Mrs. Leon Sager, corresponding secretary; Mrs. Harry Kahn, financial secretary; Mrs. Eli Daiches, recording secretary; and Mrs. Simon H. Soboroff, treasurer.

· ART AND ARTISTS ·

Nothing Exciting in Chicago Show

By Inez Cunningham.

THERE is nothing exciting to report about the annual Exhibition of Artists of Chicago and vicinity which opened Thursday at the Art institute. There is the usual roster of names which have come to mean certain things to Chicagoans, and there is a usual sprinkling of esprit—no more. But there is, I think, more than usual leniency with artists who have a modernistic trend, so, after all, that's a little exciting, isn't it?

The awarding of prizes, however, is more than usually usual. It reminds one of nothing so much as a game of cards in which some players are consistently lucky, and there is about as much justice in it, and as much interest. Many of the prizes cannot be awarded more than once, and yet there are a great many prizes, and they can be shuffled about. The worst of it is that it's honorable, and probably sincere, on the part of the jury, and yet it is the most uninspired artists who usually get the prizes.

Those are rewarded who paint nothing too well, or, rather, to be perfectly understood, I should say who paint nothing and paint it too well. For instance, this is Frederic Grant's record for advertising Italy (as well as any one could do for Coral Gables): Prizes 1919, 1924, 1926; Pauline Palmer, for making life size valentines and other confections, prizes 1916, 1918, 1920, 1926, and in 1924 for a picture called "Just Us"; Carl Krafft, prizes 1920, 1921, 1925.

There are several other artists with the same kind of records, but somehow they don't seem to hit one in the eye quite so forcibly. There are exceptions, too; for instance, Anthony Angarola, who has been on the list three times, keeps on improving.

Even though the show is not exciting you won't be disappointed because usual things do not disappoint—you won't be disappointed if you don't find the smoke all cleared out of Chicago tomorrow and you will be pleased if you find the sun shining through in spots, and so there are some interesting things at the Art institute. Some of your old favorites are improving, and some are working conscientiously and well, and you will be as glad to see their pictures, I suppose, as you are to see familiar faces that you pass upon the streets.

Harold Betts is showing a new sureness; Stark Davis has a picture of a bird and a dragon fly that his fans will adore; Helga Dean has made a beautiful color harmony of her portrait of a young girl. She has blended the wood shades of the hair and the wood shades of the wall excellently. Cecil Clark Davis' portrait of Mrs. Armitage Whitman is done with her usual cleverness. Jessie Botke is making picturesque the barnyard, as she will this time every year. Martin Henning's thorough, but middle aged, enjoyment of the sunshine and the saner beauties is always good to see.

William H. Savin has accomplished something much to his credit by painting two pictures of Capri and one of Florence without getting sentimental about it. William Schwartz has several pictures, and while I don't know what he's getting at, I like them because they make me feel he is getting at something which is definite in his own mind, and if it isn't definite in the pictures it will be anon.

Indiana Gyberson has two of her always pleasing jewel-like paintings which really are worth while to me, since they seem to be the succinct expression of rather clear and beautiful thought.

Frederic Tellander has learned a great deal of paint and also of nature since he first had a picture in the Chicago Artists shows, but he does not convince one of an original viewpoint as he used to do. Perhaps this is only a phase, or perhaps he will have to unlearn some of his skill—his facility is too apparent.

J. Cestmir Svoboda had two interesting small pictures, clear of style and beautifully painted.

About the sculpture in the exhibition, of which there is little, more next week, and also about the etchings and the Arts club exhibition.

And now I'd like to talk about "The Miracle" and I think it belongs in this column more than anywhere else, since it is a gallery of pictures by that master of stage design Mr. Norman Bel Geddes. Mr. Geddes is a genius, his work is in Chicago for a limited time, and no one who loves art can afford to miss seeing what he has done in "The Miracle." He has worked and suffered and sacrificed for this accomplishment.

When he began his career he had no means of support while he was looking for work in the theater. He went about from place to place trying to get some kind of job that would give him enough to eat, and time to work out his own ideas, and learn his profession.

He worked at odd jobs in an advertising agency. He often went hungry and must often have been cold, since he was never adequately clothed. For a long time he was sustained only by the conviction that he must give his best, and warmed only by the fires of hope.

He had the courage to face hardship, and poverty, and even scorn, and it takes courage for the scorn of emperors is not as biting as the raucous kidding that the middle west saves for her artists in the days of their developing. But he has arrived; the incalculable beauty of "The Miracle" proclaims him a great artist of the theater.

In the imaginative rightness and the just exaggerations of the costumes and settings he has evoked for us not only the middle ages but the very spirit of pantomime. To Morris Gest and Max Reinhardt and the rest come, like strong wine, the hand clappings of the world, but would they have made that atrocious midvictorian auditorium into the beautiful abstraction that we shall call CATHEDRAL without Norman Bel Geddes?

Not across the theater aisles, but across the centuries come the taper-bearing processions and vanish not into the wings but into our memories to make a holy light there forever. All that ever dimly glowed through the pages of our histories, through the voices of our teachers, through the relics in our museums, through the music in our churches, through our travels and wanderings, everything that has ever touched our imagination with fire to see medieval Europe is answered by a living voice in "The Miracle."

For one evening of the most glowing make believe we are part of a great pageant of a great past. For a while we know what it must have been to live in the great days when men were happy because they imagined they were important in the sight of God, in the days when one could repent, in the days when there was sin and not glands, when there was love, and lust, and faith, and not just science and organized charity. All this Norman Bel Geddes has evoked in his great stage pictures. Go and see them for then you will see, too, how well he tends the lamp of beauty, and while there is beauty we have one emotion in common with all our forefathers—hope.

NEWS AND GOSSIP OF NEW YORK SOCIETY

Palm Beach Starts Innovation in Dress

By Grace Robinson.

NEW YORK. — [Special Correspondence.] — Is Palm Beach about to let down the bars in the matter of dress? Reports percolating to this city from the smart New York colony in Florida tell of a new grill which is excessively fashionable. But the rule for correct evening attire, formerly universal in Palm Beach's public places, is omitted. This will cause great delight in the younger set which frequently finds the sartorial change between the Cocoanut Grove tea dance and the dinner hour irksome and inconvenient.

Palm Beach has always been the great parade ground of America. Bankers from small towns in the middle west, who at home never put on their tuxedo from one year's end to the other, come to the Florida resort and exhibit the latest in lapels and the newest wrinkle in dress shirts. They would rather be dropped at the end of the Breakers pier, weighted with a 1,000 pound stone, than to appear in the lobby of the Royal Poinciana hotel after 6 p. m. turned out in golf knickers.

As for women—not only would the average female hotel visitor faint at the thought of being inappropriately attired in the evening, but she would grow positively pale at visions of wearing the same costume at luncheon that she had worn at the breakfast table. Many of the young women who go to Palm Beach with their mothers never repeat a costume during a stay of several weeks.

Gown for Each Meal.

At breakfast the proper young woman living at one of the big hostelries wears possibly a plaited skirt and overblouse, or a simple silk sport frock. She does not dream of appearing at the luncheon table in the same outfit, although to effect a change after the bathing hour and in time for luncheon calls for head work akin to the strategy of Napoleon.

The midday meal, in her estimation, requires habiliments suggestive of afternoon, but not as elaborate as the furbishings for a tea dance. Consequently, something plaited and slightly beruffled, with flowered hat and bracelets is worn in honor of the lukewarm consommé and dried up fish the negro waiter ostentatiously doles out to her.

All guests at the hotels go to the tea dance at the beautiful Cocoanut Grove which is situated on the shore of Lake Worth and glorified by the blood red beauty of the setting sun. One must be lacey and extremely high heeled and large hatted to be correct here. At least, that is the opinion of most of the pretty young things who go and who, exhilarated by a couple of highballs, and the moaning saxophones, and the delicious beauty of the place, manage to stir the pulses of the most jaded males.

Then, at night, one is a total waste unless appareled in the most ravishing evening gown obtainable, with a Spanish shawl wrap trailing its fringes along the graveled pathways. Many, many jewels are the only permissible accompaniment, of course, to the moonlight turnout.

Some Free Thinkers Extant.

There are a few independent, free thinking souls who, while subscribing to the rudiments of correct costuming, refuse to be ground down to the niceties of a strict sartorial régime. Muriel McCormick, for instance, is never lacey and large hatted at the Cocoanut Grove. The best she does for this daily recurring marvel of beauty and fashion is to don a rather tailored white crêpe de chine frock and to forget her hat.

While Miss McCormick, granddaughter of John D. Rockefeller, scorns to worry about the hourly exigencies of dress, the lesser lights who gaze on her with awe are more concerned with one hat than the harvester heiress is with a whole wardrobe.

The vast Flagler interests which started and made Palm Beach are largely responsible for this clothes consciousness. And the encouragement of the proper garments at the proper time has done much to lend tone and color to the most brilliant and interesting resort in America.

At the beach during the noon bathing hour the arrival of every female is greeted by the cold and appraising stare of all the women—and many of the men—who have already ensconced themselves on the white sand.

Curiosity Impels.

Many visit the beach, acknowledging they go merely to see the fashion parade. They are in the same state of mind and quiver with the same expectation of seeing a spectacle as those thousands enjoy who go every year to watch New York's traditional Easter Sunday parade on Fifth avenue.

What Fifi Widener Leidy will wear today, the hat Mrs. Howard Pardee will affect, the novelties in stockings and garters to be viewed this morning on almost any careless flapper—this constitutes the pleasant sensation of expectation with which most of the feminine sand lizards approach the daily sunning.

The particular anxiety about donning evening clothes at the exact moment of six and of having evening clothes in readiness to don, has sent many merrymakers into spasms of exasperation.

One may linger too long in the balmy twilight of a stroll along the lake trail. Or one may find the fascination of the rolling ocean viewed from the snug recesses of a chummy roadster too great for sudden detachment. To live on a schedule in Palm Beach is to throw out the window the greatest charm of the place—relaxation and reverie.

It is those who give themselves up to such pleasures—those who take their Palm Beach easily and naturally that will find the restaurant "where we don't have to dress" a pleasant retreat.

Pomp Attends Charity Ball.

New York's 1926 Charity ball is now an event of the past. It was held recently at the Waldorf-Astoria with all the outward pomp that traditionally appertains to this annual dance.

As usual, there was a grand march, which gave all the officers of the ball a chance to appear in the limelight, along with the navy and army officers who were invited.

Mrs. John S. Rogers, new president of the ball, was a stately figure marching with Gen. Charles P. Summerall at the head of the long procession.

Mrs. Charles B. Alexander, wearing her enormous diamonds, which were second in radiance only to Mrs. Alexander's perennial auburn hair, marched behind the leaders. Mrs. Alexander was born a Crocker and by virtue of that surname came into a vast fortune dug up in California by her father, who was a forty-niner. She is a person of great importance in New York society. Her house is next to the great chateau that the elder Mrs. Cornelius Vanderbilt recently abandoned.

Many believe Mrs. Alexander, if she chose, could queen it in New York society after the manner of the late and once all-powerful Mrs. William Astor.

Next in the vanguard at the dance came Mrs. Frank S. Witherbee with her escort. Mrs. Witherbee belongs to the solid and excessively dignified group constituting society's fundamentalists. Her name is never among those giving luncheons in the smart Park avenue restaurants. But every year during Lent the world of newspaper readers hears about her. At that season she heads a sewing circle which sitches feverishly for charity.

The proceeds of her work go to the New York nursery and Child's hospital, an institution which has the support of scores of the most affluent social registerites. The Charity ball profits also go to assist this project.

For many years this dance lost its appeal for the majority of the very persons relied upon to make it a success. The money came in, to be sure. Everybody in the world, socially speaking, bought tickets. But when the great night came, the expected collection of notables proved to be largely an aggregation of butlers, chauffeurs, and upstairs girls. The important personages who had bought tickets felt they had fulfilled their obligation when they handed over their money. They endured no qualms when they tossed the important bits of pasteboard to the household servants with the suggestion, "Go and have a good time."

Restoring Prestige.

In the last two or three years the important matrons who love the Charity ball have made frantic efforts to restore its ancient prestige. The result this year was noticeable. A presentable showing of society turned out. And although the charity in the matter of gaiety cannot be classed with the Beaux Arts revel, it was by no means a function to shun.

Gardening on Fifth Avenue.

The million dollar garden that will bloom in the spring and brighten the rather staid thoroughfare known as upper Fifth avenue, is already arousing pleasurable expectation in the hearts of New York's smart set. Thomas Fortune Ryan is responsible for this innovation. It sounds like the reckless gesture of a French king. It is, in reality, only an enlargement of a garden which for years has flourished adjacent to his imposing town house at 858 Fifth avenue.

The public was thrilled recently when the real estate columns informed the world that Ryan had purchased the old Charles Yerkes residence and would tear down the building, transforming the site into a garden.

People did not realize the Ryan mansion was already famous for that rarity in New York—a lawn and flower beds. Indeed, the friends of Mr. and Mrs. Ryan, and the friends of their vivacious daughters, Adele and Virginia, have often drunk tea in this pleasant retreat. Their immediate surroundings, on such occassion, were as green and fragrant as the tracts surrounding the mansions of the Four Hundred at Newport. And yet only a few yards away—on the other side of a hedge—the noise and bustle of a great New York thoroughfare clattered by.

The late Andrew Carnegie, builder of libraries and lover of things Scotch, had a garden. It is still pointed out by the crowds that float up Fifth avenue in green busses.

It showed the rich owner's taste for growing things, people said, which undoubtedly was true. Even a superlatively rich man must love nature with a genuine affection before he will turn soil, worth its weight in gold dust, into beds of flowers, which he can order, cut, from the florist at a great saving of shekels.

Other Expensive Plots.

The late Henry Clay Frick also had a garden, and it was considered the last word in luxury.

Mrs. Cornelius Vanderbilt—the dowager Mrs. Vanderbilt—who recently sold her French chateau at 57th street and moved farther up the avenue, once had a patch of ground which passed for a garden. It was surrounded by a high iron fence. Loud were the lamentations at various times when the street was widened, with consequent paring of the great lady's bit of green.

With increasing depredations of business uptown, resulting in complete abandonment of spacious town houses by many rich New Yorkers, it was considered a great mark of affluence, indeed, when Ryan recently acquired even more land for his hobby.

Invitations to Ryan teas will now be in greater demand than ever. A garden in New York is a social asset because it represents overpowering wealth.

From THE OUTLINE OF SCIENCE

EDITED BY Professor J. ARTHUR THOMSON

THE EINSTEIN THEORY.

LET us see what some of the startling ideas of Einstein are which have upset many of our fixed notions about things. We have been taught that parallel lines never meet, that the shortest distance between two points is represented by a straight line. According to the Einstein theory what we think are straight lines are "really" curved lines. We shall understand this point better later on. Meanwhile, suppose you draw a straight line on a sheet of paper. To you, looking only at the paper, the point of the pencil will have travelled in a straight line of, suppose, a foot long in a second. To an observer in the sun it will have moved through space, not only with the motion of your hand, but through the vast curve of the earth's spin round its axis, and the still vaster curve of its rotation round the sun. Where you see a short straight line he will see a curve some 40 miles in length. Which is right? Both. The distance, as well as the straightness or curvature, described by a moving point is relative—they depend on the observer.

Motion and direction are relative—they depend on the observer. A body alone in empty space cannot be said, with any meaning, to be in motion; for motion implies that it is getting nearer to, or farther from, some other point. Again, if there are two such bodies which start moving side by side, but at different speeds, an observer on the swifter body will see the other apparently receding from him. To an outside observer it will appear to be following in his wake. Which is right? Both. Motion and direction are relative—they depend on the observer.

If you were sitting in a railway carriage with the window blinds drawn, the train running smoothly on a straight track with unchanging velocity, you would find it impossible to tell by any mechanical means whether the train was moving or not. You cannot detect in such circumstances any motion without reference to some outside object. Further, you may have noticed that if you look through the car window at a passing train on an adjoining line you are unable to tell whether that train or your own is in motion. In this way we are often puzzled to say whether some train is moving with us, or against us, or standing still. All motion is relative.

All this is preliminary—we shall see the bearing on Einstein's argument later.

Space also is a matter of relativity. What would become of space if you took everything out of it? It would have no meaning; we cannot form any idea of empty space. There is no such thing as absolute space. If the whole of our visible universe were compressed into the size of an orange, we should be quite unaware of any change. Our measures, reduced in proportion, would still, for example, show the sun to be 93 million miles away. Size is relative—it depends on the observer.

Time and Reality.

And so with time. Has it any reality? "What would become of time if nothing ever happened?" Time is merely a local affair. As the measuring rod creates space, so it is clocks which create time. We cannot form any idea of absolute time or of absolute space. As we shall see, we make a wrong supposition if we suppose that an interval of time and an interval of space between two given phenomena are always the same for every observer, whatsoever and whatever the conditions of observation may be.

We cannot measure time itself—we can only measure it by the motion of something over a space, as a clock hand or a planet. But, as we have seen, motion and space are not real existences but relative. They depend on the observer, and so does time.

If some malicious spirit were to amuse itself by making all the phenomena of the universe a thousand times slower we should not, when we wake, have any means of detecting the change. Yet every hour recorded by our watches would be a thousand times longer than hours had previously been. Men would have lived a thousand times as long, yet they would be unaware of the fact.

We shall see in a moment that time and space, according to Einstein's theory, are to be regarded as mere properties which we ascribe to objects.

One more point: "the dimensions of an object, its shape, the apparent space occupied by it, depend upon its velocity"; the size and shape of any body depend upon the rate and direction of its movement.

One of the most revolutionary things about the Einstein theory has to do with Newton's Law of Gravity.

A New View of Gravity.

Einstein thinks gravity is not, as Newton held, a force, but a property of space. That all the effects of gravity may exist where there is no attraction is best shown by his own striking illustration. Imagine a chamber, like that of the projectile in Jules Verne's story, alone and motionless in empty space. A passenger therein will have no weight—his feet will not press downward on the floor. If he throws a ball into the air it will rise to the roof and remain there—there is no force of attraction to bring it down again. A weight hanging on a spring-balance will not stretch the spring. Now suppose the chamber begins to move with a velocity which is continually increasing at the same rate as that of a body falling on the earth. The floor will press upward against the passenger's feet; it will catch up the ball, which will appear to be falling; the balance, drawn upwards against the inertia of the weight, will measure its amount precisely. There is no possible experiment which the passenger can make which will show him whether the projectile is moving with an accelerated motion or whether it is at rest, as we imagine we are, on the surface of an attracting body. This last, indeed, is what he will imagine. But he may be under a complete illusion—and so may we.

This is Einstein's "Theory of Equivalence." It shows gravitation may have more than one explanation. And this leads us to his own explanation, which is an altogether new one.

Newton thought the apple fell because the earth exerts upon it an attractive force. Einstein considers it falls because, wherever there is matter, space itself is curved, just as the space we see in a very slightly concave mirror, where there are no straight lines at all, and where, if any body is in motion, it must move along a curve. Suppose a man in a closed room discovers that a marble placed anywhere against a wall rolls towards a hassock in the center of the room, it will appear to him that the hassock is attracting it. Yet the fact may be that the floor is slightly concave, like a very shallow basin, and the hassock has no connection whatsoever with the motion of the marble. Just in the same way the earth may have no direct connection with the falling of the apple, though it seems to us to be the cause of it. We are asked to believe space is curved, that all things moving through it move in curves—all things including light. Einstein's theory asserts that the actual reality which underlies all the manifestations we experience in the physical universe is a blend of time, space, and matter. This trinity is comprised in one actual reality. All bodies move through space-time; and they move in the straightest possible tracks; motion is merely simultaneous change of position in space and time. Einstein's theory explains gravitation as distortion of the world of space-time due to the presence of material objects. He does not explain how or why a body can distort space-time; the theory explains gravity, not as a force of nature, but as a property of space time.

On Einstein's view of gravitation, the earth moves in an elliptical path around the sun, not because a force is acting on it, but because the world of space-time is so disturbed by the presence of the sun that the path of least time through space is the elliptical path observed. There is therefore no need to introduce any idea of "force" of gravitation.

The more matter is present, the more space is curved. And so it happens that the light from a star just behind the sun will come bending round it, like a train round a railway curve, and fall upon our eyes or cameras—that is, when the sun's glare is shut out during an eclipse—and we can see or photograph the star. It will appear to be shifted from its true position—how far shifted, Einstein has worked out. At the last eclipse the stars appeared where he had predicted.

One of the great difficulties of Einstein's theory is, of course, the assumption that space is curved, so that "straight lines" in this curved space are not the straight lines that Euclid talks about. But we can see how this may be possible if we first consider the matter in a simple form

Let us imagine intelligent creatures who exist in only two dimensions, i. e., they have length and breadth, but no thickness—a sort of very intelligent flat-fish. Suppose they exist on a plane—like the surface of this sheet of paper. Then the geometry they construct will be like Euclid's. They will find, for instance, that a space cannot be enclosed by two straight lines. You must have at least three straight lines [a triangle] to enclose a space. And they will see that a straight line can go on for ever and ever. Also it will be quite easy for them to draw any number of lines parallel to one another. But now suppose these little flat creatures are transported to the surface of a sphere. What sort of geometry will they now construct?

Now, first of all, we must remember that, by hypothesis, they have no notion of a third dimension. They cannot go inside or outside their sphere

From THE OUTLINE of SCIENCE

Edited by Prof. J. Arthur Thomson

They have no notion that any space exists except the actual surface of their sphere. What will they call a straight line? They will say that a straight line is the shortest distance between two points. Well, let us take any two points on the surface of the sphere and join them by the shortest line, keeping to the surface of the sphere. This line will be, from our three-dimensional point of view, an arc of a circle. And no parallel "straight" lines can be drawn to it by the creatures on the sphere. Further, let us select two points at opposite ends of a diameter of the sphere. Through these two points an infinite number of half circles can be drawn, all of the same length and all shorter than any other kinds of curves uniting these two points. That is to say, from the point of view of the flat inhabitants, an infinite number of different "straight lines" pass through these two points. And any two of these straight lines enclose a space—just as any two lines of longitude on the earth, running from the North to the South Poles, enclose a space. Now these properties of the straight line contradict the axioms of Euclid. The geometry developed by these creatures will not be Euclid's geometry.

If they are very expert geometricians they will say their space must be curved—as we know it is. And they will be able to measure how much their space is curved by making measurements on the figures they can draw. Now what Einstein asks us to do is to imagine something similar about our own space. Actual measurements of our space show that its geometry is not Euclidean. We can, therefore, as if by analogy, talk about the curvature of our space.

Now there is another important analogy between our space and the surface of the sphere. What happens to a "straight line" on the sphere when it is produced? It goes all round the sphere and comes back to the point it started from. It cannot, that is to say, go on for ever and ever. The curvature of the surface bends it round. The space these creatures live in is a finite space—it does not go on for ever and ever. At the same time it is unbounded—there are no barriers. The flat creatures can wander about in their space as long as they like without ever meeting an obstacle to their further progress. Nevertheless, although unbounded, their space is not infinite. Einstein says that the same distinction holds good of our space. Our space, he says, is finite; the ray of light from a star would go on until it went all round the universe and came back to its starting point. But our space is also unbounded. We could wander about in it forever; we should never come to a notice saying "Thus far and no farther." But when we had wandered far enough, going quite "straight" as it would appear to us, we should come back to our starting point.

Such are some of the revolutionary ideas imported by Einstein's theory. Let us now discuss this theory a little more closely.

The Theory of Relativity.

Einstein's theory of relativity is probably the most profound and far reaching application of mathematics to the phenomena of the material universe that the world has ever known. Yet in spite of the very abstruse nature of the theory it is no paradox to say that its object is to give us a simpler, a less sophisticated, view of the universe. We are sometimes apt to forget that the human consciousness is a very complicated and highly developed thing. Our minds represent a development that has extended through hundreds of thousands of years. It is very likely that some of the ideas which seem to us simplest are really complicated abstractions; the race has built up certain ideas because it found it useful to build them up in that way. We now take those ideas for granted, but that does not alter the fact that they are elaborate and, in a way, artificial constructions. It often requires as much, or greater, insight to analyze our ideas into their primitive constituents, as to build up still more complicated ideas on the basis of them.

Now the chief characteristic of Einstein's theory is that it takes us behind our present ideas about space, time and matter, to the primitive reality out of which we have built up those ideas. We can see the nature of the theory most clearly if we begin at the end. Imagine some entirely fresh, inexperienced intelligence to be suddenly put in a field in our world on a summer day. This intelligence has at first a general awareness of the field, and everything in it, as a whole. We will suppose that this intelligence is essentially a human intelligence, and that after a little it begins to discriminate. It beings to distinguish parts of the field from other parts of the field. What sort of discrimination will this be? The intelligence will be aware of itself and of the field. We suppose the intelligence has a body; this will give it, as it were, a center to work from. It will begin to distinguish between here and there. Suppose the intelligence has been watching a wasp on a flower. The wasp and the flower make just one indivisible whole for it. The whole thing—wasp and flower—is there. Presently the wasp detaches itself from the flower and settles on the hand of the intelligence. Part of the object that was there is now here. And if the wasp now stings the hand of the intelligence this event will occur after the wasp had formed one object with the flower. Here and there, before and after, introduce the notions of space and time. And if the intelligence agreed that the same wasp appeared on his hand as was on the flower, he would obtain the idea of objects that persisted in space and time—that were the same at different parts of space and at different points of time. He would thus begin to form the notion of matter.

The Fourth Dimension.

Now we do not profess that this is an accurate account of how much an intelligence would split up the primitive reality into space, time, and matter, nor do we say that this is the actual path that has been pursued by the intelligence which culminates in man. We have introduced this illustration to give the reader some preliminary inkling of what is meant when we say that Einstein's theory has combined space, time, and matter into one unity. If the main idea is once grasped, however imperfectly, the way to understanding the broad outlines of the theory is made easy, although the details can only be followed by skilled mathematicians. The theory asserts that the actual reality which underlies all the manifestations we experience is neither spatial nor temporal nor material, but a blend of all three. It is we who have split up the original unity into the three entirely different things we call space, time, and matter, and we have performed this feat either because it was a very useful way of dealing with reality, or because our minds could not function in any other way.

Einstein's theory states that, from the point of view of science, there is no essential difference between time and the three "dimensions" (length, breadth, thickness) of space. Science is not concerned with our feelings about the differences. Before and after appears to us as a much more fundamental difference than before or behind, above or below, right or left. But Einstein has proved that time enters into physical phenomena in the same way as the directions in space. That is what is meant by saying that the world is four-dimensional. Everything which happens, happens somewhere at some time. Two events are separated from one another not only by their position in space but by their position in time. Now all this is fairly elementary. But Einstein takes us a big step further. He asked a question which nobody had asked till then. Is the space and time interval which separates two events the same for everybody?

"BURGLARS"

When the burglar came, what happened? Were you scared and did you show it or—were you brave and did he know it? We will pay $1 for each burglar story printed. Write of your experience to the Burglar Contest Editor, The Tribune, Chicago.

Caught in a Closet.

A few years ago my young brother and my cousin were always trying to play jokes on the different members of the household, so when I went to my closet to get a dress I put my hand on some one's head. I was not surprised. Thinking it was one of the boys, I said nothing, but just locked the door and waited for him to try the door to get out.

Still there was no response, and to my great surprise when I got downstairs both of the boys were there.

Then it was my turn to be surprised. I told the family what I had done. At first they thought I was dreaming, but finally my mother called a policeman, and in this way a sneak thief who had committed several burglaries around town was captured. G. C.

Clever Grandmother.

My grandmother used to live in a small town which was practically free from such modern conveniences as banks and policemen. She kept her cash box, which was never actually full, in a cavity in the cellar wall, where one of the stones had loosened.

One night a burglar entered the cellar window without disturbing any of the family. He went to the first floor and took a flat looking, but practically empty pocketbook from the cupboard and left without examining its contents.

The next morning grandmother looked for the money box and found the loose stone which hid it had been knocked out on the floor, but the box was safe. M. E. L.

While They Slept.

A few years ago a street carnival was in progress near our apartment. We had taken a walk early in the evening to enjoy the bright lights and shop windows.

Returning, we went to bed about 11 o'clock. The night passed quietly for us, although we were to learn later that an intruder had entered our flat and stealthily prowled all over the place, taking what cash he could find, but nothing more.

When morning came we discovered doors and windows wide open, household articles in disorder, and a trail of matches, leading from a small pantry window, through the living room and past our bed. And was I delighted I did not wake?

We have been thankful ever since! K. H.

Only a Cat.

We lived in a small country town with no police protection. My mother, being a nervous person, was always hearing things. My father's business called him away from home often.

We were several of us and one night my mother awakened the older ones, on account of a noise in the kitchen. A cousin who stayed with us armed himself with a poker and my brother had some other household weapon in preparation for the expected burglar.

When we talked all was quiet. When we were quiet the noise was plain. Of course excitement reigned, and all sat in a bunch afraid to move.

As we all sat in this awed state my father, who was a fearless person, came and immediately after being informed of our fright went into the kitchen to find that the cat had pulled a bone of meat from the oven to the floor and as she picked at it the thumping noise resulted. C. E. Y.

Warned.

In a dream I was warned that I had forgotten to hide my money. I awoke, went into the next room, removed $50 from my purse, and hid it under a chair cushion.

Within the next 15 minutes I heard a noise in the other room and saw a light flashed two or three times. I climbed from my bed and screamed as loudly as I could, as I was alone downstairs.

The burglar fled, taking my purse, which contained some small change. My $50 was safe—not three feet away from the table where my purse had been. E. M.

THE CHEEKIEST PERSON I EVER MET

Send us a short, to the point, reminiscence of the cheekiest person you ever met, and we'll pay you $1 for it if we print it. All letters must be addressed to the Cheekiest Person Editor, The Tribune, Chicago.

Completing the Gift.

I hope the man we think is the cheekiest person in the world reads this.

He paid so much for his radio he couldn't afford a battery, so we lent him one.

When the battery was run down he brought it into our basement, hooked our charger on it, connected it to our electric light socket, and left word to let him know when it was charged, with no word as to reimbursement.

What could be cheekier? M. E. T.

Furnish the Supplies.

The cheekiest person I know is our next door neighbor. She was ill for some time, so my young sister used to go in and do the dishes, sweep up, and buy groceries.

After she got well, one day when my sister was over she said, "I'm awfully grateful to you for all you have done for me and so if you go home and ask your mother for some sugar, milk, and butter I'll make you some candy."

Wasn't that cheeky, when her larder was full? D. C.

Outwitted.

My neighbor, Mrs. Smith, had a habit of using my telephone for social calls. Not wishing to embarras her or break our acquaintance, I had a nickel phone installed.

Imagine my surprise when Mrs. Smith came in one morning and said "Lend me some nickels, I want to use your phone." V. de M.

Embarrassing Moments

The Tribune will pay $1 for every letter published on "The Most Embarrassing Moment of My Life." Address Embarrassing Moment, The Tribune, Chicago. Write on one side of the paper. No manuscripts returned.

Caught in His Own Trap.

I belong to a merchant's noon day club, which holds its luncheons each week. We had a few members who were in the habit of coming late each time, so we decided to break them of the habit. As our tables were arranged in the form of a triangle, we fixed up a goods box and an old barrel for the late comer to sit and eat upon. We, the early arrivals, could scarcely await the day of the luncheon.

The day arrived, but I forgot all about it. I phoned my wife I would not be home to lunch as I was trying to finish some work and would work right straight through. I did so and about 12:30 I remembered this club day and rushed up to the hall. The proverbial beet had nothing on my face when I remembered the trap I had set for the other fellow would ensnare me.

Teaching Them to Beg.

The time I was most ashamed of myself was when visiting a kindergarten. During a recess the children gathered around me, and one of them said, "Give me a penny?"

As I had a lot of change from street car conductors, I thoughtlessly began handing it out, for as soon as I handed out one penny, there were a lot of little hands outstretched.

Suddenly the teacher walked up; she made the little ones return the money, and took me by the arm and marched me out of the room.

She said, "Are you teaching my children to be professional beggars?"

"It was thoughtless of me," I said. "I know I should not thank any one for giving pennies to my children, especially if they asked for them. I am sorry."

I could see she felt like a mother to those children. She forgave me, and I was permitted to go back and see the rest of the morning's program. MRS. F. C. H.

Looked Alike.

My girl friend had been staying at my house, and as we were of the same build we decided to change clothes for one evening. We attended a dance while so dressed.

We had just finished dancing and were standing side by side in a little alcove. My girl friend's fiancé came along, and seeing us only from the back, decided I was she, so he instantly came up and put his arm around me.

Imagine my embarrassment and chagrin when I could not make my friend believe this had not been going on behind her back. J. LA F.

They Understood.

On a trip to the west I purchased, in a San Francisco curio shop, a filigree silver pin with Chinese symbols.

Upon my return home I wore this odd pin when we were entertaining friends at a chop suey place. The first waiter spied my pin and immediately his face puffed up as if he had a mouthful of hot soup. He retreated to the kitchen.

Another Chinaman came with the next course. He looked at the pin and walked quickly away. I think every Chinaman in the place came to our table on some excuse or other, the pin having the same effect on each.

My husband called the proprietor and asked him the cause of the commotion. He hesitated a moment and then said, "No tell-ee ladie, no tell-ee lad-ee."

I do not wear my pin in public any more. M. L. B.

"Keeping Pace With the Growth of CHICAGO"

The New Morrison, when completed, will be the world's largest and tallest hotel, 46 stories high, with 3,400 rooms.

Luxury with Economy at the World's Tallest Hotel

A CONDITION without parallel exists at the Morrison—the utmost luxury and convenience, combined with a greater moderation in rates than exists at any other hotel of foremost standing. It is due to the location, and the saving made possible by valuable store subleases.

1,944 Rooms, $2.50 Up—Each With Bath

The revenues drawn from subleased stores pay all the ground rent, and the total saving is passed on to the guests. It is therefore possible to engage rooms at the Morrison for $3 to $5 appointed and furnished in a manner that would mean a rent of $5 to $8 elsewhere.

Special Features of Service

Every room in the Morrison has bath, circulating ice water and Servidor. The last named insures absolute privacy—no contact with hotel employees when laundry, etc., is sent out or returned; all callers can be observed through the "grille" before being admitted. There is a housekeeper on every floor. Garage service for every guest. A thermometer outside each window.

Health Belongs to Go-Getters!

Health is physical success. Some of the healthiest specimens in the world didn't have any health at all to begin with. They simply went out and got it! and Atlantic City is the greatest spot on earth to find it. It's just a gold mine of energy and exhilaration—and if you add the indoor sea-pool bathing, the comforts, the luxuries, and the fine eating at The Ambassador, you have a combination that'll put you right up on your toes!

Go to Europe the American Way

THE SIX SHIPS of the United States Lines fleet are your own ships. They differ from other ships in the same way that first class American hotels differ from other hotels. Their service is thorough, their comfort unsurpassed and their cuisine the best on the North Atlantic.

Cabin Class from $145

There are no first or second class distinctions on any of the four United States Lines cabin ships. The freedom of the entire vessel is yours. The "President Harding" and "President Roosevelt" are the fastest cabin steamers to Europe, and the "America" is the largest. The "Republic" rates are from $140.

First Class from $210

This is the minimum first class rate on the "George Washington" whose beautiful Colonial furniture and refined atmosphere have endeared it to so many. First class on the mighty "Leviathan," flagship of the fleet and most famous ship in the world, from $265.

2d Class from $136.25

For this modest sum you can enjoy the very substantial comfort of second cabin on the "George Washington." Similar accommodations on the "Leviathan" from $147.50. Commodious staterooms, long broad decks, deep-carpeted lounges.

Third Class from $85

Economical travel at its best. Two, four and six-berth staterooms, snowy linen, courteous service and the best food. Rates vary with choice of port and ship.

A SALESMAN.

Let's forget for the time being that you are a Salesman seeking a new connection and that we are a big organization serving over 17,000 concerns in American business today. Let's get our heads together and see what there is about our big Plan that is making these concerns renew and buy it year after year.

We cut pay roll losses—we cut overhead expense—we increase production—we not only promise to do it, we DO IT, and we carry proof of these statements over the signatures of Executives who are recognized and respected the country over.

Right now our 90 representatives are earning 100% more than they ever earned before in their previous positions, and they will earn still more in commissions, as our Users are clamoring to renew their contracts.

Due to several promotions in the ranks of our Sales force, whereby we promoted Salesmen to Executive positions, we are now ready to fill up these ranks with men who can qualify for work such as ours.

These men must be between the ages of thirty and forty years—must be able to call on Chief Executive Heads in business—must be able to dominate and sell on the first interview. These men must have a background showing an earning capacity of $5,000 per year or more. They must have the ability to convince Mr. Executive, and they carry unquestionable proof to cover any statements or claim they may make

We can place a man in a central west territory that is now open, under exclusive contract with full credit on all renewal business to be secured in this territory—thereby putting him immediately into an earning capacity from $10,000 to $20,000 a year, which is the sum our average man is earning in this business.

Unless you mean business and feel that your past Sales experience measures up to the standard that we require in this work, do not waste your time or our time, but if you do measure up, let's get down to cases and get some immediate action. Phone Mr. P. W. Medley, Superior 0855, or address O L 304, Tribune.

ANNOUNCEMENT.

Mr. J. D. Phillips has just returned from a very enjoyable trip to Hollywood-by-the-Sea, Fla., and has been appointed Assistant Director of Sales for Hollywood-By-The-Sea, with headquarters at 108 W. Madison-st.

Hollywood is the most beautiful and wonderful city of this age, located in the land of enchantment and opportunity where great fortunes have already been made. You don't have to sell lots or land, just a trip or vacation to Hollywood.

Many of our salesmen earn large sums of money every week. Why? Because we have a marvelous selling system backed up by a national advertising campaign which brings us in hundreds of leads. Hollywood has the unequaled reputation of having grown from nothing four years ago to a city of approximately 20,000 population today.

$10,000,000 in hotels. $15,000,000 being spent in the Hollywood Harbor project, which is being built by Gen. Goethals, the man who built the Panama canal.

Salesmen, friends and acquaintances of Mr. Phillips are invited to call upon him and learn our story. We need Good Salesmen.

ROBERT BARR.

Suite 820. 110 S. Dearborn-st.

AT ONCE.

Full or part time salesmen to sell north woods. Full co-operation and desirable leads given. This is an opportunity to connect with an old time organization where success is certain in a big way if you will work and follow our advice. Apply Monday 9 to 4, 4554 Broadway, Room 252.

ATTENTION!

If all of the people in Chicago who followed the "L" to prosperity were to club together they could buy the city half a dozen subways.

The boom that followed the "L" into Wilson-av., Howard-av., Kimball and Lawrence was nothing compared to what is beginning to come off along the new WESTCHESTER "L" extension. In the first days of "L" extension not every one could afford to make real estate investments. Now even newsboys are speculating in it. EVERYBODY IS INTERESTED IN A CHANCE TO TURN SOME MONEY INTO MORE MONEY VIA THE OLD RELIABLE REAL ESTATE ROUTE, and you do not have to talk long in order to convince them that the best way to do it is to buy where the "L" goes.

The tracks are laid, the stations are in, and trains will be running in early spring. A $100,000,000 building program is laid out for this district. Our property lies at the first station site on the new rapid transit, within 30 minutes of the loop.

Come out and help us sell it. If you have never sold real estate before now is the time to start making some real money for yourself.

Part time salespeople will be shown as much consideration as full time workers.

Here is a chance to jump in and work for a few months and make as much as you would ordinarily make in the course of several years.

See us at once. We have leads waiting to be taken care of.

15—SALESMEN—15
IMMEDIATELY.

If you are not employed now and in a position to go to work at once I can use you. I am organizing a new department for my firm which means happiness to the men I select. Some of these men will be men who have been wandering about for months, and possibly years, accomplishing nothing.

The 15 men I hire will be put in a permanent department and be given a life-long position with independence. I will furnish a high grade sedan for business use and a thoroughly experienced manager to teach you our work. Promotion will come rapidly to the 15 men I select.

I organized another department less than six months ago and several of these men who started at that time have now been promoted to Sales Managers, taking them entirely out of the salaried class and putting them into positions ranging in earnings from $100 to $250 per week.

You must be over 25 years old. You must live on the North, Northwest, or West Side. You must be neat in appearance; you must have a grade school education; you should have lived in Chicago at least one year; you must be out of a job and ready to work at once. Call for an interview from 10 a. m. to 4 p. m. Monday.

Expenses paid by myself. Call in person after 10 a. m. until 5 p. m. Monday and ask for

WHY

Sloman Motors

JORDAN DEALERS

Sell Used Cars

I can hardly conceive any one standing face to face with the remarkable used car values available today at our store and yet not ask himself: Is it any wonder that values such as these do not remain here long?

Walter E. Sloman,
PRESIDENT.

We believe in value for immediate delivery, a quick turnover, and in passing on to the public the savings in reduced overhead expense. That is why there is no "dead stock" here. It is evidence that every car offered is a "sound value," in many instances from $100 to $800 below prevailing prices.

Our customers come to us from all sections of Chicago; not a few have traveled 20 to 75 miles to buy a car here. Value is not difficult to find, once the way is pointed out.

Rolls-Royce

Distinctive Motor Cars AT Decided Savings

ROLLS-ROYCE PALL MALL, 4 passenger phaeton model; carefully driven only 1,390 miles by one of Chicago's most prominent citizens, who recently exchanged it on one of our closed models; naturally this car has every appearance of brand new, the tires are without mar or blemish and it carries our regular three year guarantee. The body which is finished in Rolls-Royce dark blue with gold striping, is exceedingly attractive and interesting. The equipment, upholstery and in fact every detail shows absolutely no signs of wear. The super Rolls-Royce equipment includes bumpers front and rear, 6 wire wheels and tires, automatic windshield wiper spotlight, etc. We invite early inspection by those parties interested in this type of motor car transportation. We are particularly fortunate in being able to offer this unusual Rolls-Royce at such a substantial saving, as it cost new delivered and equipped over $14,000. We now offer it at a saving of $4,000; only $10,000.

PACKARD STRAIGHT 8 SEDAN LIMOUSINE, with every appearance of new, having been carefully driven on Chicago's boulevards 10,294 miles. [This is the actual mileage.] The excellent care afforded this automobile is easily shown by the condition of every detail. The coach cloth is without signs of use or wear, as well as other interior appointments. The all equipment is very complete, including bumpers front and rear, step and kick plates, spare tire and cover, etc. We feel that a printed description will not do justice to this beautiful car, and therefore suggest an early call and trial ride, at which time you will easily appreciate the wonderful riding qualities and appearance. A very special value at only $2,500.

Your present car accepted in trade. Satisfactory terms can be arranged without expensive financing charges, which seem so customary in the automobile business.

Chicago shoe firms increase sales by concentrating in The Tribune

Chicago shoe stores during 1925 placed more advertising in the six week day issues of The Chicago Tribune than in any other newspaper, morning or evening, in the city. And The Tribune's total shoe lineage, daily and Sunday, showed a healthy gain in 1925 of 69,817 lines over the 1924 total.

O'Connor and Goldberg operate nine retail stores in Chicago. "What we think of The Tribune as a sales builder," says Mr. O'Connor, "is expressed in an expenditure of an appropriation in The Tribune alone equivalent to our appropriation for the other papers combined."

Martin and Martin, operators of two high class shoe stores in Chicago, last year placed 13,641 lines of advertising in The Tribune. This lineage constitutes practically an exclusive Tribune campaign, as the one other Chicago newspaper used during the year printed only 904 lines of advertising.

"We consider our advertising in The Chicago Tribune in 1925 as very successful," says Mr. A. F. Martin, "and we are looking forward to greater results in 1926 from a larger use of The Tribune."

In January, last year, Feltman and Curme, a national shoe firm now operating 16 stores in Chicago, conducted their annual January sales with enviable success. No Tribune advertising, however, was used. This year on Sunday, January 3, 1926, a full page advertisement of Feltman and Curme's told readers of The Chicago Tribune about this year's January sale. The Feltman and Curme sales during the next day, Monday, January 4th, showed a 50 per cent increase over the sales of the first day of the 1925 January sale. Inasmuch as The Tribune was the only Chicago paper used to announce this sale, Mr. Charles Feltman, vice president and general manager of this firm, believes The Tribune to be largely responsible for the great increase in business.

There were many other interesting Tribune advertising successes scored by Chicago shoe merchants during 1925. In all, the shoe merchants of Chicago placed 361,236 lines of shoe store advertising in the daily issues alone of The Tribune last year. This figure represents a six-days-against-six leadership of 106,481 lines over the newspaper with the next highest lineage, the Chicago Daily News. The total lineage of The Tribune, daily and Sunday, amounted to 462,989 lines, a figure almost twice as large as the total shoe store lineage of the second newspaper.

The following table shows how Chicago shoe stores placed their advertising in 1925:

NEWSPAPERS	DAILY LINEAGE	SUNDAY LINEAGE	TOTAL
The Chicago Tribune	361,236	101,753	462,989
The Daily News	254,755		254,755
Chicago American	226,472		226,472
Herald and Examiner	74,663	58,941	133,604
Post	72,435		72,435
Journal	4,425		4,425

The above figures were taken from the Advertising Record Company, an independent audit bureau.

Only one conclusion can be drawn from these facts and figures. They prove that the merchants of Chicago who specialize in selling shoes fully realize that The Chicago Tribune is their outstanding advertising medium.

More than 200 imitators

Because of its UNPARALLELED success in the care of the hair

WHAT a proof of its popularity, of its fine results in keeping the hair healthy, are the over 200 imitators who have tried to gain for themselves part of its great success!

The reason Ed. Pinaud's Eau de Quinine is more used than any other hair tonic is because it does the two things that specialists now say will keep your hair free of dandruff, luxuriant, beautiful.

Prevent dandruff, the cause of baldness, with Ed. Pinaud treatments

FIRST—the scalp must be disinfected regularly, as dandruff—the cause of almost all hair troubles—is an infectious disease.

SECOND—the hair must be nourished, and a vigorous flow of blood set up through the scalp.

These two things Ed. Pinaud's Eau de Quinine is especially designed to do.

It contains the ideal disinfectant for the scalp. Mild and harmless, it kills the dandruff germs more effectively than any other known preparation. It removes dandruff scales, and keeps the scalp antiseptically clean between shampoos.

Keep your hair soft and manageable with this treatment

Special ingredients in Ed. Pinaud's Eau de Quinine have an active stimulating effect on the scalp and on the small muscles and blood vessels. They feed the hair roots and glands, making the hair grow strong, luxuriant and glossy.

BEGIN TODAY to give your hair the beauty it was meant to have. Every druggist and department store has Ed. Pinaud's Eau de Quinine Hair Tonic. Each bottle bears the signature of Ed. Pinaud. Pinaud Incorporated, 90 Fifth Avenue, New York, sole distributors for Parfumerie Ed. Pinaud, Paris.

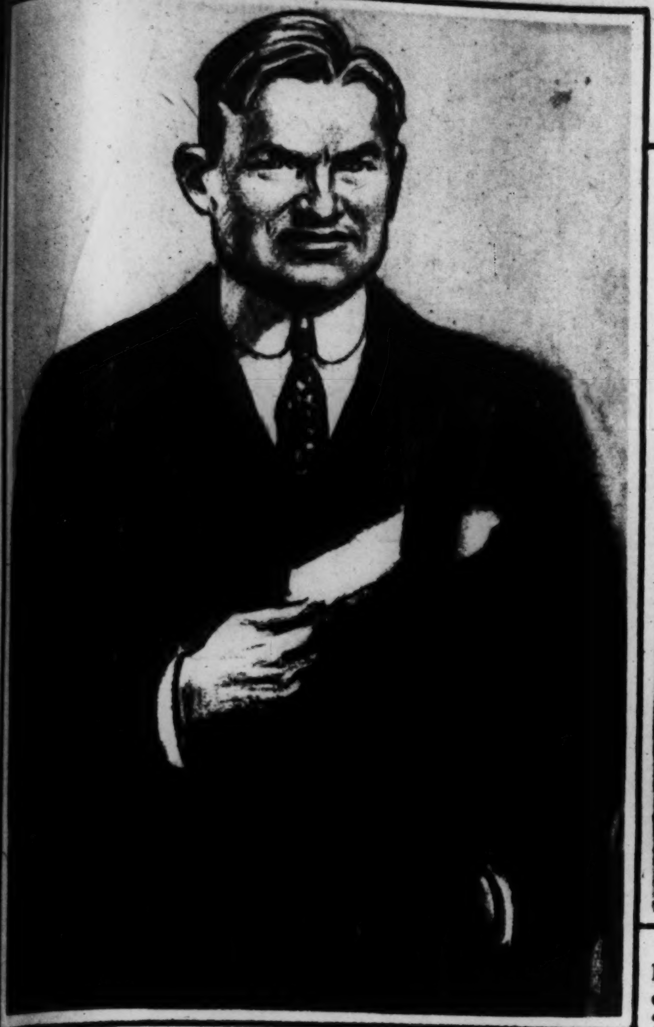
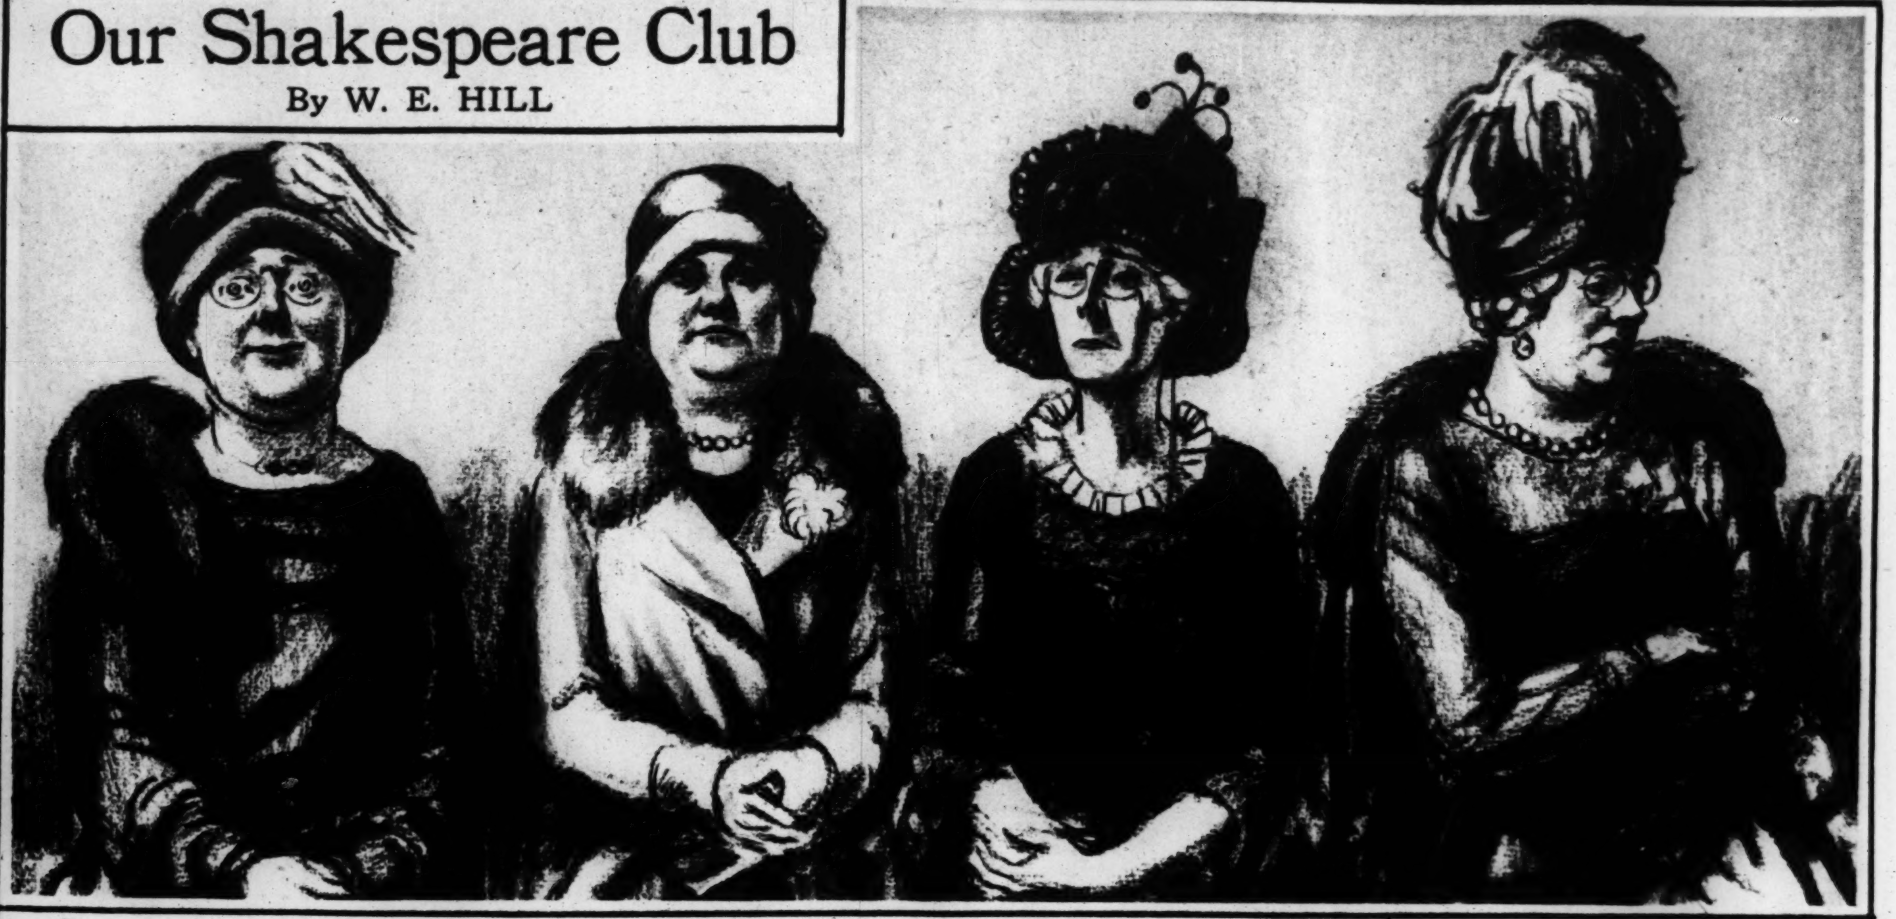
Our Shakespeare Club

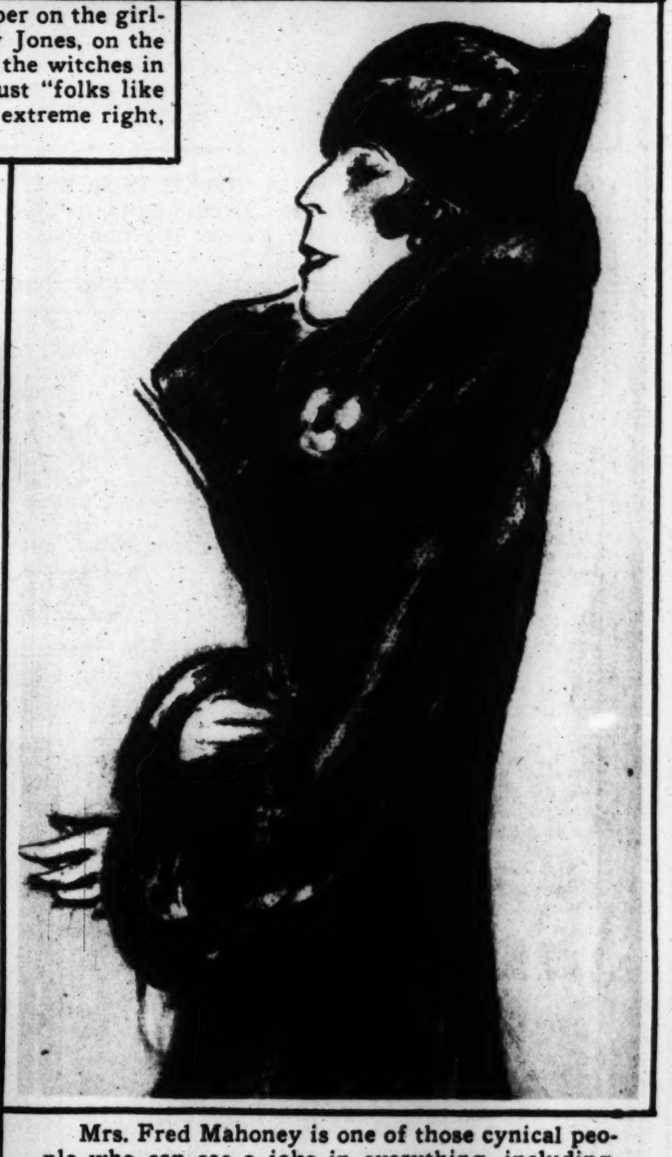
By W. E. HILL



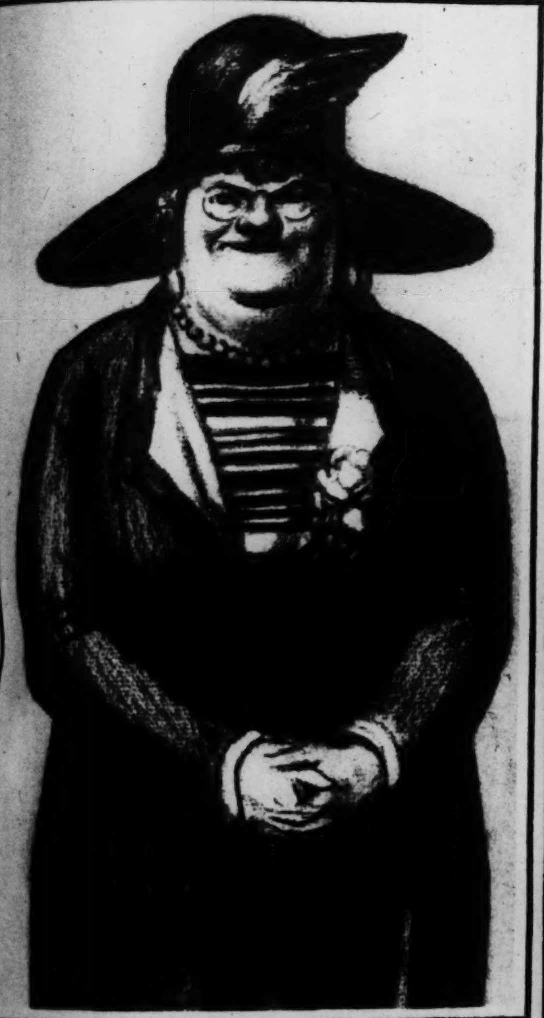
The guest of honor this afternoon is Channing O. Otis, author of that doughty book, "Statistical Survey of the Anthracite Industry." Sometimes visiting celebrities are not as Shakespearean as one could wish, but then—next week Mr. Mullen, press representative of "Abie's Irish Rose," will speak on Shakespearean diction, and the club members are very happy over it.



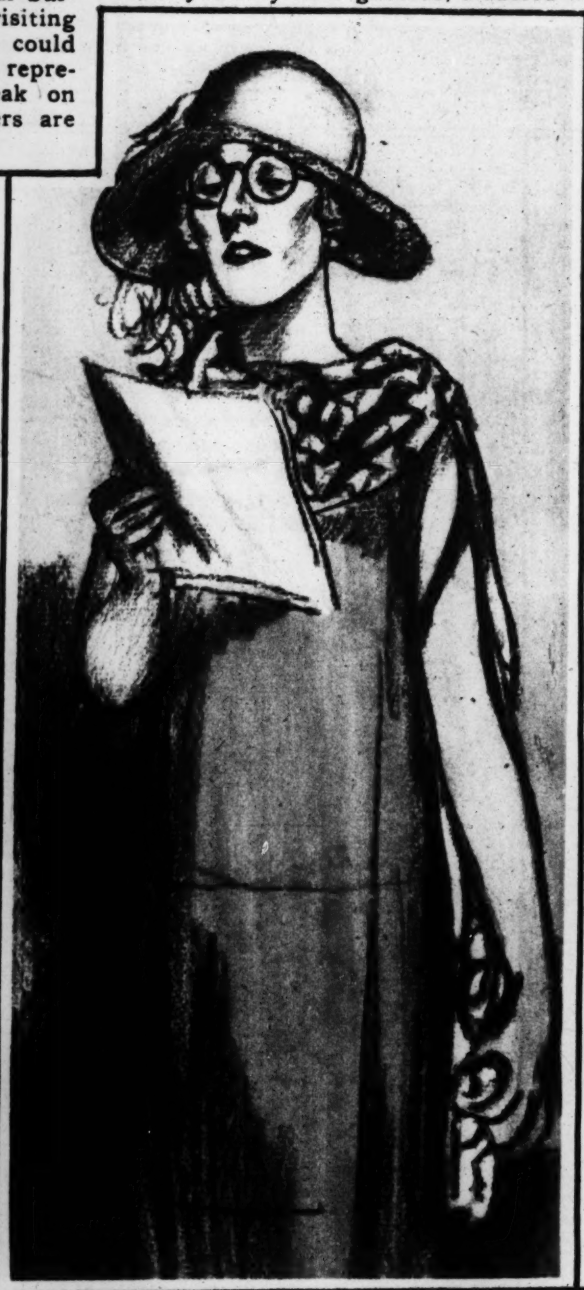
Four charter members of the Shakespeare club listening in while Mrs. Randolph Dietz reads a paper on the girlhood of some of Shakespeare's heroines, namely, Portia, Juliet, and Lady Macbeth. Mrs. Paul Lumley Jones, on the extreme left, is somewhat distrait this afternoon. You see, next week Mrs. L. J. is to read a paper on the witches in "Macbeth," and, O, the worry of it. She is going to treat the witches not as supernatural beings but just "folks like you and me," who have gotten into bad company and foolish ways. Mrs. Robert E. Lee Thule, on the extreme right, is, as you may have guessed, troubled with heartburn.



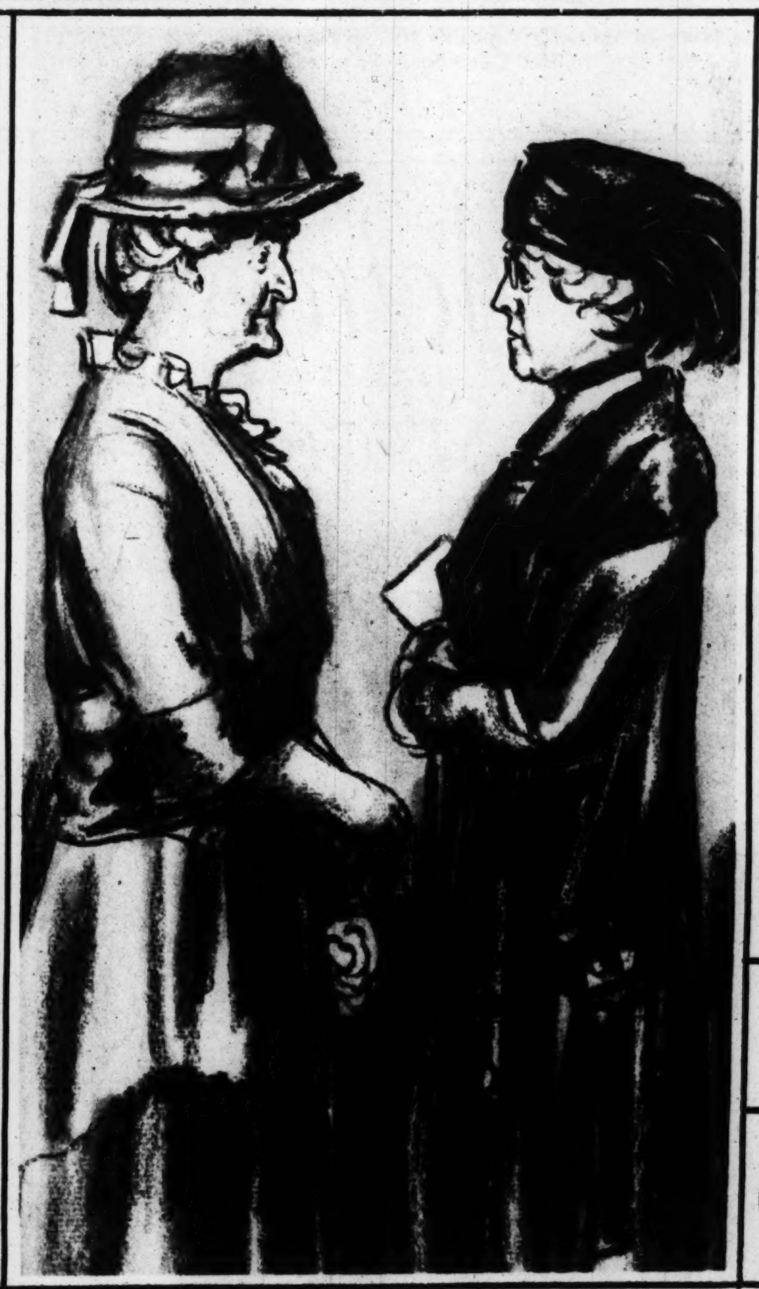
Mrs. Fred Mahoney is one of those cynical people who can see a joke in everything, including, sad to tell, members of the Shakespeare club. "My dear, DID you see her hat?" Mrs. Mahoney will shriek. "She looked just like a parrot!"



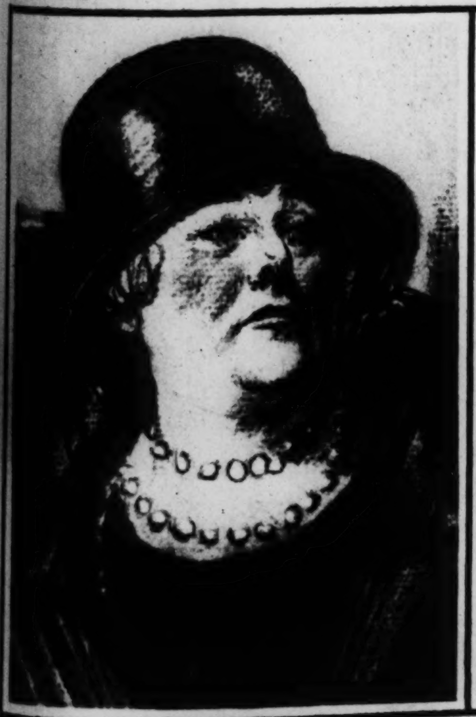
"And now we will pass to the reading of the minutes of the present meeting." So says Mrs. Lucius Leroy Flynn, the charming president of the Shakespeare club, after a brief salutatory address. On the noble bard's birthday Mrs. Flynn will give a luncheon to the members of the club in the rose room of the Hotel Riley, and everybody but Mr. Shakespeare will be on hand.



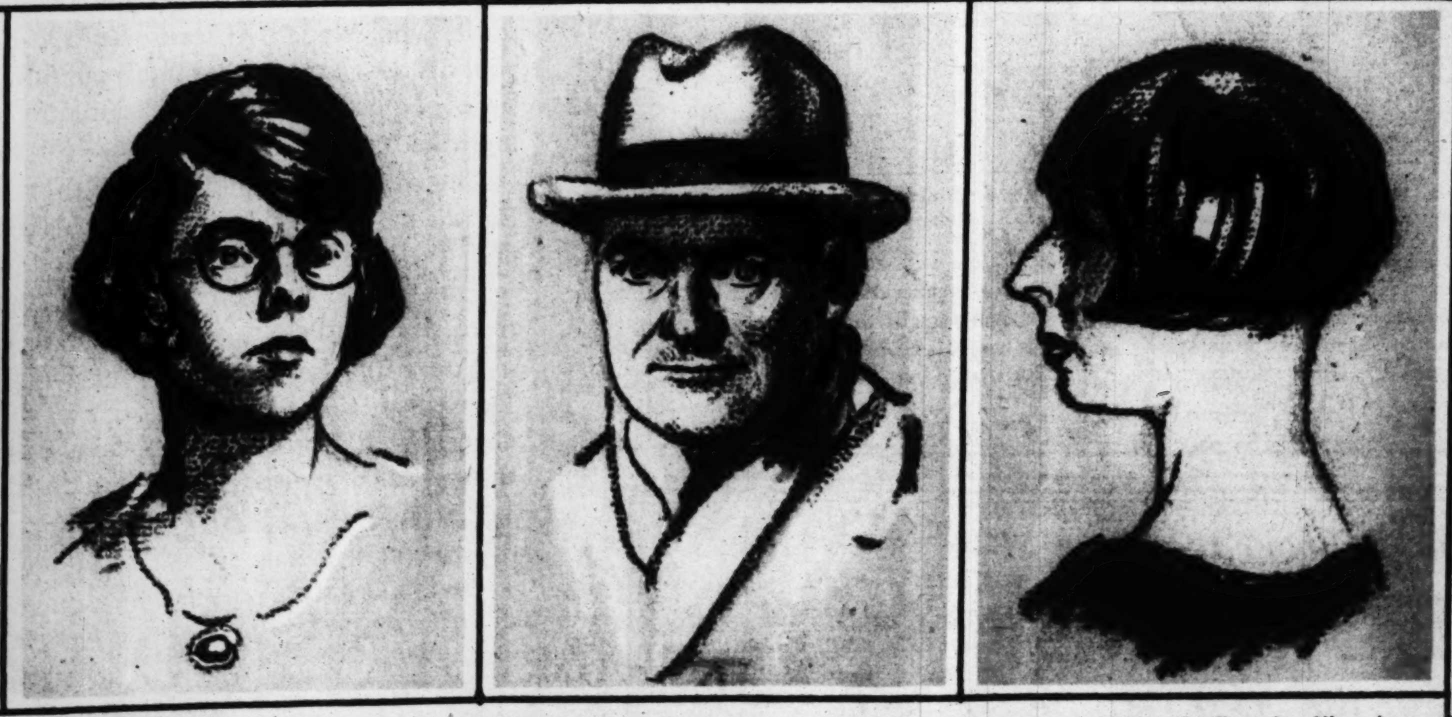
And here, if you please, is Miss Millicent Marie Winterbottom reading that tender passage beginning "The quality of mercy is not strain-ed," etc., after which she will discuss said passage intimately.



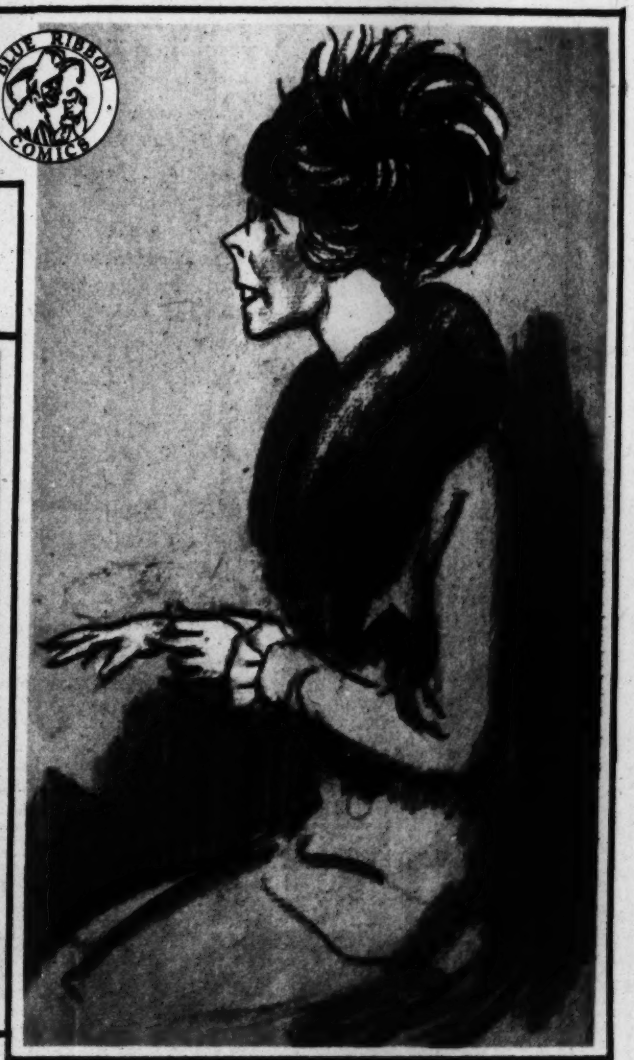
The member with the grievance. "So after the last meeting she came up to me and said: 'Mrs. Boles, I hear you said I didn't write the article I read on Shylock?' 'Why, Mrs. Nookie,' I said, 'I never said such a thing. Whoever says I said that is lying outrageously!' 'Well,' says she, etc., etc."



The upstage member, Mrs. Mable Beele, is always being insulted or slighted, or both at once. Once she was asked to "do" a paper on "O, That This Too, Too Solid Flesh Would Melt," and she took it as a personal insult.



Three important personalities who labor behind the scenes at the Shakespeare club: Miss Duffy, the librarian, whose aid is begged and besought constantly by ladies who have papers to do; Mr. Binns, the society reporter, and Miss McMurtie, who painted the head of Shakespeare on the place cards at the president's luncheon. Toward the end of her job Miss McMurtie grew bored, and the last dozen portraits were not speaking likenesses.



The new member, Mrs. E. E. Squee, is a bit awed by so much culture all at once. She says "Yes" to everyone and agrees with everything said to her.

"Marvelous," "Best of all," "A wonderful soap for the skin."

Night after night — a thousand eyes are fastened on her face. How does she keep her skin flawless — youthfully smooth and clear?

STARRY-EYED, laughing-lipped, with cheeks like a rose —

Night after night the successful actress must come before the curtain, looking as if she had found the secret of immortal youth.

How does she do it? What care does she give her skin to keep it always fresh and unfaded? — Flawless, under the gaze of a thousand eyes?

We asked 250 leading actresses of the New York stage, playing in 44 of the season's plays, what soap they use for the care of their skin.

One hundred and eighty — nearly three-fourths — answered, "Woodbury's Facial Soap."

"It is a wonderful soap for the skin" — "It is very soothing" — "It leaves a nice smooth finish" — "It closes enlarged pores" — "Oily skin was cured by using it" — "It keeps the skin firm and fresh-looking" — "I have a perfect skin. I have used Woodbury's for years."

THESE were a few of the comments they made when interviewed in their dressing rooms.

Thousands of women today — college girls, debutantes, society women, belonging to distinguished clubs and groups — are testifying to the wonderful benefit of Woodbury's in keeping their skin smooth, clear, and fine.

No matter what your skin condition is — you will find the right treatment for it in the treatment booklet wrapped around each cake.

A 25 cent cake of Woodbury's Facial Soap lasts a month or six weeks. Within ten days after beginning to use Woodbury's you will see an improvement in your complexion. Get a cake today — begin tonight the treatment your skin needs! The Andrew Jergens Co., Cincinnati, Ohio.

The sure way to avoid trouble in your mouth is to see your dentist in time. Go to him at least twice a year as a sensible precaution. He will keep teeth and gums healthy and may prevent serious trouble.

Karl Godwin

4 out of 5
see him too late

Don't let carelessness or a false feeling of security give dangerous pyorrhea a chance to fasten itself in your mouth. Four out of five have this dread infection at forty, and many younger, according to dental statistics.

A little foresight will keep you among the fortunate who escape. At least every six months let your dentist go over your mouth carefully to detect signs of gum infection and start now to brush night and morning with Forhan's for the Gums.

The entire family should brush their teeth with Forhan's. It's a pleasant tasting dentifrice that firms the gums and keeps them pink and healthy. It gives the teeth a thorough cleansing and keeps them white and clean.

You can't begin using Forhan's too soon. Delay may exact a heavy toll. It's unwise to take chances with pyorrhea. Get your tube of Forhan's today. All druggists: 35c and 60c in tubes.

Otto Svoboda

2344 S. Clifton Park Ave., Chicago.—Here is the signature of a man who is emotional, generous, calm, and with a good sense of fitness. His mind is direct, inclining to plain thinking. He likes people to be blunt and direct with him, and devious actions irritate and anger him. Altruism outweighs selfishness in his mind, as can be seen from the very open style of his hand.

J. H. Cooper

3105 Westerville Road, Columbus, Ohio.—He has correct judgment. Two traits balance themselves in his mind. One is a sense of criticism, that sees both sides of every question, but mostly the worst side. The other is a rapid, hopeful sense of proportion that sees its way through every question. To see the worst, the best, and worst and best together is a rare gift, but this hand seems to have it.

R. A. Patterson

124 S. Seventh St., Lafayette, Ind.—Here is the writing of a confirmed optimist. He cannot help seeing the rosy side of every proposition he meets. Things look better to him than they turn out to be. He has learned this by experience, and to check himself he has developed a brusque attitude of mind that demands to be shown. He likes to acquire things of value, as the closeness of his spacing shows.

Jessie C. Gordon

421 W. Fourth St., Ottumwa, Ia.—Even temper, placid mien, and an unselfish spirit appear here. The easy flow of the letters reveals a person who is used to writing, and yet who has not written her mind into a rut. She sees the bright side of things first, has a sense of humor, and will let her emotions lead her in every decision she makes.

Anthony M. Vitale

710 S. Sibley St., Chicago.—This is the writing of a person who has practiced writing until he makes classic characters. His strokes show an artistic sense, coupled with much perseverance. His art is of the conservator type rather than that of the creator. The regularity of his letters indicates that he has a placid temperament, without chaotic thoughts or emotions.

Laura Thompson

2615 Hall Ave., Marinette, Wis.—Here is a hand that shows conservatism. She is not easily influenced nor led by external things. Her emotions are strong, and one who would appeal to her must approach her through her sentiments. The spacing of her letters shows that she is naturally generous, while the evenness of her lines reveals that she discerns conditions as they are.

Anna Roscoe

1106 Michigan Ave., Menominee, Mich.—A rapid, machine-gun like mind is apparent here, almost totally ectrospective, that tears into this problem and that ceaselessly, tirelessly, and with an ever growing capacity for mental work. She thinks with great rapidity and with much sure aim and discernment. The lightness of her touch shows keen perceptions.

Frank A. Rudinsky

5308 W. Thirtieth Place, Cicero, Ill.—Three traits appear in this signature, a rapid mind, not led too much by hard facts, but inclining to imagination, a great deal of generosity, and a desire for gain. Those three being somewhat incompatible, he inclines sometimes one way and sometimes another. His thoughts take an introspective and somewhat gloomy trend at times.

Dorothy Vernon Lloyd

421 Surf St., Chicago—Here is a conservative hand, with a sense of material values strongly developed. She understands physical rather than psychic things, and her thoughts center in how she can turn these to account. Appreciation is visible in the trend of her letters. She is able to sense the worth of what others have and do, even when she cannot rival them.

"YEARS IN FIRE SALVAGE WORK had taken toll of my vitality. Indigestion threatened to become chronic. A friend insisted I try Fleischmann's Yeast. I did so. Gradually my attacks of indigestion became less frequent—then disappeared entirely. And I gained daily in energy." William Curran, Indianapolis, Ind.

"I WAS NOT EXACTLY SICK but I was tired and listless: no appetite, eyes dull and skin sallow and unattractive. A neglect to keep in condition led to constipation and its attending ills. Then I began eating Fleischmann's Yeast. After six weeks I was in love with life. I ate whatever I pleased and was never bothered with constipation. My eyes and complexion improved. Now each day finds me on my toes." Lillian Hoffman, Rochester, N. Y.

"BEING A RUSSIAN NOBLEWOMAN, refugee of the Revolution, I escaped from Bolsheviks and reached Canada, a complete nervous wreck. I had no interest in life. Once, buying provisions, I saw Fleischmann's Yeast Cakes and tried them as nourishment. I ate three cakes daily. I noticed a strange change in myself and continued to eat Yeast. First came interest in my life, then in about three weeks, a new calm. Now I can appreciate the royal gift of life. I make a deep Russian bow to Fleischmann's Yeast—the marvelous nerve-food." Anna de Lozina-Losinsky, Toronto, Canada

"I WAS SO STRONG that I could take a man of 210 pounds and lift him over my head. Then suddenly I became ill with constipation and digestive troubles. I suffered also from disagreeable skin eruptions. One day when I went to town I bought yeast cakes and began eating them, three each day. Now indigestion, constipation and pimples are gone. I cannot express the good that Fleischmann's Yeast has done me."—Edwin L. Hedberg, Beltsville, Md.

They broadcast their remarkable experiences

How thousands conquered constipation, corrected skin and stomach disorders—found vitality undreamed-of—through one simple food

NOT a "cure-all," not a medicine in any sense—Fleischmann's Yeast is simply a remarkable fresh food.

The millions of tiny active yeast plants in every cake invigorate the whole system. They aid digestion—clear the skin—banish the poisons of constipation. Where cathartics give only temporary relief, yeast strengthens the intestinal muscles and makes them healthy and active. And day by day it releases new stores of energy. Eat two or three cakes regularly every day before meals: on crackers—in fruit juices, water or milk—or just plain, nibbled from the cake. For constipation especially, dissolve one cake in hot water (not scalding) before breakfast and at bedtime.

Buy several cakes at a time—they will keep fresh in a cool dry place for two or three days. All grocers have Fleischmann's Yeast. Start eating it today!

And let us send you a free copy of our latest booklet on Yeast for Health. Health Research Dept. N753, The Fleischmann Co., 701 Washington Street. New York.

THIS FAMOUS FOOD tones up the entire system—aids digestion—clears the skin—banishes constipation.

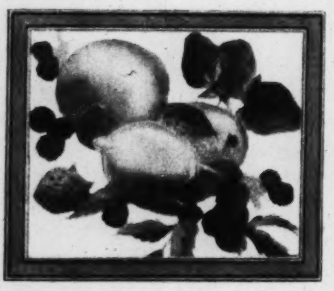
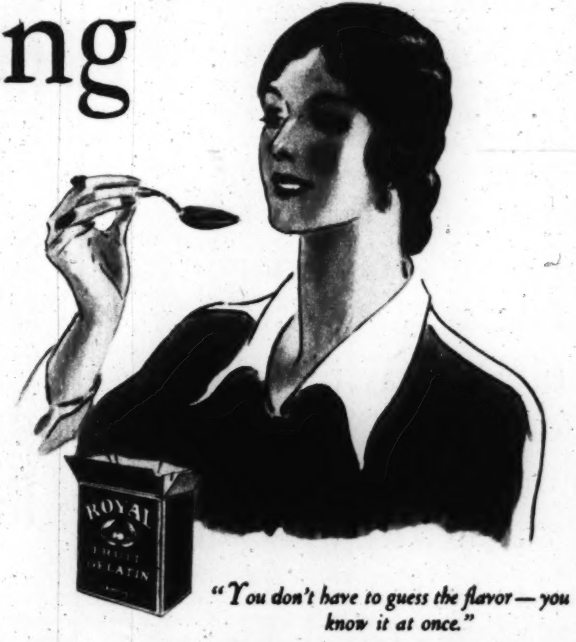
"Fragrant and appetizing"



"The delicious, cooling, and refreshing flavor of the fresh fruit"



"You don't have to guess the flavor—you know it at once."

DIFFERENT . . . perfect . . . it's the same story everywhere!

From Colorado to Connecticut, from Florida to Maine, they write to us . . . the women who have been using Royal Fruit Gelatin . . . to tell us how delighted they are with it, how different it is from anything else, how fascinating they find it.

"A delicious flavor not found in any other gelatin I have tried," writes an enthusiast from Ohio.

"The good fruit taste which other gelatins lack," says a Pennsylvania woman, voicing her family's chorus of praise.

89% emphasize the real fresh fruit taste as something entirely new.

IT'S obvious that these marvelous flavors come only from the fresh fruits. From lemons and oranges, with their inimitable refreshing taste, or from the rich, ripe juices of strawberries, raspberries, cherries, these delicious flavors are made, and combined with the finest gelatin.

Pure, perfect gelatin, neutral to taste and smell (pure gelatin has neither) does not mar the fresh fruit flavor in any way. No "synthetics" or artificial flavors are ever used. Just those that grow in a garden!

Such purity is especially essential in gelatin, because of its value in the diet of children. You know you are safe with Royal Fruit Gelatin, made by the same standards, marked with the same seal of merit, that you have known and used for years. We are proud to offer it to our Royal Baking Powder friends, who write us . . . "Like the Baking Powder, it's A 1.!"

What do Your Teeth Express?

Beauty...charm...and the carefree joy of health—when you restore the natural cleansing action of your glands

LEARN how to keep your teeth white and sound—for if they are dull, unhealthy—you will seem unattractive

WHEN you are having the gayest times your teeth show most. Are you proud of them? Do they suggest loveliness, health, vitality? Do not let your teeth grow dull and decay. Begin today to use Pebeco. Pebeco restores nature's own sure method of cleansing your teeth.

OUR soft, sweet foods cannot sufficiently exercise the all-important salivary glands. Their work of bathing the teeth—neutralizing with alkaline fluids the ever-forming acids of decay—gradually stops.

More and more the plaques of tartar form—the bacteria accumulate—your once shining teeth are on the way to dullness and decay.

It is a waste of time to brush away the acids by ordinary methods. To thwart decay, to keep your teeth permanently white and clear, you must restore the cleansing, protective action of your salivary glands.

The greatest dental authority today, in his latest book, "The Prevention of Dental Caries and Oral Sepsis" says: "Some substance which is a salivary stimulant should be used in order to promote and stimulate the activity of the salivary glands."

PEBECO is a safe, marvelously effective salivary stimulant in tooth paste form. As soon as Pebeco enters your mouth the salivary glands flow more freely.

With regular daily use, Pebeco entirely restores the natural, protective flow of your glands. Their alkaline fluids bathe your teeth day and night and prevent the formation of bacterial plaques or film. The acids of decay are neutralized as fast as they form.

Pebeco polishes beautifully, keeps your gums firm, your whole mouth healthy.

Do not live under the handicap of clouded, decaying teeth. Thousands are finding in Pebeco Tooth Paste the way to more beautiful, healthy teeth.

Don't think your teeth are too bad. Don't imagine they cannot be more beautiful. After ten days' use of Pebeco you will see and feel the difference. How much more beautifully polished your teeth! Your mouth fresher than ever before!

Do people compliment you on your complexion?

Why shouldn't you be one of those fortunate women who always hear admiring remarks about their complexions?

No normal woman is barred from beauty. It is so easy to bring new freshness and clearness, more charming color to your skin. Daggett & Ramsdell's Perfect Cold Cream has helped thousands of women to attain a more beautiful complexion. Use it regularly.

Nightly, at the very least. But it is much better to use this pure cold cream more frequently. Whenever your skin has been exposed to dust or wind or sun—after housework or motoring or outdoor sports—you really ought to have a short session with your cold cream jar.

Then, when your skin is ready for powdering, prepare it first with a touch of Daggett & Ramsdell's Perfect Vanishing Cream. This protects it, and forms an excellent base for powder and rouge.

Both these creams as often as possible! It is the best beauty recipe you can have.

* * *

At drug and department stores, you can get both Daggett & Ramsdell's Perfect Cold Cream and Perfect Vanishing Cream. Ask for them by name.

For three minutes every night do this—

1. Smooth a coat of Daggett & Ramsdell's Perfect Cold Cream over your face and neck with your finger tips.
2. Leave on the Perfect Cold Cream for a minute to sink deep in your pores where the unseen dirt is lodged.
3. Now wipe off the cleansing cold cream and the dirt that clings to it with upward strokes of a soft cloth. Then smooth on a little more and leave it there to revive your skin through the night.

Just before powdering . . .

Smooth a very light coat of Daggett & Ramsdell's Perfect Vanishing Cream over your face before you powder. It disappears almost instantly, leaving your skin velvety smooth and even in appearance. It is the perfect base for powder and rouge.

Daggett & Ramsdell's Perfect Vanishing Cream should be used, too, just before you go out-doors as it provides a splendid protection against dust and wind.

MISS ANNE MORGAN points the way to the business Women of America

THIS photographic study of Miss Morgan, made in Paris by Baron de Meyer, reflects the powerful personality she inherits from her distinguished father, founder of the great banking firm, J. P. Morgan and Company.

AMONG the many women who are my friends a high standard of personality always demands physical as well as moral and mental development and care. Whether their interests lie in business, professional or social activities these women desire always that their complexions should be clear and vigorous. So many achieve this end by following the Pond's Method that I should like to see the dressing rooms of our new Club House of the American Woman's Association equipped with Pond's Two Creams.

Anne Morgan

ANNE MORGAN is unique among the women of America. Born to unlimited wealth and position of unequalled rank, she has dedicated her life to great achievements for humanity.

Having inherited the organizing genius of her celebrated father, she might, like him, had she been a man, have expressed it in the world of finance.

But Miss Morgan is a woman. Her greatest interest is the welfare of other women. And because she believes that business women are on the highroad to success she is investing her faith and energy in their behalf.

She knows that their lasting success will result from well-balanced living that has made no sacrifice of womanliness and charm. And she knows that they believe this, too.

So in planning the equipment of the new Club House of the American Woman's Association—the finest thing of its kind and a project in which Miss Morgan is deeply interested—she thinks even of the details that will accord with the personal tastes and contribute to the more attractive appearance of its members.

Knowing that so many beautiful women everywhere today achieve a clear and vigorous complexion by following the Pond's Method, Miss Morgan declares:

"I should like to see the dressing rooms of our new Club House of the American Woman's Association equipped with Pond's Two Creams."

THE FIRST STEP in the Pond's Method of caring for the skin is a deep, thorough cleansing with Pond's Cold Cream. Every day, always after any exposure, and before retiring at night, smooth Pond's Cold Cream lavishly over your face, neck, arms and hands. Let it stay on a few moments. Its pure oils will sink down into the pores and bring to the surface the dust, powder and excess oil which clog them.

Wipe off all the cream and dirt. Repeat the process and finish by closing the pores with a dash of cold water or a rub with ice. Now look at your skin—as fresh as a new-blown rose!

THE SECOND STEP is a soft finish and protection with Pond's Vanishing Cream. Fluff on just the least bit of Pond's Vanishing Cream. Now see how soft and even the surface of your skin is—your face, your throat, your hands. The Vanishing Cream has smoothed away all roughness, has given you a soft, bright, clear tone.

Notice how smoothly this cream takes your powder and rouge, and how well it makes them cling to your skin.

So you should always use Pond's Vanishing Cream before you powder. And with particular care before you go out, too. For it adds not only a soft finish but a protection from unfriendly wind, dust, cold, sun and soot.

ABOVE, Miss Morgan's Paris apartment, full of the same informal charm that pervades her New York house. When in neither of them, she is likely to be in Scotland for golf or hunting or at one of the smart continental resorts. But when a big cause calls her, Miss Morgan drops all personal pursuits and gives it the brilliant endeavor of her heart and mind.

THE TWO CREAMS DISTINGUISHED WOMEN USE

MISS MORGAN'S deep interest in the women of America is again expressed by her activities in behalf of the nineteen-story club house to be erected on West 23rd Street, New York City, by the American Woman's Association. It will cost $4,500,000.00 and will contain besides its club rooms, a thousand private rooms with bath, to rent at $10.00 to $16.00 per week. This intimate sketch of the garden terrace suggests the personality and charm with which its sponsors have endowed it.

If your skin is oily, and likewise if it is dry, cleanse it more frequently with Pond's Cold Cream. Dryness is also relieved if you pat some of the cream on at night, after your bed-time cleansing, and leave it until morning.

And no matter what the nature of your skin, it will be made velvety and kept fresh and unlined by the finish and protection of Pond's Vanishing Cream.

Buy your own Pond's Creams and follow the method used by so many distinguished women to keep their complexions fresh and vigorous. The Cold Cream comes in extra large jars, both Creams in two smaller sizes of jars and in tubes.

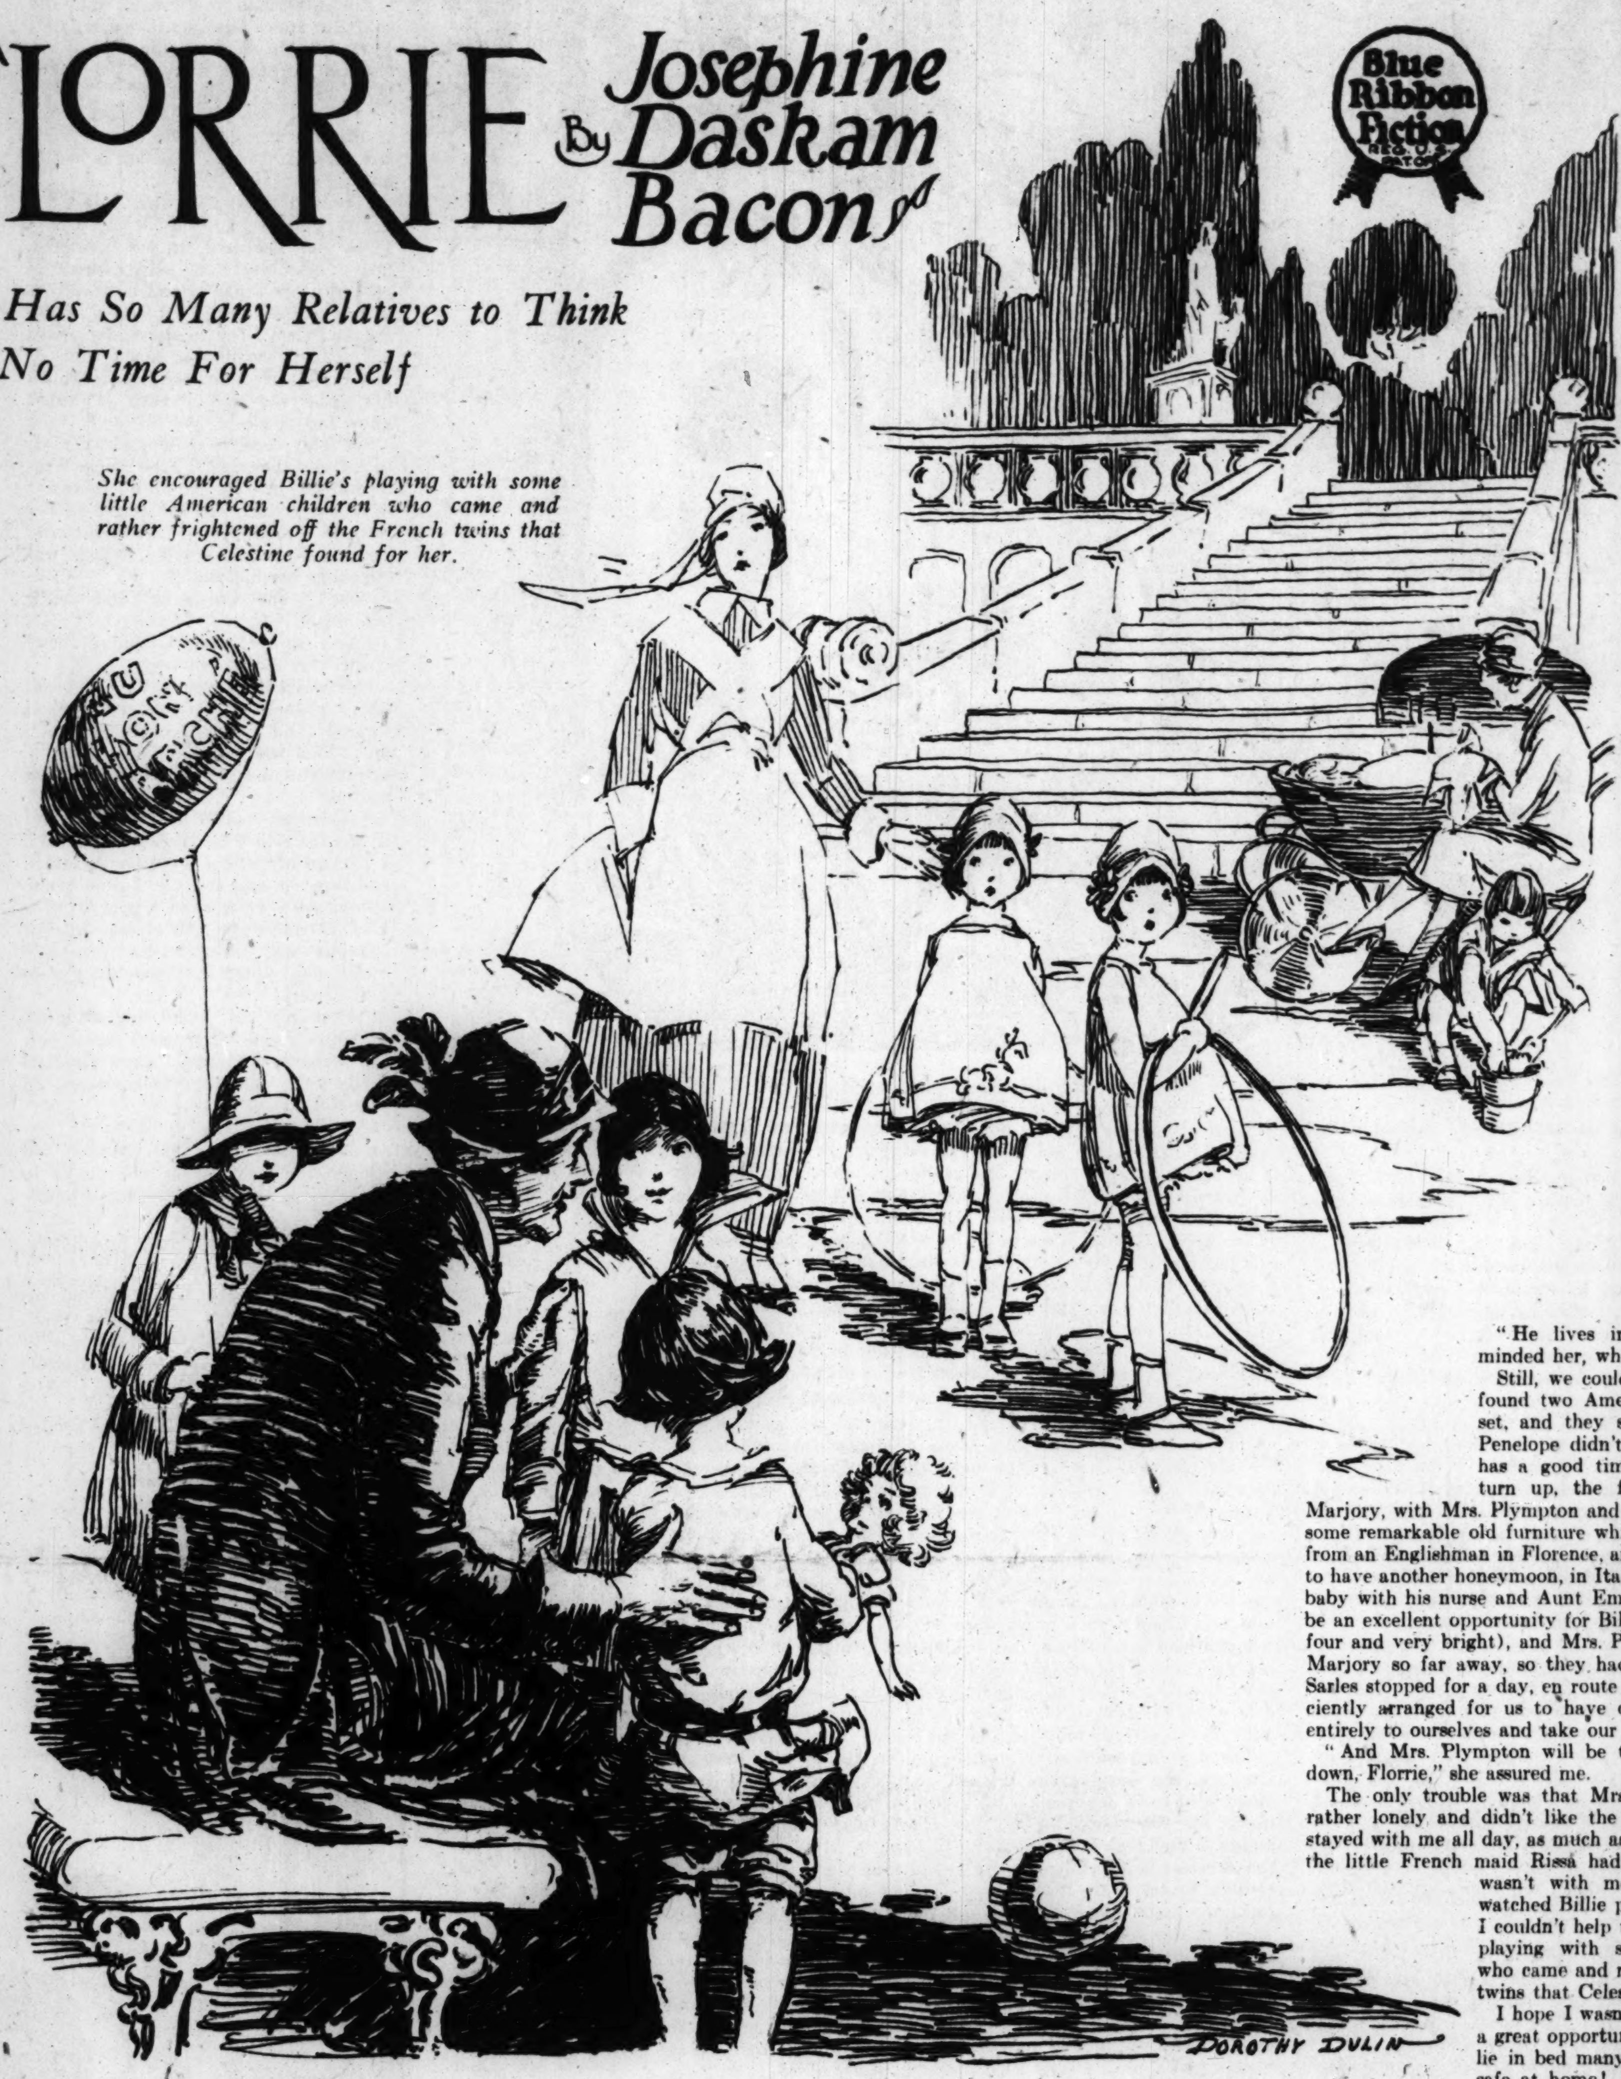
AUNT FLORRIE

By Josephine Daskam Bacon

An Amusing Story of One Who Has So Many Relatives to Think About She Can Find No Time For Herself



She encouraged Billie's playing with some little American children who came and rather frightened off the French twins that Celestine found for her.

IT'S awfully easy, looking back at it all, to say, "For goodness' sake, Florrie, how could you have been so silly?"

When I first heard we were really going abroad, it seemed too good to be true. Of course, it wasn't turning out exactly as I had planned—but then, things so seldom do, in our family! I had really given up hoping for it, to tell you the truth. After mother died, Aunt Ella and I were busy bringing up my brother, Bill, and when my sister, Rissa, married and took Bill and me to live with her, the least I could do was to help her with the housekeeping and the children—first little Clarry and then Penelope, and then Sarlesy. It's all I can do—those things—and though Rissa is wonderful, and manages everything, you can't be a popular authoress and run the Help-a-Home society and bring up your family, and not have somebody to fall back on, now and then, can you? When Bill married Marjory, and all his scrapes were over with, there were his babies, of course, and Aunt Ella was getting old, and she depended on me, of course, and Mrs. Plympton, Marjory's mother, always got on better with me than Rissa, so there always seemed to be plenty to keep busy about, you see, and each year that I partly planned to go somewhere for a change, it didn't seem to be the right time, exactly.

But it did look, last summer, as if the time had come. Clarry was eighteen and had finished school, and Rissa had promised her any vacation she chose, to reward her for being willing to go to college.

"Then I choose to go abroad!" she said, and Rissa, who had supposed it would be the Maine coast, was quite upset. Sarlesy was going to camp and Penelope was always easy going, and as good natured at sixteen as she had been at six. Clarry was the difficult one.

"But how can she go?" said Rissa, "I can't go back on it, very well. Who could go with her?"

"Why couldn't Florrie go?" said Sarles. "That would give Florrie a little rest from the Elton family, for a while—eh, Florrie?"

"Why, Sarles, that's a wonderful idea," said Rissa, "that's just what we'll do! Though how we'll get on without her all summer, I don't know."

Of course, that was nonsense, for Rissa is as famous for her executive ability as for her novels and plays and speeches.

You can imagine how excited Clarry and I were, and all the plans were made. Neither of us had been abroad, ever, and I must admit I was a little worried, sometimes, at night, wondering what I should do in case of an emergency; but Clarry said there wouldn't be any, and she was eighteen, anyway, and Rissa said travelers' cheques were all I'd need, no matter what happened.

Well, except for Penelope suddenly growing a little jealous and stuffy, and Sarlesy saying he'd rather go to a camp in Switzerland he'd heard about, and Aunt Ella having indigestion and insisting it was a tumor, and wanting me to wait till she could have an operation, and Mother Plympton blaming me because Marjory wanted to go to Italy with Bill, who was thinking of running over that summer to buy Italian furniture, and leave the new baby with granny, everything went pretty well. Clarry's shopping took so much time that I didn't have much chance to get anything, myself, especially as Rissa had to dash up to Maine to open the house they'd rented, and Sarlesy had German measles unexpectedly, and had to leave school. So I was very glad of the rest I got on the boat. Clarry had two or three school friends crossing with us, and it was so odd to have nothing to do—I felt quite lost for a few days.

Rissa, who always plans things out ahead, had heard of a wonderful pension in Paris, over on the Left Bank, where you could only go by references from friends, and since Clarry wanted Paris it seemed better to have us in a quiet old part, close to all the educational things.

"THERE'S no good being in a big hotel in the center," Rissa said, "you'll hear and see nothing but Americans and tourists from morning till night. And Clarissa isn't going over to buy things. She's there for atmosphere, and the atmosphere is all on the Left Bank. And of course, with you there all the time, there won't be any question of students and cabarets and studios and all that Bohemian nonsense. The change itself will be enough excitement for her."

Well, of course it ought to have been, probably, but all I can say is, it wasn't. Clarry was a different child from the moment the boat left the pier in New York, to begin with. Whether it was finishing school, or getting away from the family, or being eighteen, I don't know, but I realized long before we got to Paris that a great many of my eldest niece's characteristics were not her age, probably, at all, as we had always thought, but really the way she was: she was just that kind of person.

Not, of course, the wild things she'd say—that was just because she was a girl, and "getting them out of her system," as Sarles puts it. It seems that all the girls say them—Penelope assured me of that and said not to mind them.

"I may be that way, myself, in two years, Aunt Florrie," she said, in her funny, old-fashioned way.

Pen was always my girl, of the two.

It was her decision and her arguing ways and being unwilling to believe anybody that had grown so in Clarry. It is a very odd thing the way children will inherit the least desirable parts of their parents and leave out the nice sides—perhaps you've noticed it. And it seemed to me that Clarry had combined Rissa's cocksureness with Sarles' quiet obstinacy, and left out Rissa's brilliant mind and Sarles' patience and sweetness! So she was rather hard to influence.

For instance, she didn't like the pension at all. Her friends were at the Ritz, and there was where she wanted to go every day.

"I'd rather stay a week in a good hotel than a month in this silly old boarding house," she said, "and come home after I'd spent my money."

"'Better fifty years of Europe than 'a cycle of Cathay,' eh?" the gentleman said opposite us, and smiled at Clarry—he always smiled at her, but so nicely nobody could have minded. We all spoke to each other, because there were only four small tables, and they were taken by the same people every year. He was a Mr. Richard Winterbotham, from Philadelphia, and he was waiting for his sister. His hair was fairly grayish, but very thick, and he was slender and well dressed, with an eyeglass—he looked like an Englishman. His face was rather sad when he wasn't speaking, but when he smiled it was almost boyish. Clarry liked him the best of any of the guests, and told me she was sure he was a diplomat in some small but interesting country; and that he had had a great sorrow in his life and was traveling in order to forget it. He certainly spoke French very well, and also German, now and then, when madame wasn't there, to the head waiter, who was Swiss. But Augustin called him Herr Professor once, and then I heard that he was a professor of psychology at Bryn Mawr college.

This made Clarry angry, and she was quite snippy to him, which seemed to amuse him very much.

"If I had expected to spend my time going to museums," she told me one morning, when we were having our breakfast at a dear little green table in the court, which was all graveled and extremely neat, "I might as well have stayed in New York and boarded uptown near the Metropolitan! Mother wanted me to get the atmosphere, here, and the atmosphere in one museum is just the same as another—very stuffy, or else damp and cold. I always sneeze in museums. Now I don't mind this court at all, and I feel very foreign, with all these vines and gravel and the gold fish, and I love honey in little jars, and I only hope it won't make spots on my face! I love this nasty, bitter coffee, and I'm always going to have it in a bowl, after this, like that silly young man with the spectacles over there—I wish he had any pep at all and didn't blush so much. He's the only young person here. But the way to get the atmosphere is to roam about the streets and see life as it really is."

Mr. Winterbotham choked and pretended to have swallowed the wrong way, and Clarry thought he was disgusting, though I was sure he was only laughing.

Still, I could have managed, I think, for Clarry was really a clever girl, and much more interested in the things Rissa wanted her to see than she ever admitted, I always thought. Miss Hayward, her English teacher, told me that she wrote her some interesting, thoughtful letters, and thanked her for all the reading she'd made her do. Mr. Winterbotham said, when I told him that, in apologizing for some of the dreadful things Clarry said, that he wasn't at all surprised.

"I imagine lots of them are like that," he said, "I wouldn't worry. She has a very good mind; give her time!"

So, as I say, we might have managed very well. But imagine our surprise when we got a cable from Rissa, "Penelope and Sarles Junior sailing today. Will join you. Letter follows."

As it happened, they got to us before the letter. An old friend of Aunt Ella's, who was going to do the cathedral towns of France had brought them over, and they were so thrilled and so glad to see us! Clarry didn't even pretend to be pleased, though, and said it took all the glory out of her summer to have them dumped on us like that.

"Now you'll begin to say 'the children' again, Aunt Florrie, just as I've got you trained to say 'Clarissa and the children!'" she said.

They explained to us that Sarles had been asked to represent some medical society at a big scientific congress at The Hague and read a paper there in August, and that he and Rissa had decided to take a honeymoon trip at the same time. Of course, they hadn't the heart to leave Pen, and Sarlesy simply refused to go to camp, so they thought they might as well all be together, and since they were to come, they might as well have as long a summer as possible.

"Mother said we'd do everything together, anyway," Pen said, "and she knew you wouldn't mind, because Sarlesy would be a great help with tickets and busses."

"I notice mother wasn't so anxious to have you do everything together with her," Clarry said very bitingly, "and if you think I'm going to have a little boy in baggy trousers tagging along with me all the time, when I'm with my friends at French hotels you've got another thought coming, my dear infants!"

I took Pen in with me because Clarry's room, as she pointed out, wasn't really large enough to be hygienic for two people, and Sarlesy felt very grown up, all alone in the annex.

We got along pretty well, on the whole, thanks to Mr. Winterbotham. Clarry had been giving him quite a lecture about why she ought to go to plays that were making a great success and not to the terrible old things Rissa had suggested. In the first place (she said), she'd read all the Molière she needed in her life and she'd acted in it herself. It would be a much better test of her French, she told him, to go to a play she didn't know than to one she did.

"Besides giving me some new ideas," she said, "and some new songs to take home. Why, nobody will believe that I've been to Paris! There aren't many new song hits in Molière, are there?"

"And, of course, I couldn't reassure her, Miss Etheridge," he said. "But, if you would allow me, I should be delighted to take Miss Elton out one evening. I can assure you the expedition will be of the utmost propriety, and if she doesn't think so we shall be so much to the good!"

It sounded odd, but I saw what he meant, and it was really kind of him. And as he knew Rissa's publishers—they had brought out a textbook on psychology he had written—and Bill had decorated the house of a rich sister-in-law of his—she was a Pendlethwaite—it was all right, of course. He was charming, anyway.

It turned out that they went to the Molière play, after all. I was surprised, but he explained it to me.

"You see," he said, polishing his eyeglass, which he always did when he was going to say something particularly interesting, "your niece got the idea that the leading lady had had a checkered past, and when she found out that the great actor of the evening was supposed to have forced his second wife to commit suicide, in order to marry his third, she was very anxious to see them—suggested it, in fact. I was very pleased, because I happen to like Molière myself."

"How dreadful!" I said. "But how did she happen to get hold of such ideas, Mr. Winterbotham?"

"It is just possible," he answered, "that she got them from something I may have let fall. One never knows. Anyway, she enjoyed the play very much. She's a clever girl."

Of course, it was all right, her saying "my Mr. Winterbotham" after that, though I didn't like it. Pen thought it was not respectful, but Clarry laughed at her and said young men didn't interest her, because they had no brains.

"Nor any experience, either,' she said. "Give me a man who has lived!'"

"He lives in Bryn Mawr," Penelope reminded her, which made Clarry furious.

Still, we could have got on, because Sarlesy found two American boys who owned a radio set, and they spent all the day over it, and Penelope didn't care much what she did—she has a good time anywhere. But who should turn up, the first of August, but Bill and Marjory, with Mrs. Plympton and little Billie! Bill had heard of some remarkable old furniture which could be bought reasonably from an Englishman in Florence, and he and Marjory had decided to have another honeymoon, in Italy this time. They had left the baby with his nurse and Aunt Emma, but they thought it would be an excellent opportunity for Billie to pick up French (she was four and very bright), and Mrs. Plympton couldn't bear to have Marjory so far away, so they had brought her, too. Rissa and Sarles stopped for a day, en route for The Hague, and Rissa efficiently arranged for us to have one of the floors in the annex entirely to ourselves and take our meals as before.

"And Mrs. Plympton will be there, so you needn't feel tied down, Florrie," she assured me.

The only trouble was that Mrs. Plympton was very shy and rather lonely and didn't like the French ways very much. She stayed with me all day, as much as she could, and she didn't trust the little French maid Rissa had found for Billie, so when she wasn't with me she sat in the garden and watched Billie playing, and talked to her. And I couldn't help thinking she encouraged Billie's playing with some little American children who came and rather frightened off the French twins that Celestine found for her.

I hope I wasn't ungrateful and I know it was a great opportunity, but all the same I used to lie in bed many a night and wish we were all safe at home!

You see, I never knew just what Clarry was doing. Mr. Winterbotham seemed to understand how I felt, and one day he advised me to let Clarry and Pen run about together in the mornings.

"I'll see that they get to the Louvre and Notre Dame and the rest of it," he said, "but let them trot about the Rue de Rivoli and the big shops; they'll be all right, really."

"But Clarry says she sneezes in churches, too," I reminded him.

"She won't sneeze if I go," he said. "They do better with a man, at that age, Miss Etheridge. I'm afraid she's teasing you a little. But she's really very intelligent."

IT was all very well to say Clarry was intelligent: that didn't prevent her from being tiresome. It was then she began to call him "Winterbotham."

"It's not rowdy at all, Aunt Florrie," she insisted. "All European women call their men friends by their last names."

I must have been growing very nervous, because I nearly cried over that, and I was going to write to Rissa, till Pen begged me not to and told me that Clarry never said it to him, only pretended she did.

"She's very silly about him, though," Pen went on. "But I suppose she can't help it, now that she's in love with him."

"Penelope Elton, what do you mean?" said I, perfectly disgusted and furious. "How absurd! He's old enough to be her father!"

"He's forty-five," said she; "but Clarry prefers that. Better an old man's darling than a young man's slave, she says. And she feels the same age mentally. He gives her quite a thrill in the moonlight, especially with his eyeglass. She says his voice gives her a wonderful feeling in the pit of her stomach sometimes. Not always, of course, but sometimes. That's a pretty good proof, isn't it?"

"You are both very silly little girls," I told her, feeling very worn out and worried, but trying to be sensible. "I hope Mr. Winterbotham has no idea of all this?'

"Clarry thinks he has, but wild horses wouldn't drag it out of him," said Pen, very seriously. "Of course, seeing her with the family so much cramps his style! But if he ever had to save her from anything she's sure it would be too much for him."

"I would rather not discuss it any more," I said with great dignity. "Clarissa has been too well brought up, fortunately, to let such vulgar nonsense ever be seen by anybody, and you had better remind her of that, Penelope. I don't know what her mother would say."

"O, mother would laugh at her," said Pen. "You know mother. Besides, if mother was here Winty wouldn't look at Clarry. She knows that. He being a writer, especially, and so strong for psychology. He told Clarry that her mother's novels showed an almost uncanny knowledge of psychology sometimes. Clarry was frightfully jealous, and she has begun a novel herself. The scene is to be laid in the Latin quarter, and Winty's going to take her

"I am quite sure that Mr. Winterbotham won't take her anywhere she shouldn't go," I said, "and he knew, even before he met your mother, that you girls have been carefully brought up."

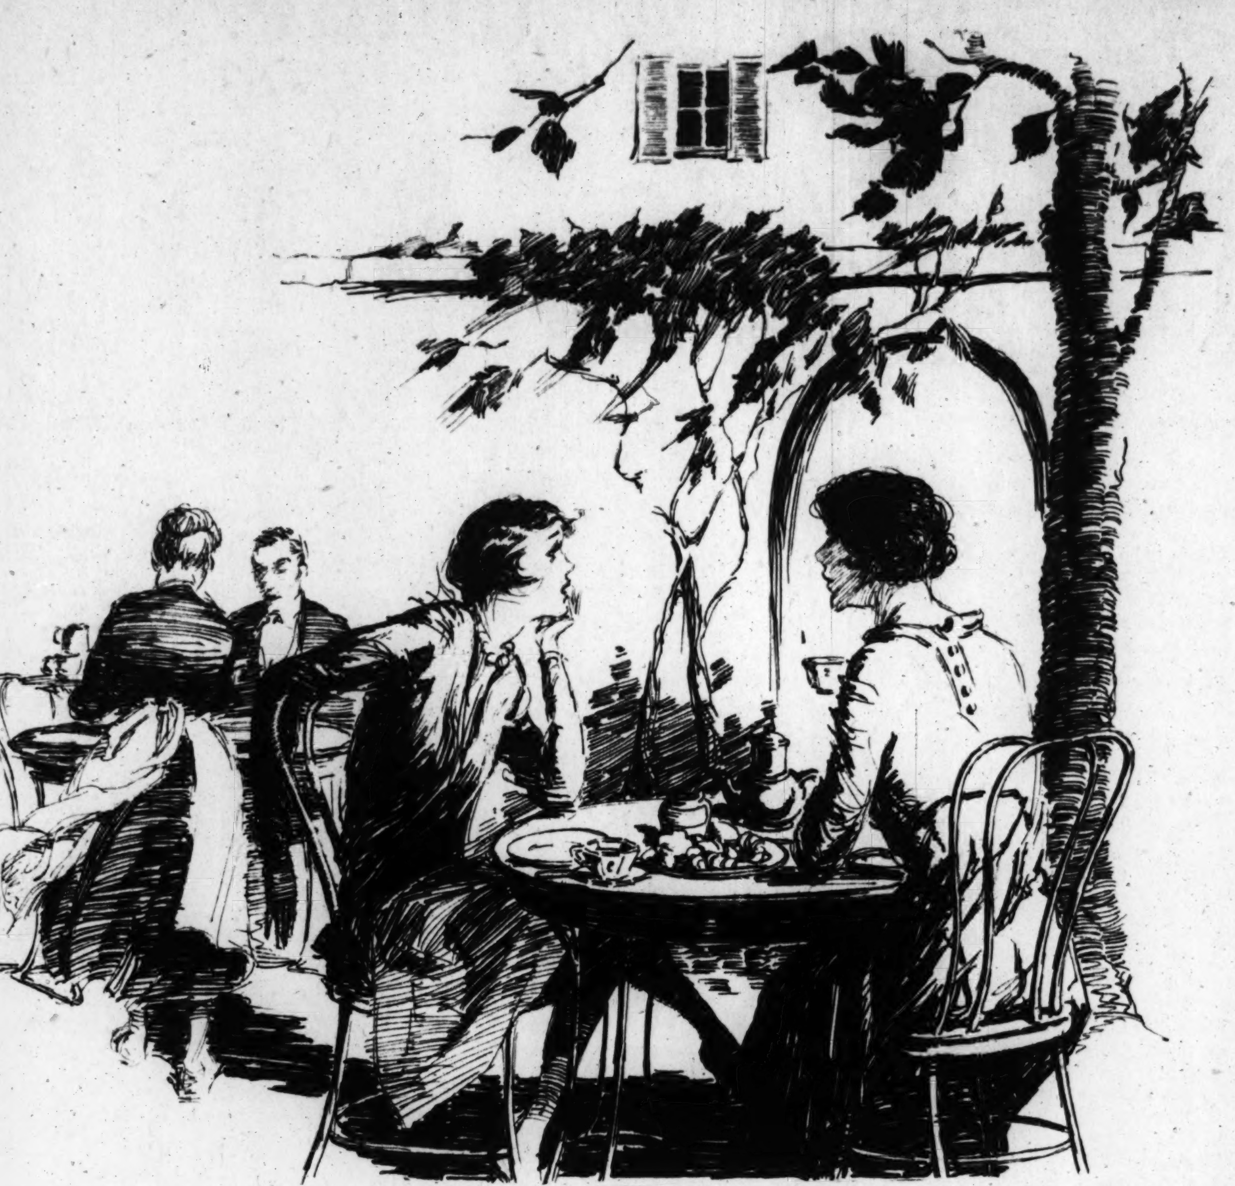
"O, goodness, yes," said Pen, "but I can't see that that makes much difference! Wasn't Uncle Bill well brought up, too, and didn't he fall in love, two years ago, with Mrs. Michael Wrexleigh? And she was fifteen years older than he was, and they were both married!"

"Why, Penelope Etheridge!" I gasped, "How do you dare say—how could you——"

"Gracious, Aunt Florrie, everybody knew that!" she said, calmly; "didn't you think we knew? Crops knew all about it. She and Clarry talked it all over that Christmas vacation!"

"You mean, Crops thought that her own mother——"

"O, well, your father and mother are people, aren't they?" said Pen; "anyhow, Crops felt sorry for Uncle Bill, at the time. And she admitted all along that nobody could get very crazy over her father—he didn't understand women at all, she said, and only wanted to be left alone in his library. Of course, Uncle Bill was far too young, but then, look at Ninon de l'Enclos!"



I feel very foreign with all these vines and gravel.

I had to talk to somebody, and so I gave Mrs. Plympton a little idea of it, but she only worried me more, by taking it seriously.

"I've thought that might happen for some time, Florrie," she said, "and if I was that girl's mother, I'd be grateful and glad to get her married! She's very clever, and old for her age, and if you ask me, she needs a strong hand. Mr. Winterbotham looks very young, and he seems very comfortably off, and doesn't have to teach in a college, unless he wants to, Clarry tells me, and he certainly shows every sign of being interested. Clarry is so big for her age and so managing, anybody would think she was over twenty. Your sister liked him very much, she said, and I heard her myself thank him for being so kind to her little girl."

What could I say? It was all too ridiculous and, of course nobody minds Mrs. Plympton. But, all the same, her taking it that way made me feel very queer. I suppose it was after that that I began to watch Mr. Winterbotham more carefully, and it was certainly true that he spent quite a little of his time looking at Clarry and then glancing at me, as if to see whether I noticed. They had a great many jokes together and one seemed to be his advice to her to give up going to Vassar and come to Bryn Mawr instead! Clarry pretended to change her mind every day about this, and evidently liked him to suggest it.

ONCE when I thought I'd better make some move, and objected to her going out so often in the evening with him (of course, I put it on the ground that he was giving up too much of his time) he seemed quite vexed and dropped his eyeglass and said almost irritably, "For heaven's sake, you don't really mind, Miss Etheridge? Had you planned to take her anywhere, yourself? Am I in the way? You know how much I wish you'd give me the pleasure of coming with us!"

And it is quite true that he often asked me, but I usually felt I ought to be with Pen or Sarlesy or Mrs. Plympton. Because Pen reads too much, if she's left alone, and games are better for her eyes.

And then I found the letter.

I was sitting by myself, after luncheon, in the little court, and feeling rather tired out and sad. Clarry was off with Mr. Winterbotham, Pen and Mrs. Plympton were taking Sarlesy and his friend to St. Cloud on one of the little boats, and I was supposed to have the afternoon free for a little shopping. But it was hot, and somehow I didn't take much interest in buying any clothes, though Rissa had given me some good addresses. It just came over me: what difference does it make, how I look? Who cares? Watching Clarry waving her hair and listening to her asking everybody's advice about pulling her hat more over one eye, or wearing sandals instead of pumps, because "Winty" said that the first test of a woman was an easy gait, made me so nervous and irritated that I felt I'd rather look like a frump! It was a horrid way to feel and I was ashamed of it, but that's the way I felt. I must have showed it, too, for Mr. Winterbotham looked at me rather oddly, and even started to speak to me, once or twice, and then stopped.

"Wouldn't you like to——" he began once, and another time, "Couldn't you——" but I only looked at him, rather surprised, and he stopped.

"Well, en avant, mademoiselle!" he said, and they started out. You would have thought I'd be glad enough to be left alone—but I wasn't. I wished we were all back in America.

"I'm never discontented, there!" I thought, and then, in looking down, I saw a large sheet of yellow paper, caught under the bench I was sitting on. I bent over and picked it up and saw that it was "manuscript," not a laundry list or anything like that. Rissa always uses that kind of paper, and probably other writers do. I looked at it, the way one does, and the first words on the page were, "the famous Miss Clarry Elton, of whom I've already written you."

Naturally I read on: I'm only human!

"She's thoroughly charming and most unusual—I suppose because she's so simple and direct," it said, "you are bound to like her, and I admit very frankly I'd like a woman's opinion of her. Yes, my dear, you might as well know it—I'm caught! It seems absurd—at my age—and after all the fascinating (sic!) young things I've seen! It's your own fault—you shouldn't have let me get away from you. You've kept me too comfortable and amused for too long, I'm afraid. Well, you always said you'd be game when the day came, and now I'm afraid it's come, my dear. How selfish and cynical a man is, at this stage, isn't he? And yet, my dear old thing, here we are, and what are you going to do? I wonder what you will think of her? The amusing, practical little things she says—so young, some of them, like a wise baby! But of course, what else is she? She's had no experience of life, beyond her family's, and to give her a little taste of it, on her own account, would be a wonderful and amusing task. She's so eager for it, too, quite unconsciously, but of course her family, like all selfish and bloodsucking institutions, would pull very strongly against it, I'm afraid. Will you think I'm a conceited ass if I tell you I'm sure she's inclined to like me—more than a little? She's even deliciously jealous, I think, sometimes—and then, I'm not sure, because she stiffens up and I have a terrible fear she's simply using me, to give her the little freedom her tyrannical relatives never allow her! And very sensible, too. You may be surprised, when you see her, but of course, a man of my age is supposed to long for youth, isn't he? I don't know why I should be different in that respect."

That was the end of the page.

There wasn't the slightest doubt, of course, who had written it, even if I hadn't seen his handwriting before. I started to tear it up, and I noticed that my fingers shook a little, and that made me wonder just why I should be so upset. After all, men had fallen in love with young girls before this—there was no crime in it. I didn't think Rissa or Sarles would like it, but there was nothing insulting about it. But I was furious with Clarry, for I couldn't believe that she was really serious or anything but excited and flattered. And you couldn't blame her for being that.

I took the sheet of paper into the house, and put it in a magazine of Mr. Winterbotham's that he had left in the hall, so that it showed between the leaves. Then I went up to my room and lay down for a while, for I felt tired and not up to shopping.

A FEW days after that Miss Alicia Winterbotham arrived, and she was charming—a little older than her brother, and quite devoted to him. Of course, it was to her he had written that letter. It was idiotic, I knew, but I never felt comfortable with her, though if I hadn't seen the letter I should have liked her immensely! She didn't stay long with us, though, for she and her brother went out hunting for a little apartment, and found one very quickly, and moved there. Hardly had she settled him, and found a good maid, when she went away to visit an old school friend and asked me, in a kind note, to put off coming to tea with her, for a few days. I read this at the table and noticed that Clarry had an odd, set look on her face: the look she gets when she has an idea in her head and intends to follow it out. We've seen it too often, in our family, not to notice it.

The next day was my birthday, and it was so like Rissa to send me the hazel green dress I had admired at her dressmaker's. I can't help feeling that those straight, short, plain little frocks are too young for me, but Clarry and Pen said it was nonsense and that I looked awfully smart in it. Sarles sent me the sweetest jade pendant to go with it, and the girls gave me a terribly pretty little black hat they had made me try on: it certainly made me look quite different, in a way, but I must admit is was becoming. I stopped in at the coiffeur's and had my hair dressed, and it was the strangest feeling, to look better than I had thought I could, and know it—and not to care much! And yet I didn't. Mr. Winterbotham was coming to dine, and he had invited me to go to the theater with him, after—the children had told him it was my birthday, of course, and it was very kind of him. Clarry wasn't exactly stuffy about it, but she was a little disappointed and showed it. I didn't really care, for I had made up my mind to talk with him about the whole thing. I had just about decided to take them all out of Paris, and go to Switzerland—Sarlesy wanted to see the Alps. I simply felt I must. And I had made up my mind to ask Rissa to take Clarry, when she came back from The Hague.

I asked them all to have tea with me outside, but Sarlesy said he had an errand to do, and Clarry said she'd promised to take tea with a friend. Pen asked:

"Where are you tea-ing, Clarry?" and Clarry, who had her best tan voile on and earrings, which made her look so old and horrid, I thought, laughed and answered, "wouldn't you like to know, though?"

She gave a queer look at me, but I never even asked her. In case I hadn't liked it, there would have been another argument, and I was determined not to have one, that day. I saw her go out with Mrs. Plympton, with another odd look at me, and I was glad I hadn't made any unnecessary fuss.

I got dressed in my pretty new clothes and went into Clarry's room to look in her long mirror—she had the best one, as it happened. There was Pen, down on her knees, rummaging in the waste basket.

"What in the world are you doing, child?" I asked and she blushed, and put a piece of blue paper behind her. All of a sudden it came to me! I knew in a moment, and I put out my hand.

"Give me that, Penelope!" I said, quietly.

"O, no, aunty, I can't—I don't want to! Really, you oughtn't!" she said, stammeringly.

"Don't be a little donkey!" I answered sharply. "I am a better judge than you, I suppose. Hand it to me!"

She gave it to me directly, and it was one of those pneumatic letters they send instead of telegrams in Paris. There was a big blot on it, and a smudge, and Clarry had had to copy it, and thrown this one away.

"My dear and timid Winty," it said, "in spite of your lukewarm (not to say chilly) reception of my bright idea, I shall be there at five! Why not? Are you afraid of me? Dear, dear! I shall shake Ma Plympton with some brilliant invention—nothing like conceit, is there—and arrive alone. So don't be so rude as not to be there! C."

"Take care of Billie," I said. "I promised Mrs. Plympton I would. Celestine has a migraine. Remember, you are responsible for Billie."

"Yes, Aunt Florrie," she said meekly, "I hope you're not angry at Clarry."

"We won't discuss that," I said, "you look after Billie. Be sure she has the boiled water."

"Y-yes, Aunt Florrie," she repeated, staring at me, and I went out and hailed a taxi and drove to the Winterbotham's new apartment. In the taxi I opened the beautiful new bead bag Bill had sent me and took out the little silver vanity case Marjory had put in it, and looked in the mirror. My eyes, which are really hazel, looked as dark as Rissa's, and my face was so pale that, with the green dress, I looked positively white. I put some rouge on my cheeks, carefully, and some powder on my nose: I hardly knew myself.

"Why, I look like Bill!" I thought.

I paid the man whatever he said, and told the concierege,, quite easily, that I wanted Mr. Winterbotham.

"Has my niece arrived?" I asked her. "I am a little late."

"O, yes, madam," she said, "the young lady has just gone up. It is au troisème, at the left. Madam is hardly late at all."

I walked up so fast that I lost my breath, and as I looked for the button I saw that the door, an old fashioned, heavy one, was not really closed. I pushed it open quietly and went in to a little vestibule and heard Clarry laughing, and then I felt so strangely toward her that it really frightened me. It was just as if, although I have known her since she was a baby, I didn't know her at all.

Suddenly the door opened softly, close to me, and there stood Miss Alicia Winterbotham, staring at me! Before I could speak, she put her finger to her lips, and reached out her hand and pulled me into the room, which was evidently her bedroom.

"Ssh!" she whispered, and shook her finger.

I was so surprised, I couldn't have opened my mouth, anyway.

She walked on tiptoe to the other door, opened it softly, and looked through, and I looked over her shoulder. This was her brother's room. I saw his ties and boot trees and shaving mirror.

This room opened into another, and it was there that Clarry was, evidently.

I heard her give a joyous little laugh, and then she said, in that loud voice she always uses when she's trying to give herself confidence: "But why? For heaven's sake, why? You know perfectly well, yourself, there's no reason I shouldn't!"

"Certainly," I heard Mr. Winterbotham's voice, "because I know myself perfectly well, and I know you perfectly well. But does the concierge, do you think?"

"Why, what do you mean?" Clarry asked.

"I mean, my dear young lady," said he, "that anybody old enough to come to tea with me alone should be old enough to realize the concierge's point of view about it. Or any Frenchman's."

"But—but you're not French," Clarry said, very obstinately, but not quite so self-satisfied as at first.

"No, and it's lucky for you I'm not," Mr. Winterbotham answered gravely, "nor any other European. I do you the credit, Clarry, to suppose that you have brains enough for that. But you're not in America, now, you know. It is pretty sickening to those of us who've lived over here as much as I have, to see what girls like you make these people think of us! It's very tiresome explaining that you're as good as gold, as spoiled as eggs, as curious as magpies, and as obstinate as mules! That's what I let you come here to explain to you, my young friend. You deserve to get a good scare, but, of course, you won't. Now, I like you, Clarry, I like you very much. But I get awfully disgusted with you, sometimes. You ought to have an older brother. And I want you to realize that any decent man you pick out for a little spree like this will feel just as I do about you. He may not tell you, but he will. I know that you're only showing off. Did you want to tell about this, when you got back to America?"

"Y-yes," Clarry mumbled, and I knew she'd soon be crying.

"Well, I would not," he said, "just remember it—don't tell it. You'll hate me for a while, but maybe you'll forgive me, later. I'm old enough to be your father, you know, and I'd hate a daughter of mine to be so silly. For it was silly, what you did, my dear girl, and nobody in this street would believe you if you told them why you did it!"

"I—I didn't mean any harm, Winty," she said gaspingly.

"Of course, my dear, of course," he answered, and I heard him walk across the room, "but remember that these people would say, 'then why do you insist on coming to see your old friend, when you think that his sister is not with him?"

"When I think'" —she repeated—and he gave a queer little laugh.

"My sister's here," he said, dryly, "and she's going to take you home and take you to tea at Rumpelmayer's, and here are some roses for you. Alicia!"

Miss Winterbotham had her hat on, and the moment he called she whispered to me: "I wouldn't let the child see you—she's had enough. I'll talk to her. Ritch is going out directly, and you can slip out after him. Good-by. Just keep quiet!"

She went out, and I heard her greet Clarry sweetly and say: "You won't mind tea with me, my dear? My brother had an engagement."

"No, Miss Winterbotham," said Clarry, very low. Her voice sounded thick, but she was too proud to cry, I knew. Clarry always had a strong will.

I heard them going down the stairs, Miss Alicia talking cheerfully: I even smelled the delicious roses in the hall. Then I heard a door slam a few minutes later, and I started to go out, but all of a sudden I heard a step and there he was looking right at me, on the threshold of his sister's room!

"For heaven's sake!" he cried. "Miss Etheridge! Were you there all the time?"

"Yes," I answered, "all the time."

"Did you—O, you came after Clarry," he said and he laughed, but looked worried at the same time.

"I'm sorry—I'm very sorry," he began, "you must have known I'd have taken care of her? I sent for Alicia immediately. Perhaps it was a kiddish trick to let her come, but I'm fond of the child—when she isn't too impossible—and I honestly thought a good knockout blow was what she needed. She's game: she took it standing up! I hope you're not too angry."

He had the funny, boyish look that was the most delightful thing about him, and as he looked at me he showed so plainly that he liked my birthday dress and hat that I couldn't miss it.

"How awfully well you look!" he said suddenly, "why don't you wear green more, Miss Etheridge?"

For some reason, to see him so light, so changeable, infuriated me.

"For a person who feels about my niece as you do, Mr. Winterbotham," I said, "you seem to dismiss her very quickly from your mind. I don't think you should have let her come here. And yet I can see what you meant, but if you really love her——"

"'Really love her'?" he cried, "for God's sake, what do you mean? Love that imp? Are you crazy? I wanted to get her out of your way. She was killing you. I tried to see you——"

"O, Mr. Winterbotham," I interrupted, "what is the use? I saw your letter. It was blown under the bench, and I read it—of course, I shouldn't have. But when I saw that it was all about Clarry, I felt I had a right to. It was the one on yellow paper."

"About Clarry?" he repeated, staring at me, "about Clarry! How could it be?"

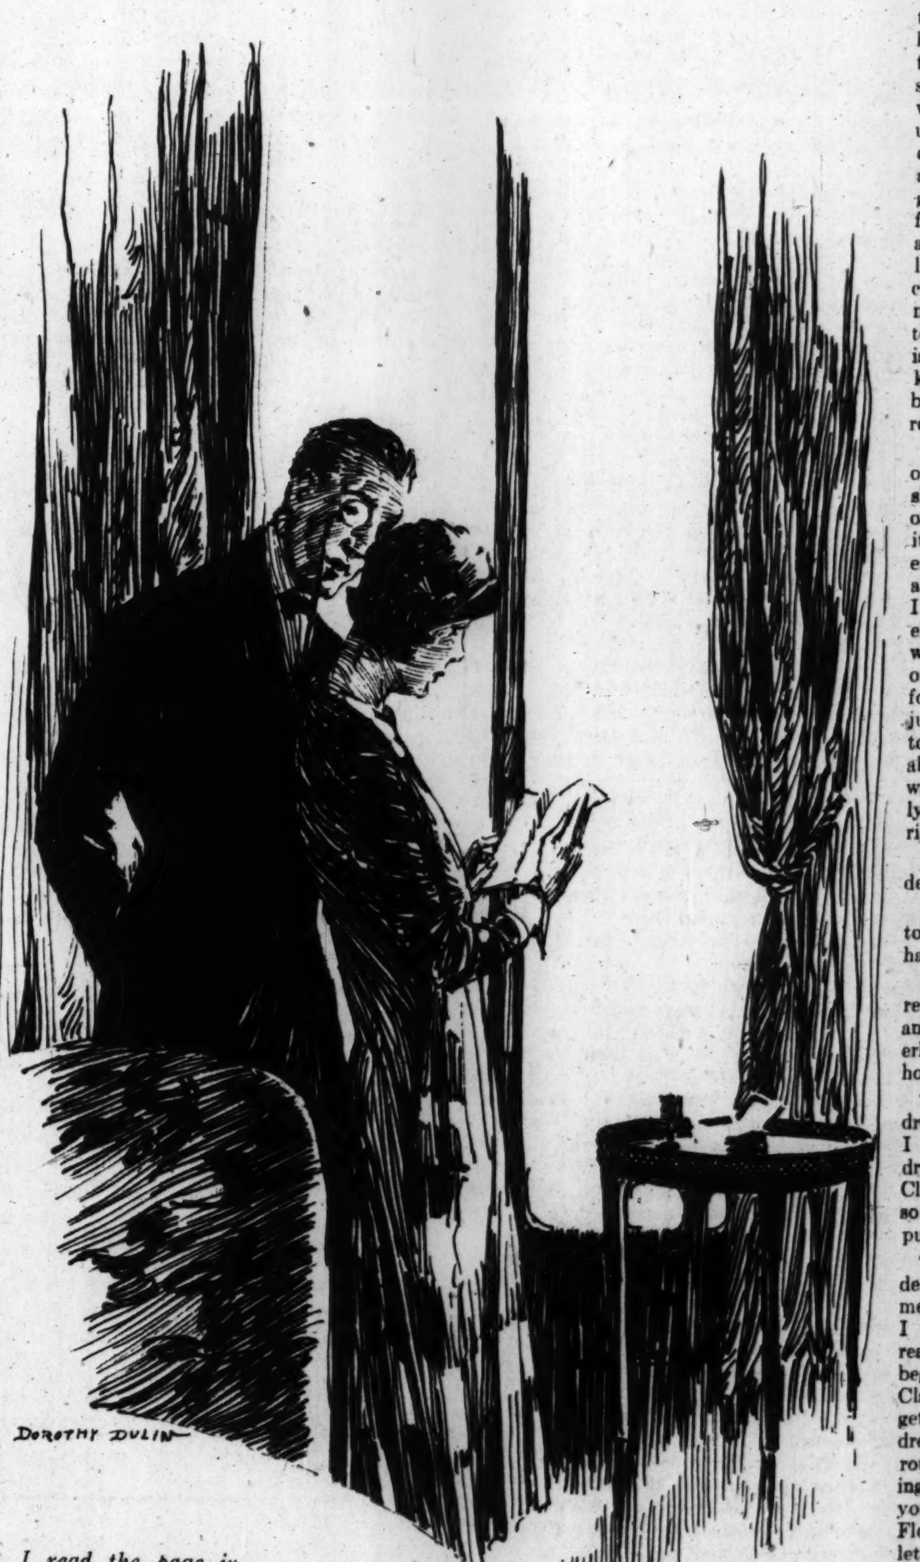
HE looked all around the room (for we were still standing in Miss Alicia's) and all of a sudden he pounced on an envelope lying on her toilet table and pulled out more sheets like the one I had seen.

"Here," he said, "read that! I don't know what you read, but this is what I wrote. Come in here and read it please."

We went into the little salon, where it was still light and sunny. And I read the page in my hand, where he pointed.

"But none of this is really what I started to write about," it said, "I must confess myself, and tell you that I haven't been quite honest in telling about my new friends. You know Mrs. Clarissa Etheridge Elton by reputation, of course. She's clever and quite handsome—the successful American woman. There are children of every age and size, and a rather depressing mother-in-law of young Etheridge, with his baby, and the guide, philosopher and friend of the whole outfit is a remarkable little woman on whose shoulders they load everything and everybody—a hazel eyed, brown haired person with a dimple, and the most adorable worried look in her clear hazel eyes you can possibly imagine! I don't know her age—about thirty-five, perhaps. She's the successful novelist's sister and consequently the aunt of——" Here he slipped the next sheet in, and it began, "the famous Miss Clarry Elton, of whom I've written you!"

All those things that I had thought were about poor little Clarry were about me!



I read the page in my hand where he pointed.

If you remember them, you will see how very, very interesting and—and surprising they were, and you will understand how confused and amazed and altogether strange I felt. I just looked at him. The last lines said, "Of course, a man of my age is supposed to long for youth, isn't he? I don't know why I should be different in that respect—"

That was the end of the page. He showed me the next one, "but I am" it went on, "I never want to see another silly girl. I want to go traveling over the world taking care of and being cared for by (and I am just selfish enough to rejoice that she's able to do it so well and so sweetly) 'Aunt Florrie'!"

I felt awfully deceitful:

"But I'm forty today!" I said. I had to.

"You look thirty, really you do," he answered very eagerly, and caught hold of my hand.

"That is my new dress and rouge," I said, "I felt so dreadful about Clarry, and I got so white—and I put on some rouge."

"O, you funny, dear thing," he told me, and even when I was so happy I realized that I had begun to love little Clarry again, "we'll get a lot of new dresses and all the rouge that's becoming as that! Will you come with me, Florrie? Will you let me show you all the places you want to see—with no one but me to take care of? For I know you must take care of somebody, my dearest — could you make it me?"

"But—but you mustn't think I don't love them all," I told him, for it seemed dreadful to be so willing to leave them all so quickly and just be with him—and yet that is what I wanted to do!

"O, you may love them a little—with what you have left," he said, but he will never really know how much I love him!

BARRACUDA by Will Payne

THE STORY THUS FAR

DR. LEWIS LATHAM, leaving his Connecticut home after his romance has been shattered, settles in Indian Ledge, Fla., where his uncle owns the local bank. While sauntering through the woods near there he is puzzled by the sight of two persons digging what seems to be a grave. On the other side of the hedge fence, beside them, stands a girl, evidently on guard. The fence, he learns later, surrounds an estate called "Little Bayou," uninhabited for years because of the unsavory reputation of the preceding tenant. A family from the north, named Snyder, has recently rented the place.

WHILE taking care of the bank for his uncle, Dr. Latham meets Mrs. Snyder and her stepsister, Louise Sheldon, who deposit some bonds. A stranger gets off the boat from St. Petersburg and introduces himself at the hotel as Donahue of Detroit. He tells Lem White, the sheriff, he is a detective on the trail of a man named Fink, who is supposed to have "gone South" with a large sum after the failure of a New York firm.

THE DETECTIVE suspects that Snyder, apparently hiding near by, is the man he seeks. He enlists the aid of the sheriff and doctor in searching the house rented by the Snyders. Nothing incriminating is found. Shortly afterward a man from the north visits the Snyders.

INSTALLMENT V.

Tragedy in the Bank.

BY and by, with a sudden resolution, Latham roused himself and set off for the beach. Thank God for the sea! In it, for a little while, he could wash off all the inertia and dissatisfaction. Today the first tingling plunge brought its customary reaction—expunging the stuffiness and futility like a sponge passed over a slate. If one could only keep this up—on over to Mexico, say! He had been in the water perhaps ten minutes when a slow roll of his head disclosed a little sailboat coming out from shore. He recognized it as belonging to Cap Dolliver, and thought no more about it.

When he next saw the cockleshell, it was quite near and cutting across his path. The girl from Little Bayou was holding the tiller. Her companion was that fat young man with the impertinent little black mustache whom she had called Mr. Andrus. He was smoking a cigaret; and it all had a look of familiarity, as though he were used to cuddling beside her. She recognized the swimmer and waved, smiling. Andrus repeated the gesture. Latham lifted a dripping arm.

It was no use saying he'd pay no further attention. Like an irresistible magnet, the cockleshell drew his eyes as it slowly diminished before a light, steady breeze. Over here at the south was Crab Island with Judd's weather blackened shack against the sandy bank which gave to the higher, wooded part. The well formed young woman in a calico dress was fishing from a rowboat just off shore. But the cockleshell was heading into the broad bay. Helplessly Latham watched until the sail was only a saucy pocket handkerchief above the blue water. It seemed perfectly clear that they were making for a resort on another island, three miles out.

Sando, as it was called—the word being a corruption of the old Spanish San something or other—was a quite respectable place. There was a sort of hotel on the north end. Fishing parties went there, and picnics; also people went to gather shells on the shore. Quite respectable. But it was out of the world, off by itself in the sea—such a place as a romantic pair would choose for an excursion. The exquisite little model of beauty had sailed away thither gaily, waving her hand, with this fat, cheeky young man. It spoiled the swim.

Finally he paddled back to shore, dressed, and stumped across the sand to Main street, with a sore mind. Then he saw Mrs. Snyder's second hand car standing at the curb in front of his office, and quickened his pace. Had Mrs. Snyder come to consult him? His reception room was empty, however.

Somewhat later—meeting Charley Teller on the way to supper—he learned how the automobile got there. In the first place, as to the stalled machine, Charley had an alibi. Benson, the ex-laundryman, had hired his car that afternoon to go into the woods in search of orchids, Donahue driving it for him. The car had broken down, and they had walked round through the woods to town, notifying Charley of the mishap. Charley started on foot to recover his machine, but Mr. Egan hailed him. The banker had an express package for Little Bayou; but he had already spent considerable time in a futile effort to deliver it. Word had come from the Albrights that Jimmy was very low. The banker was anxious to return there. So, in good, neighborly village fashion, he unloaded his errands upon Charley. In short, Teller was to deliver the express package, fetch up his own car; also tow in the Snyder car, and leave it in Main street so that the young lady would have means of getting home when she returned from her sail.

Thus Latham ate supper alone at the Seminole house that evening, Uncle Mark being at Albright's'. He was resolving not to return to his office after supper—at least not for a good while. That Snyder car stood directly in front of his office. By watching it, one might know exactly what time the little beauty from the old Yates place got back from Sando. That was what Latham did not propose to know. Idle and silly and futile as he was he could still hold himself above the baseness of spying upon her.

THERE was always company on the hotel veranda after supper, from which one had a splendid view of the sunset across the bay. Always one could find somebody there to chatter with. Latham remained and chattered. He could not help remarking that the last sun rays colored no little sail making homeward from the southwest. He went into the lounge, and challenged Harrison to a game of chess. The slippered landlord seldom refused a challenge to any game that he could play sitting down. Now and then Latham turned an eye from the chessboard to the clock over the hotel desk. This was a contest against time, on his part. He meant to stick there until the car in front of his office should be gone. A quarter past ten, "Yim Benson fum Minnesota"—whom the doctor had not seen since directly after supper—pulled up a chair to watch the game. Inevitably, in the intervals at the end of the game, he favored them with some conversation.

"That's a game, now, I always thought I'd like to learn. Captain Tim Mahoney—he's chief of detectives in Pittsburgh; the best policeman to catch a crook in the United States. Everybody says so. If anybody tells you he ain't, it's because the fellah that's telling you thinks he's the best policeman himself. He oughta be head of the police force long ago. Everybody in Pittsburgh says it; but that takes political pull and Tim, he just sticks to his business. He's been a neighbor of mine ever since I built my house out on Fairview avenue. Often times we play sociable game of poker—me and Tim and Charley Miller and Ed Munson, or some of the boys. Cap Tim Mahoney is a crackerjack chess player. Hundred times he'd said he's going to learn me that game. But we never get around to it."

"Why, I'll show you how any time, Yim," Harrison assured him. The chattering went on for some time.

Half-past ten. She must have gone home by that time. Latham declined another game. On the veranda he found Mr. Donahue smoking a cigar and contemplating a starry view of the bay. Latham spoke a word to him and went down the street—and felt a foolish relief when he saw that the curb in front of his office was empty. She had got the car and gone home. There was no telling how early. But what business of his was that?

Going over to breakfast next morning, he found Uncle Mark at the little table for two under the window, already half through the morning meal, looking seedy and dejected. He had been up all night at Albrights'. Jimmy died about daylight; but there were still some things to be done in the afflicted house, so it was seven o'clock, he said, when he finally got back to town. He ran his car into the garage, stepped into the house to wash his face and hands, and came to the hotel for breakfast. He confessed, with an absent sigh for Jimmy, that he was "dog tired." But this was Saturday, the one busy day in the week, when the toy bank always remained open longer than usual. He'd have to stick to the ship through the day—then home, and to bed immediately after supper.

Presently, in fact, Main street presented its usual, once a week scene of animation. Automobiles in various stages of dilapidation were parked along the curb. There were even some horse drawn vehicles and one cart dragged by a spiritless mule. For once in the week business was brisk all up and down the thoroughfare. Uncle Mark did not come to the hotel for his midday meal, but dined at his desk on sandwiches and a glass of milk. He did not come to supper, either, but Latham thought nothing of that, supposing that, as soon as the bank was closed, the weary man had gone home and to bed.

When he entered the dining room on Sunday morning, Donahue and Yim Benson were engaged with grapefruit at a table for two under a window, but the next table, reserved for himself and Uncle Mark, was empty. He finished the meal alone, and went out on the veranda to smoke an after breakfast pipe. He was not exactly waiting for his uncle to appear; but he was feeling the absence of a beloved person, because they had fallen into the habit of loafing and visiting a while here on the veranda Sunday mornings. Of course, Uncle Mark should have made up his arrears of sleep by this time.

MAYBE the old boy was indisposed. The doctor would be making one of his too rare professional calls about half-past ten. Until that time there was nothing in particular to do. He hopped up and set out for the banker's house, which was at the end of an east and west street. For three blocks from Main street there were small frame houses, mostly of one story, with shrubbery and trees. The next block was vacant except for a little shrub embowered brown bungalow on the farther corner. Here the banker lived, all alone, taking his meals at the hotel. The front door was open.

Latham stepped in, and sang out, "Hello!"

A girl of fifteen or sixteen looked out of a bedroom door down the hall, and smiled at sight of him: "O, it's you, Dr. Latham!" She held a pillow case in her hand. "Mr. Egan isn't here."

This was Susan Pearsoll, who lived with her parents in the last little house in the next block toward town, so the Pearsolls were Egan's nearest neighbors. Ever since the banker set up his bachelor home here, Mrs. Pearsoll or her daughter kept house for him, one or the other coming over every forenoon to make the bed, sweep, and dust, and put things to rights generally. They had a key, but seldom used it, as Egan commonly left the door unlocked.

"He must have gone out before daylight," Susan added. "He left the light burning. He wouldn't have needed a light to dress by a morning like this."

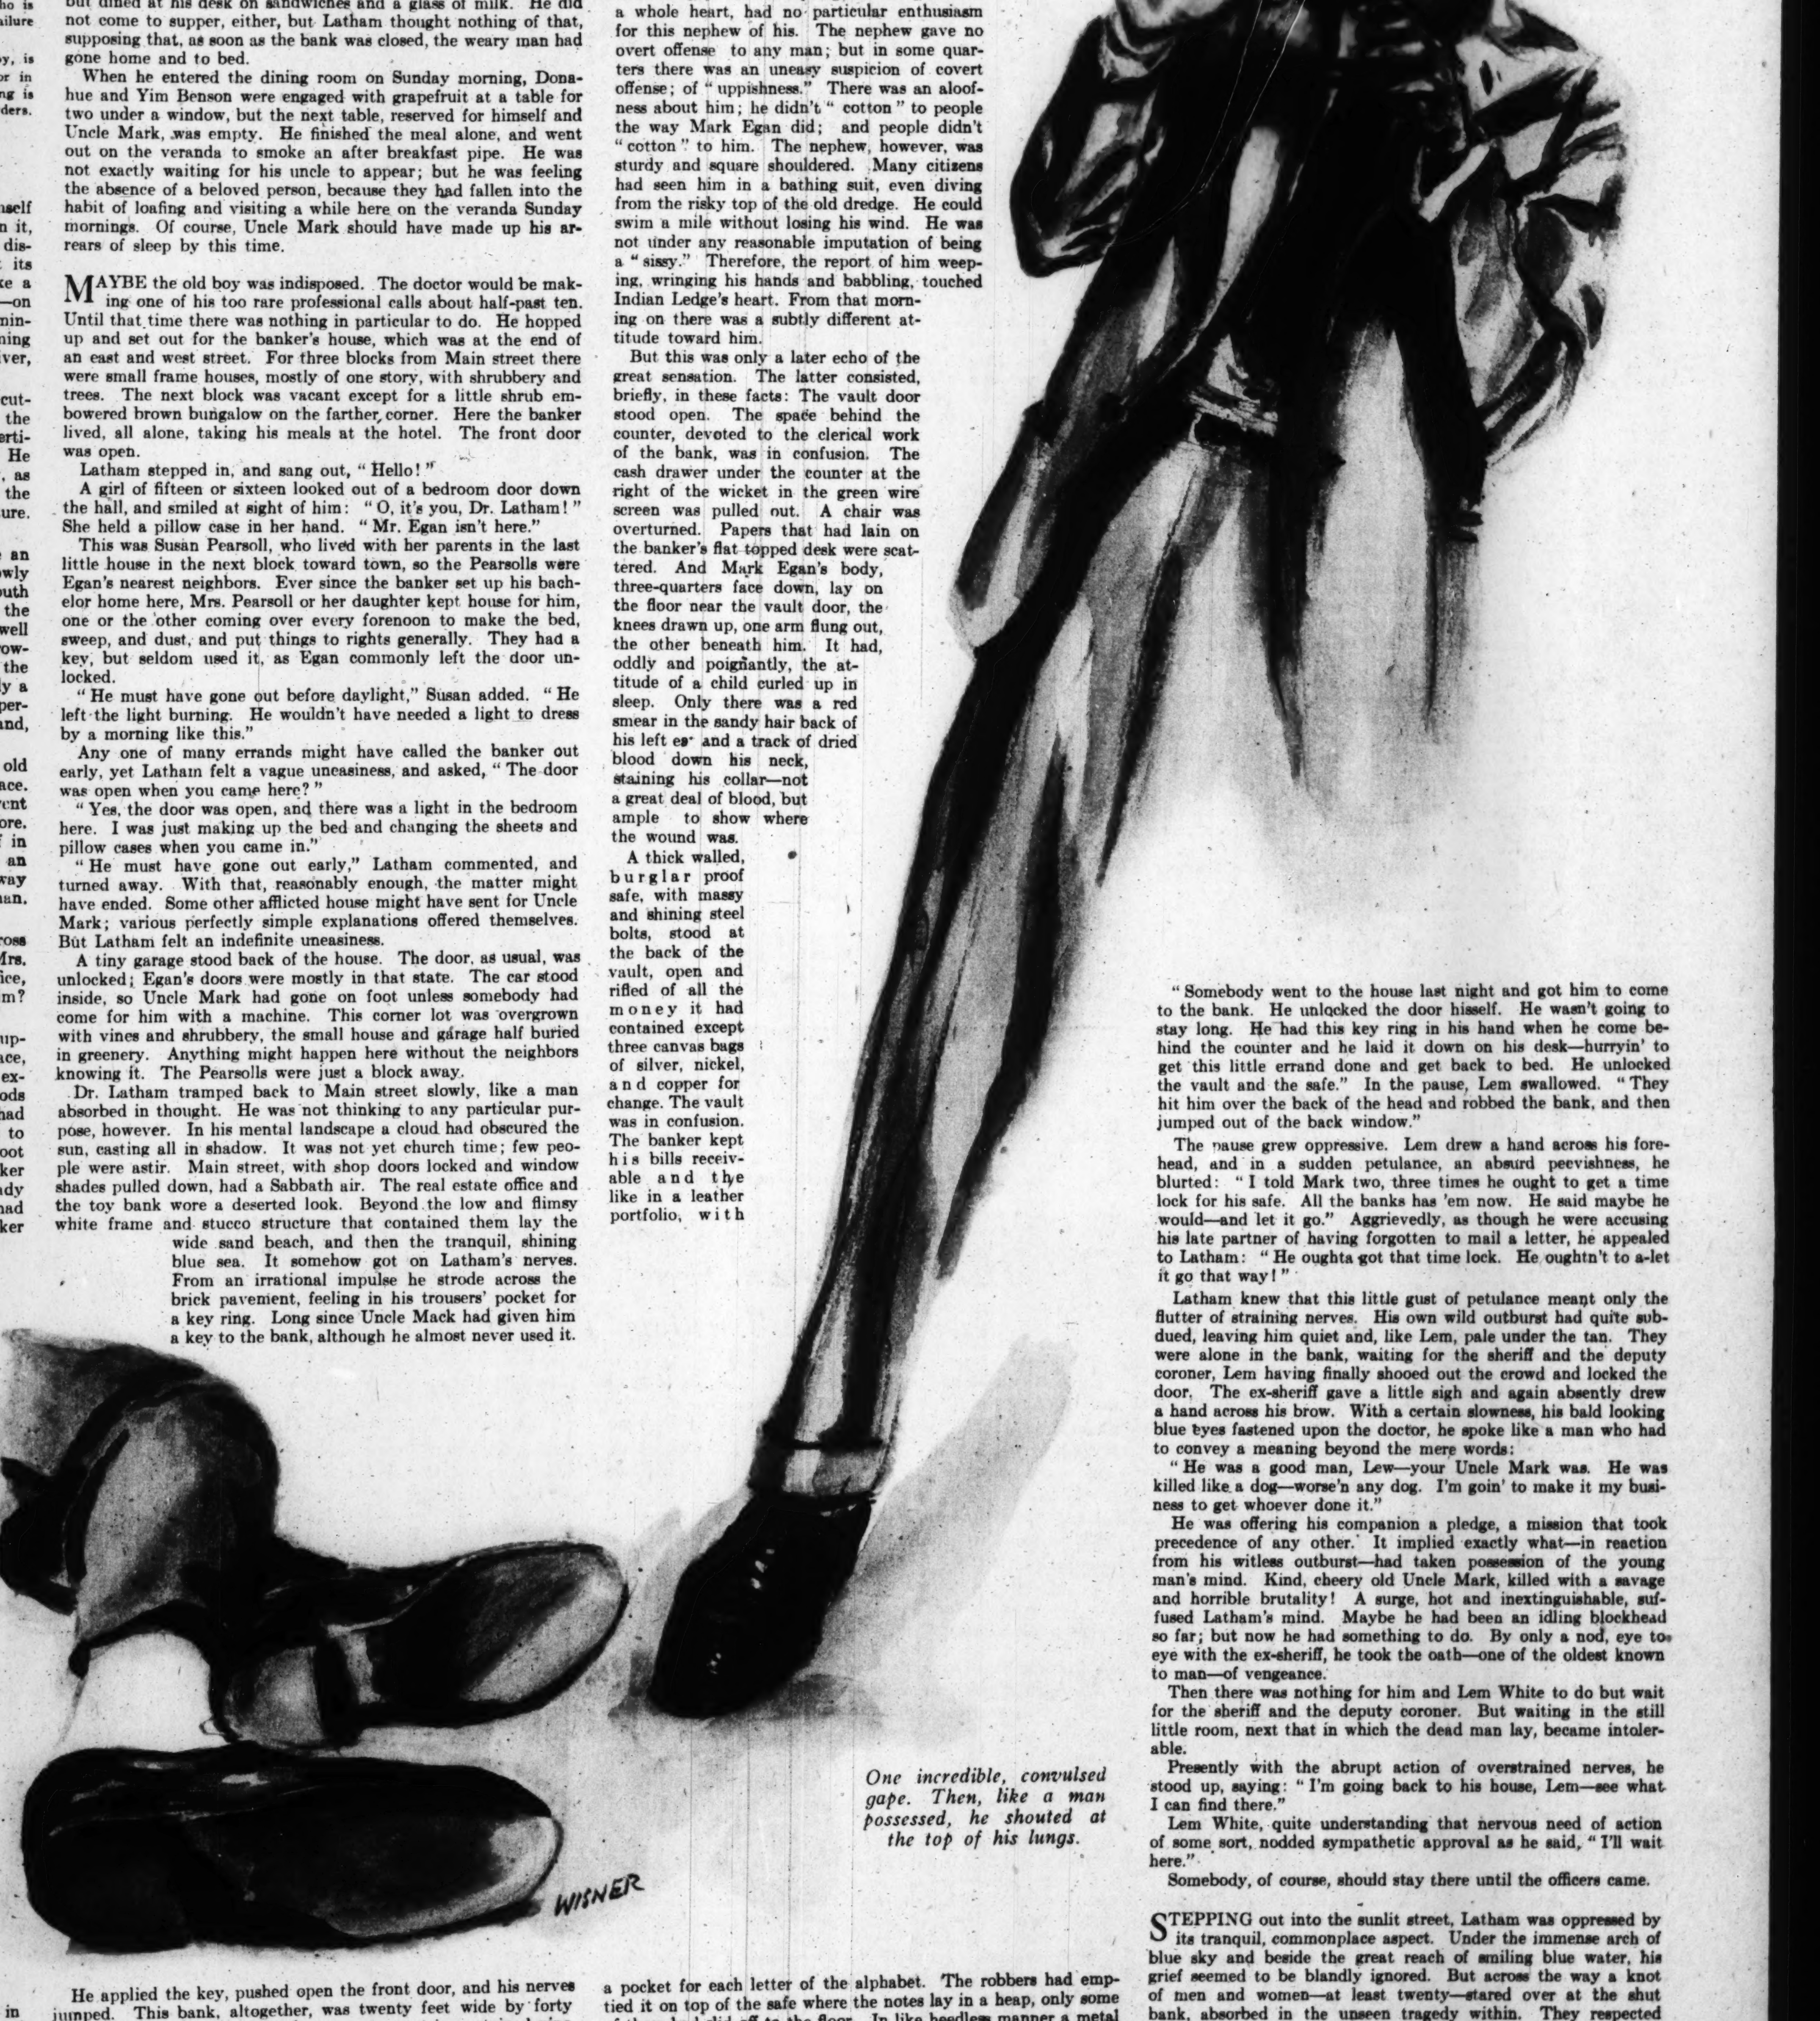
Any one of many errands might have called the banker out early, yet Latham felt a vague uneasiness, and asked, "The door was open when you came here?"

"Yes, the door was open, and there was a light in the bedroom here. I was just making up the bed and changing the sheets and pillow cases when you came in."

"He must have gone out early," Latham commented, and turned away. With that, reasonably enough, the matter might have ended. Some other afflicted house might have sent for Uncle Mark; various perfectly simple explanations offered themselves. But Latham felt an indefinite uneasiness.

A tiny garage stood back of the house. The door, as usual, was unlocked; Egan's doors were mostly in that state. The car stood inside, so Uncle Mark had gone on foot unless somebody had come for him with a machine. This corner lot was overgrown with vines and shrubbery, the small house and garage half buried in greenery. Anything might happen here without the neighbors knowing it. The Pearsolls were just a block away.

Dr. Latham tramped back to Main street slowly, like a man absorbed in thought. He was not thinking to any particular purpose, however. In his mental landscape a cloud had obscured the sun, casting all in shadow. It was not yet church time; few people were astir. Main street, with shop doors locked and window shades pulled down, had a Sabbath air. The real estate office and the toy bank wore a deserted look. Beyond the low and flimsy white frame and stucco structure that contained them lay the wide sand beach, and then the tranquil, shining blue sea. It somehow got on Latham's nerves. From an irrational impulse he strode across the brick pavement, feeling in his trousers' pocket for a key ring. Long since Uncle Mack had given him a key to the bank, although he almost never used it.



One incredible, convulsed gape. Then, like a man possessed, he shouted at the top of his lungs.

He applied the key, pushed open the front door, and his nerves jumped. This bank, altogether, was twenty feet wide by forty deep. A dozen feet from the door, as one went in, a stained pine counter surmounted by a green wire screen cut the room in two. A gate in one end of the counter gave access to the space behind it. A parlor, for private consultations, took up about ten feet at the rear. There was a brick vault, supposedly fireproof, in the southwest corner, shortening the parlor by that much. The door to this vault stood wide open.

Latham ran forward to the counter, gaping over into the space between it and the parlor and the vault—one incredible, convulsed gape. Then, like a man possessed, he shouted at the top of his lungs, whirled, and ran into the street shouting, waving his arms. Just what he shouted nobody knew, but the frantic sound of it filled the street.

An instant before the Sunday morning thoroughfare had seemed almost empty, lapped in tranquillity. The next instant various people were excitedly aware of a man on the sidewalk in front of the bank, waving his arms and yelling insanely. Like circles spreading in water where a stone is dropped, but more swiftly, waves of it spread up and down the street and to right and left. Men were running. Women stood in their tracks with wide eyes and lips apart. Tousle headed young Charley Teller, proprietor of the jitney, was the first man to reach Latham, who fell upon him, clutching his shoulder. The doctor's face was distorted. Tears rained down his cheeks.

He babbled: "He's killed! The bank's robbed! Murdered!"

Two others were close behind the jitney owner. Still clutching Charley's shoulder, Latham babbled to them: "Killed! Robbed!" he followed them into the bank, wringing his hands and weeping, his face distorted grotesquely.

And that, in itself, made a little sensation nested far within the great sensation. For Indian Ledge, while accepting Mark Egan with a whole heart, had no particular enthusiasm for this nephew of his. The nephew gave no overt offense to any man; but in some quarters there was an uneasy suspicion of covert offense; of "uppishness." There was an aloofness about him; he didn't "cotton" to people the way Mark Egan did; and people didn't "cotton" to him. The nephew, however, was sturdy and square shouldered. Many citizens had seen him in a bathing suit, even diving from the risky top of the old dredge. He could swim a mile without losing his wind. He was not under any reasonable imputation of being a "sissy." Therefore, the report of him weeping, wringing his hands and babbling, touched Indian Ledge's heart. From that morning on there was a subtly different attitude toward him.

But this was only a later echo of the great sensation. The latter consisted, briefly, in these facts: The vault door stood open. The space behind the counter, devoted to the clerical work of the bank, was in confusion. The cash drawer under the counter at the right of the wicket in the green wire screen was pulled out. A chair was overturned. Papers that had lain on the banker's flat topped desk were scattered. And Mark Egan's body, three-quarters face down, lay on the floor near the vault door, the knees drawn up, one arm flung out, the other beneath him. It had, oddly and poignantly, the attitude of a child curled up in sleep. Only there was a red smear in the sandy hair back of his left ear and a track of dried blood down his neck, staining his collar—not a great deal of blood, but ample to show where the wound was.

A thick walled, burglar proof safe, with massy and shining steel bolts, stood at the back of the vault, open and rifled of all the money it had contained except three canvas bags of silver, nickel, and copper for change. The vault was in confusion. The banker kept his bills receivable and the like in a leather portfolio, with a pocket for each letter of the alphabet. The robbers had emptied it on top of the safe where the notes lay in a heap, only some of them had slid off to the floor. In like heedless manner a metal letter filing case that stood in a front corner of the vault had been rummaged.

In the little parlor at the rear, three crumpled dollar bills lay on the floor. The window in the parlor was up three or four inches. This rear window looked out on a wide beach and the sea. On summer afternoons the western sun, reinforced by reflection from the white sand, beat upon it intolerably. Therefore a hedge of bamboo had been set along the rear of the building. This kept off the western sun; also it hid the back windows. Robbers could have climbed out that way in broad daylight with only, perhaps, one chance in fifty of being seen.

The bank had no side or back door. But for the convenience of the partners a door in this little parlor at the rear communicated with the similar private room as the back of White & Egan's real estate office. The front door of the bank was equipped with a spring lock. The searchers found Egan's key ring, not in his pocket, but on the floor beside his desk. That, of course, was significant.

Lem White, sitting in the bank parlor. held the key ring in the open palm of his weathered hand. His hat was pushed to the back of his head, and his long, homely face, innocent of beard as a boy's, was pale under layers of tan. His faintly marked eyebrows drew together, not in irritation of the nerves, but as though pain obscurely racked his head. He spoke deliberately.

"Somebody went to the house last night and got him to come to the bank. He unlocked the door hisself. He wasn't going to stay long. He had this key ring in his hand when he come behind the counter and he laid it down on his desk—hurryin' to get this little errand done and get back to bed. He unlocked the vault and the safe." In the pause, Lem swallowed. "They hit him over the back of the head and robbed the bank, and then jumped out of the back window."

The pause grew oppressive. Lem drew a hand across his forehead, and in a sudden petulance, an absurd peevishness, he blurted: "I told Mark two, three times he ought to get a time lock for his safe. All the banks has 'em now. He said maybe he would—and let it go." Aggrievedly, as though he were accusing his late partner of having forgotten to mail a letter, he appealed to Latham: "He oughta got that time lock. He oughtn't to a-let it go that way!"

Latham knew that this little gust of petulance meant only the flutter of straining nerves. His own wild outburst had quite subdued, leaving him quiet and, like Lem, pale under the tan. They were alone in the bank, waiting for the sheriff and the deputy coroner, Lem having finally shooed out the crowd and locked the door. The ex-sheriff gave a little sigh and again absently drew a hand across his brow. With a certain slowness, his bald looking blue eyes fastened upon the doctor, he spoke like a man who had to convey a meaning beyond the mere words:

"He was a good man, Lew—your Uncle Mark was. He was killed like a dog—worse'n any dog. I'm goin' to make it my business to get whoever done it."

He was offering his companion a pledge, a mission that took precedence of any other. It implied exactly what—in reaction from his witless outburst—had taken possession of the young man's mind. Kind, cheery old Uncle Mark, killed with a savage and horrible brutality! A surge, hot and inextinguishable, suffused Latham's mind. Maybe he had been an idling blockhead so far; but now he had something to do. By only a nod, eye to eye with the ex-sheriff, he took the oath—one of the oldest known to man—of vengeance.

Then there was nothing for him and Lem White to do but wait for the sheriff and the deputy coroner. But waiting in the still little room, next that in which the dead man lay, became intolerable.

Presently with the abrupt action of overstrained nerves, he stood up, saying: "I'm going back to his house, Lem—see what I can find there."

Lem White, quite understanding that nervous need of action of some sort, nodded sympathetic approval as he said, "I'll wait here."

Somebody, of course, should stay there until the officers came.

STEPPING out into the sunlit street, Latham was oppressed by its tranquil, commonplace aspect. Under the immense arch of blue sky and beside the great reach of smiling blue water, his grief seemed to be blandly ignored. But across the way a knot of men and women—at least twenty—stared over at the shut bank, absorbed in the unseen tragedy within. They respected Latham's feelings, however, forbearing to interrupt him as he stalked diagonally across the brick pavement. Elsewhere on the way people regarded him with an awe hushed curiosity. By this time the whole town must know what had happened. He followed Date street out to his uncle's small, isolated dwelling, whose silent interior wrung his heart afresh.

Such a little toy house—and a little toy bank; such an inconspicuous, busy, kindly man, unenvying and unenvied. Wasn't there prey enough in the world but that they must hunt him out in his warm hearted obscurity and murder him with incredible brutality? He had hardly realized how fond he was of good old Uncle Mark. The crime was so utterly abhorrent—luring him down to the bank on a friendly errand and killing him in cold blood! The pale young doctor felt that fiery and suffocating surge bursting his heart; his face twisted and he clinched his hands till the nails bit into his palms. They couldn't do this and get away with it! If it took a lifetime he'd find the beasts and lay them by the heels. A moment later, feeling slightly dizzy, he pushed his hat up from his brow, absently, and wiped the perspiration. He had not supposed there was so much primitive passion in him. He must find a clew if the house contained one.

Mrs. Pearsoll and her daughter kept the little place—five small rooms and a bath, all on one floor—spic and span from end to end. The chairs in the living room were primly placed against the wall. The small library table stood exactly in the middle of the room.

And this table brought back a vivid memory of the dead banker. Upon it, all neatly placed by Susan Pearsoll, lay some bright colored pamphlets, a pad of writing paper, two lead pencils exactly side by side and a thin sheaf of manuscript, pencil written. Uncle Mark—an irrepressible boomer by nature—had taken to heart a project of getting out a fine illustrated pamphlet to advertise Indian Ledge. Most of the town's business men had been persuaded to subscribe something toward the cost; but Egan had undertaken the management and was writing the copy himself—with more anxious debates, erasures and revisions than went into the composition of many much more pretentious literary efforts.

He had arranged with a St. Petersburg establishment to do the printing, and Latham recalled his saying—only two or three days ago—that he was waiting for the St. Petersburg plant to submit some colored sketches for the illustrations. The banker had been as eager over this pamphlet as a young author over a first novel—impatient to get it out as soon as possible, moiling over the copy of evenings at home.

But this neat arrangement was the work of Susan Pearsoll. The whole room showed her touch. The very rug had a speckless Sunday air. The fireplace was swept out so clean that one might have eaten dinner not only on the red tile hearth but on the yellow firebricks. Even a burned match would have stood out with the conspicuousness of an ink blot on white paper. Certainly there was nothing here. Latham scrutinized hall, dining room, kitchen, bath, two tiny bedrooms. They were equally barren. But Susan Pearsoll had been over the house that morning. She might have seen something.

THE Pearsolls—father and mother just leaving for church—received him with a grave sympathy. Susan's red eyes showed in what regard she held the dead banker. In talking to Latham her lips trembled and her eyes overran again. That comforted him. But in cleaning up the house Susan had seen something.

Two cigaret stubs had lain in the grate, where there had not been a fire, or a bit of ashes, for weeks. She had noticed them the minute she came into the living room. One of them was burned down almost to the gold tip on the end. The other one had a gold tip, too; but it was burned hardly half way down and there was a blue trade mark, or monogram, or something like that, on the white paper. She had noticed that as she swept them out of the grate—gold tips and this blue stamp, or printing, on one. Also, there was a burned match in the grate—only one, no other burned match anywhere about. At the time she had thought little about these objects, supposing that Mr. Egan had entertained cigaret smoking callers.

Yes, she thought she might be able to find those stubs now. There was no garbage can at Mr. Egan's, as no cooking was done there. Usually she emptied the contents of her dust pan into the weeds back of Mr. Egan's lot. Eager to help, she led the way across the vacant, weed grown block between her house and the banker's. After two or three minutes' search Latham held in his palm a half smoked cigaret with a gold tip and a blue trade mark stamped on the white paper.

"I'd rather you didn't mention this to any one, Susan," he said gravely. "It may be important, you know, and to mention it might put the scoundrels on their guard."

She agreed breathlessly, her brown, red rimmed eyes round with earnestness: "I won't say a word. If there's anything I can do, doctor——" her lips trembled.

Up to that morning he had been aware only that a certain sturdy, round faced, brown eyed girl of fifteen or sixteen went by the name of Susan Pearsoll and "tidied up" Uncle Mark's house—a healthy, good natured young animal among indefinite numbers of the like. Now she became vividly individual to him, a woman heart who had loved his uncle.

Tramping townward an errant thought occurred to him, "Uncle Mark lived in a much finer way than I ever can."

But that cigaret stub, tenderly deposited in his coat pocket, looked as though there had been two callers some time in the night. They had roused the banker and waited in the living room while he dressed, and lighted cigarets—both from the same match. There were no ash trays in Uncle Mark's house, no other handy receptacles for matches and ashes. They had tossed the stubs into the empty grate. That article in his pocket, with its gold tip and blue trade mark, might be identified in Indian Ledge, where gold tips were rare.

He was not empty handed. Date street came in just south of the hotel, and he struck diagonally across to the locked and curtained bank. Before reaching its front door he had a view of the long, narrow pier, like a plank sidewalk suspended above the water; and that yielded an indefinable shock. A woman in a white dress and white cloth hat, holding a gayly colored parasol, stood at the plank railing, about a third of the way down the pier, looking into the sea beneath her—apparently watching the myriad tiny fish that swarmed, streamed and darted in the shallow water. He had never seen that hat, dress or parasol before; but he would fairly have sworn it was the girl from Little Bayou. He glanced up and down the street, but Mrs. Snyder's second hand car was not in sight. What was she doing in town alone on Sunday forenoon?

He stepped up to the bank door and let himself in. Dr. Sassoon, who was a deputy coronor, had arrived in his absence. He and Lem were standing over the body. Indian Ledge's leading physician was well over sixty, short and pursy, with flabby chops. He dressed hardly better than Lem White. The faded diploma on his office walls was issued by a dubious medical college that had long since passed out of existence. Dr. Latham had often secretly laughed at the old chap. But Dr. Sassoon now lifted to the younger man a face so woebegone that it might have served as a mask of aged misery.

"This is terrible, Latham," he said, with an utter simplicity. He, too, had loved Uncle Mark; and his trite, simple words were somehow like taking the young man into his house.

"Terrible," the nephew muttered, with lowered eyes.

Dr. Sassoon sighed and rheumatically got down on his knees. "Give us a light here, Lem," he directed. Latham knelt on the other side, to take part in the gruesome task, while Lem White held an electric bulb over their heads, for drawn window shades dimmed the interior.

The body was completely rigid. There seemed, at this first examination, to be only one wound—a fierce blow behind the left ear, struck with some instrument both heavy and sharp. Presently, at Latham's suggestion, they felt through the dead man's pockets, for he might have been called to the bank by a message. But the pockets disclosed no message, or anything else significent.

"Look at his watch," Lem White suggested; for once, in his experience as a sheriff, a watch that stopped at nine o'clock when it was immersed in water—along with its owner—had been an important clew. The watch was a gold hunting case timepiece, so old that the scrolls had been worn indistinct. It was still running, so there was no clew to be had from it, and Latham laid it in a drawer of the desk.

There was then a brisk rapping on the front door. Lem stepped over and admitted Ed Worrel, the sheriff, and a deputy whom he had picked up on the way over. It was the deputy, Bassett by name, whom Lathtam noticed more particularly—an undersized, sinewy, whipcord sort of man, with a ragged red mustache and a cast in his left eye. Latham thought of a weasel and regarded the man with approval. The sheriff had the general aspect of an intelligent and prsperous merchant or lawyer.

It all had a look of familiarity, as though he were used to cuddling beside her.

They proceeded to a more careful examination of the premises. Disorder everywhere showed that it had been ransacked; even the drawers in the banker's desk had been rummaged and only partly shut again. A pile of pasteboard boxes, some containing stationery, some empty, stood under the counter. The robbers had even scattered these boxes, as though suspecting that something valuable might be hidden behind or among them. In the vault spilled papers lay on the cement floor. Beneath them were three small red stains.

Blood, one would have said; but two quart bottles of ink, from which the smaller ones in daily use were filled, stood on a shelf here, one of them holding black ink, another red. Those stains on the floor might be red ink, spilled in filling a small bottle from a large one. Their careful examination of the bank yielded nothing beyond that; but Latham, at least, noticed that the body lay in an odd posture, the knees bent, the trunk twisted over so that the face was three-quarters to the floor, one arm underneath, the other flung out.

THE nephew had some casual acquaintance with his absent minded uncle's simple and haphazard system of bookkeeping. There was a ponderous ledger in which the accounts of depositors were posted—not every day, since Jimmy Albright left, but as often as the banker got around to it. Then there was a small book, with leaves of cheap yellow paper, in which memoranda were entered with a lead pencil. Latham had seen his uncle count up the cash in the bank and enter the various items which composed it, together with the total, in this cheap memorandum book. It lay in the vault now, on the same shelf with the ledgers. The last count of cash was two days old. It showed eighteen hundred and seventeen dollars and thirty-four cents on hand.

Probably that was sufficient for the business of this little institution at this season, when the citrus crop, which constituted the most important commercial product of the neighborhood, had been mostly shipped. But the robbers had left three bags of change, and dropped three dollar bills in the back room. For something less than eighteen hundred dollars, then, his uncle had been brutally murdered.

But Lem White recalled that Mark had mentioned Mrs. Snyder's ten thousand dollars in Liberty bonds to him. She hadn't wanted the money immediately, and Lem was quite sure, from Egan's mentioning, that he had kept the bonds in his safe for the present. They were not there now.

Dr. Sassoon remained during this search of the premises. The minds of all the men in the bank—but especially of the natives—had turned inquiringly in the direction of the weather beaten, ramshackle dwelling on Crab island. If any crime of violence had been committed in Indian Ledge, and there was no evidence to the contrary, the natives would probably have thought first of the Judds, particularly of Jed Judd. Their name had not been mentioned; but the hearers knew whom Dr. Sassoon meant when—the search being finished and the searchers practically empty handed—he broke the silence by saying, with a certain grim self-reproach:

"We ought to have cleaned that nest out long ago."

"You're right!" said Lem White promptly. "We're to blame."

Sheriff Worrel made a frank confession: "I've thought of it more than once. But nobody started anything; nothing in particular came up to act on. I take a drink myself now and then. We're always letting things slide like that till it's too late."

"That's so," said Lem. "I'm just as much to blame as you are. Everybody's to blame."

The Judds bore such a reputation that no one would have been particularly surprised to hear any crime, even murder, charged against them. Everybody knew that they were, at least, bootleggers. But ruling class sentiment at Indian Ledge was quite indulgent to bootlegging. So long as no specific crime was charged to the Judds in a formal manner, nobody cared to inquire too closely into their doubtful activities.

But Latham observed: "Seems to me out of the question that Uncle Mark would have come down here to the bank at night and opened the safe for Jed Judd or his brother."

That did seem out of the question. Yet here was indubitable evidence that no violence had been done to the bank door, the vault door, or the safe. Beyond question Egan himself had unlocked the bank, the vault, and the safe. Had he been coerced into doing it, with a revolver at his ribs?

THE KILLER A Story from Real Life

Cattle Rustlers! Laughing Charley, the Bashful Hero; Huspeth, the Dangerous Villain; Pretty Jenny Nunnelly; an Attempted Kidnaping---a Thrilling Tale of the Ranch Country

WHEN Laughing Charley first sidled into the Cromwell house he wasn't known by that name. Nor by any other. He wore a gun, but you'd never have taken him to be a gun fighter. And as for being a killer, you'd sooner have accused the canary of eating the cat.

He was too young. His blue eyes were too honest and his blonde hair too straggled. And he was altogether too self-consciously shy. He edged up to Baldy Jenkins, one of the barkeeps.

"Er—er—say," he said, with the giggle that afterward became famous, "d'you know any one 'round here who's got a game right leg 'n' straddles a big roan hoss?"

"Sure," said Baldy, looking the youth over. "Clem Huspeth's the feller. Why?"

Half a dozen men pricked up their ears at the name.

"Well, I jest wanted t' know. Where c'n I find him?"

"He's probably out to Old Man Nunnelly's. It's the Three J ranch, fourteen miles west on the Dead Indian road. He's courtin' Jenny Nunnelly."

"And rustlin' the old man's cows," some one said in an undertone. There was a general snickering at the remark.

"Heh! heh!" cackled Charley shrilly. "I wouldn't be s'prised if he was doin' jest that."

The effect was electric. Evidently such outright remarks were dangerous. The cluster of men bristled threateningly. But Baldy took charge.

"What d' you mean, son?" he asked. "I reckon you'd better go home and learn your A B C's of perlite speech. Yo're li'ble to find yerself Huspeth's next customer. Don't y' know he's a killer?"

Charley, grinning like a bashful boy embarrassed by too much "company," sidled out the door without answering.

"Aw, he's jest a damn fool kid," some one in the crowd said, and the matter was dropped.

CHARLEY rode out to Nunnelly's, but didn't get there until midafternoon, long after Huspeth had left.

"Er—er—I'm lookin' fer a feller name of Huspeth," giggled Charley to Jenny Nunnelly when she came out to see who had ridden up. That was before he looked closely at her. She failed to answer as they stood gazing into each other's eyes.

"Did you ever fall in love before?" he asked with boyish candor.

"No," she replied, and blushed.

"Neither did I." And his laugh rose to the surface joyously.

It was two hours before the name of Huspeth came up again. Old man Nunnelly came in and Charley explained his errand.

"This feller's a hoss beater 'nd maybe a lot worse," he said. "He rides a big roan. I got that from his trail and some brush he went through. His hoss bucked three times in a twenty-four mile ride. No hoss does that on a long ride less'n he's quirted or roweled. I'm ridin' fer the Anchor Q.

"They's some calves and brandin' fires I found over there," he continued, "near the trail of five men. I picked his trail out 'nd follered it into town. I'd sure like to have talk with him about it."

"I think you've hit it, son," agreed Nunnelly bitterly, "but be keerful. He's a killer, and a mean one. I can't even keep him away from my own house."

"You missed much stock?"

"Yes. They're stealin' right under my nose. I expect to find a thousand head less in my roundup this year than last. But what c'n an honest man do? If I kill him with a rifle it's murder. And he'd kill me in a gun play. Him 'nd his men've killed four cattlemen in two years. And we ain't had a hangin' since 3 year olds was calves."

He spoke the last with an earnest sigh of longing.

"Sorta looks like some one ought to tend to him, don't it?" giggled Charley. "Well, it's too late now to prove he was at the Anchor Q. But—you never c'n tell what'll happen. I'll be droppin' 'round agin." And after a sentence or two to Jenny and a happy laugh he left.

AND drop 'round again he did, every second Sunday, which was accounted pulse stirring courting in that territory of vast distances. One result was the countryside's delighted whispering that he was "stealing" Huspeth's girl, for Jenny wore her heart on her sleeve.

Huspeth openly raged on one or two occasions, but he and Charley failed to meet. And then Huspeth smiled, rather grimly, as though he had some secret solution to his courting plans. Events proved he had.

But Charley did more than drop 'round. He took the Anchor Q owner into his confidence, and thereafter spent the most of his time tending to Clem Huspeth. Which meant that he took many night rides and sometimes disappeared for days at a stretch. And he saw what was taking place.

Spring roundup was coming on. The rustlers, a band of thirty-five or forty men headed by Huspeth, were hurrying one huge final drive before their getaway and disappearance. The ranches were spread over a small empire. And before the owners were aware of what was happening large herds had disappeared.

Charley, by quiet scouting, had discovered their hiding place. It was Graveyard basin, a comparatively small valley of 40,000 acres a hundred miles to the south. It had its name because of the cattle that had died there, enticed by the heavy spring forage. But the only water was the Graveyard river, which dried up every year long before the summer heat. It fitted the rustlers' needs as though made for them.

It was not hard to understand the plan. A railroad within twenty miles. A quick shipment under Huspeth's brand, an early market, and the rustlers would have realized a veritable fortune.

THE climax was reached at the Cromwell house. It was a Saturday night, when punchers from miles around had come to town to spend their wages. A certain tension was in the air, for the shady citizens were there in force also, evidently to consolidate plans for their final drive. They were waiting Huspeth's arrival.

The house was well filled when Laughing Charley, self-conscious and bashful, entered. He seemed to be the signal for much laughter among Huspeth's followers.

Slim Cravath, Huspeth's chief lieutenant and killer, leered.

"Hear tell yo're goin' out to Nunnellv's tomorrow, kid," he jeered.

His followers guffawed heartily, as though a huge jest had been made, the point of which was secret.

"Heh, heh," giggled Charley. "Don't think I'll git to go." And he laughed his absurd, self-conscious laugh again as eyes were turned on him from all over the house.

"Reckon tendin' to you rustlers'll keep me busy," he said shrilly, and in the sudden silence that followed his falsetto giggle sounded eerie.

Men quickly moved away from him to avoid whatever bullets might come his way.

"They's eight or ten thousand head of cattle with every brand in the state down in Graveyard basin. Mebbe you 'n' Clem Huspeth c'n tell how they got there."

His laugh was cut short this time by Cravath.

"I'll give you ten seconds to eat that."

"I don't eat nothin' I tell a rustler."

A quick movement by both men, a flash, and a deafening roar. Cravath stumbled and fell, his nerveless hand clutching the revolver that was hardly out of its holster.

"Heh, heh," giggled Charley, nervously. "I've killed a sight of snakes, but this is the first two legged one."

He held the astounded group in front of him covered. A dozen men came to his aid, guns out.

"You fellers better turn 'round while we perform the painless operation o' takin' yer toys away from you," he giggled to the rustlers.

There was no opposition.

"Now," he said, as they faced him again, "where's Huspeth?"

"On his way to Nunnelly's," growled one. "He was to go there from his ranch this evenin'."

Immediately the plan became clear. Jenny Nunnelly was to be part of the steal. Charley left the rustlers in the hands of the other punchers. He dashed out the door and flung himself on his horse, heading toward Nunnelly's.

IT was a five hour ride from Huspeth's ranch to Nunnelly's, which might or might not mean that he would be too late. It was all according to what time Huspeth had left the ranch. And there would be no one on the ranch except the old man, the cook, and Jenny. The boys were all in town.

Charley urged his horse on at a killing pace, a curse on his lips and a prayer in his heart. When he was half a mile from the ranch house the horse could barely trot. It was lathered from head to foot and sobbing for breath. When he was within a hundred yards of the house a dog barked and came out to investigate. But with thanksgiving in his heart Charley saw that there was a light and no sign of trouble. No saddled horses were visible.

He approached cautiously. And then as he came nearer he could see Jenny sitting near a table sewing, unaware of any danger. At that moment he heard hoofbeats of two horses cantering toward the house.

Charley slipped around toward the back, arriving at the rear door at the same moment the riders dismounted at the front. Huspeth and his companion entered the house without knocking, as was the custom, going on into the room where Jenny and her father were.

Huspeth was a man of 40 years or so, lean and with a drooping mustache that accentuated the cold cruelty written in his face. His companion was Red Thurman, of evil history, fit follower to such a master.

"Well, Jenny," Huspeth began abruptly, "are you ready to go?"

"Go where?" asked the astonished girl, stepping back.

Nunnelly was about to speak, but Huspeth waved him aside.

"Go with me. Yo're the only one has any sayso, except me. And you might as well go peaceably as any other way."

CHARLEY broke into the tableau at that moment, entering from the kitchen.

"I dunno 'bout that," he giggled. "I might have somethin' to say myself."

"Kid, you'd better take that funny laugh o' your'n home before it gets hurt."

Huspeth spoke with scorn, but both his own hand and Thurman's crept toward their revolvers.

"Slim Cravath's dead," giggled the kid irrelevantly. "He was doin' jest what yo're doin'—making a move fer his gun."

Huspeth's hand stopped—not from fear but from curiosity.

"Who killed him?'

"Me." Once more the Kid's senseless laugh bubbled forth. "I reckon you're thievin's all gone to pot, Huspeth. The last I saw they was herdin' all your boys together."

All the time Charley looked Huspeth coolly in the eye, the three others staring helplessly at the scene.

"O, Charley," burst from Jenny's agonized lips. "He'll kill you"

"Heh, heh," Charley laughed, as he stared into Huspeth's eyes. "I don't reckon he will. If he knows what's good for him he'll back right out the way he come in."

"The hell I will!" screeched Huspeth, and both he and Thurman drew.

TWO shots boomed in the little room in quick succession, followed after a moment by a third. The third shot was from Thurman's gun as his fingers clutched it convulsively. The other two shots were Charley's. By a trick as of legerdemain he had drawn and shot both men before either had freed his gun from its holster.

Jenny and her father stood paralyzed with horror and astonishment.

Charley looked at her miserably. "I couldn't help it, sweetheart," he said, and for once there wasn't the faintest bit of laughter in his voice or eyes.

"They've got a lot of your father's and other people's cattle down in Graveyard basin. They was figger'n' on shippin' this week and leavin'. And Huspeth prob'ly would've killed your father. I had to, don't you see?"

She smiled wanly.

"That wasn't the trouble, Charley," she said, quietly. "I thought he would kill you."

"Shucks, no," laughed Charley with his old time giggle. "I been practicin' shootin' snakes 'nd ground squirrels from the hip since I was 12 years old. And they ain't no man quicker on the draw than a ground squirrel is on divin' into his hole."
